The China-Japan War.

It seems that war has broken out between the Japanese and Chinese, and it may be a very interesting and destructive one. The point in dispute, or the pretext upon which war is about to ensue, relates to the little kingdom of Corea, lying between China and Sibera, and stretching out nearly to Japan. A rebellion was inaugurated there not long ago, because of the exactions of the monarchy, which are said to be such that the people are practically impoverished, but it would probably have been suppressed and forgotten if China and Japan had not made it an occasion of interference for the alleged purpose of protecting their own interests, but really with a view to prevent each other from getting control of the country or securing special advantages from it.

There has been a demand made by Japan for the adoption of a better system of Government in Corea, not only because such a change is due to the people, but because it is necessary to the security and success of business enterprises in which the Japanese are principally concerned. The King of Corea has refused and China upholds him in this course. It is probable that Japan is more selfish than philanthropic in her attempt to improve the condition of Corean affairs; but it is true at the same time that her project is on the side of civilization and against tyranny and corruption, and therefore she will be apt to have the sympathy of all enlightened nations. She has herself made wonderful progress in recent years, and gained the admiration of the world for practical wisdom and devotion to the interests of justice.

The Creamery Enterprise.

Why Not Establish One Here?

Mr. Thos. N. Faris hands the Progress the following letter on this subject which will be of interest to all of our readers:

A creamery is a paying institution in a community to those who take an interest in it. It is like a mill or store or any other kind of business. It takes the support of several persons to be a success. I have been in connection with creameries for seven years, and have always found them a good investment for the farmers and those owning stock (cows). The creamery at Oakdale was built and started the 16th of May, 1888, and has been running successfully for seven years. The first year paying to its patrons $14,000; to their hands, $700; for hauling, etc., $400; total, $15,100, and the creamery has been gaining more and more all the time till at present they receive about 60 to 70,000 lbs. of milk per week and are paying at present 70c. per hundred, which is an outlay of $490 per week, or $1,990 per month or $23,320 per year, which is a large amount of money to be given to 120 patrons. Of course this is a rough estimate but it is not too large.

"The Morse Creamery Co.," Morse, Kansas, is also another successful creamery. "The Co-Operative Creamery Co.," of Sparta, Ills. "The Three Mile Creamery Co." is a good one, having been in operation for seven months and never having received more than 2,000 lbs. per day, and have paid out over $4,500 to its 23 patrons and selling all butter to home consumers.

Perhaps you have seen and know as much about a creamery as I could tell you in a week, so will not say more only that the plan to go on is to take a subscription paper and get shares at $25 per share. Those who take stock give their notes or pay the money either, and money is borrowed to start on and the notes are held by the directors of creamery as collateral and a company note given for the money till the notes are collected.

If you think $2,000 or $2,500 can be raised let me hear from you and any information you may want about how or what to do if you will write me I will give the same if I can: if I cannot I can find out from others. Try it and see if you can make a success of the enterprise. Find out about how many shares you can dispose of among the farmers and then strike business men. The grocerymen take good hold of such things for they can buy butter fresh each morning, etc. Also find out how many cows in country of four miles radius, and let me hear from you and I will help you out by taking some stock in it.

Yours for success.

—The Rockport Democrat says that a city girl in writing to one of her country friends says: "It is a fond dream of mine to become a farmer's wife and meander with him down life's flowery pathway." Yes, that is a nice thing to dream about, says the Democrat, but when you have lived on a farm and followed this meandering business for a month or so, you will find a wide chasm between the dream and the reality. You will think about the time your husband meanders out and leaves you without wood, and you have to meander up and down the lane pulling splinters off the fence with which to cook dinner, and when you meander around in the wet clover in search of the cows you will find a dim perception that fond dreams do not always pan out 100 cents to the dollar, and that there are several meanderings in a farm life that are not listed in the dreaming category.

—The only town in which curfew is still rung is Fayetteville, N. C. Notwithstanding the abolition by statute in the sixteenth century of the custom of ringing the curfew in England, this American town has kept it up for nearly two centuries, or since it was first settled. The custom has here very nearly its ancient significance—ordering the people to put out the fires on the hearths and remain indoors for the night. Fayetteville has been the same quiet, peaceful village that it is now ever since the Revolutionary War, when for a brief season it was an active, bustling military town, the center of those operations which made the names of King's Mountain, Cowpens and Guilford Church historical. Every evening Curfew ushers in the night and bids farewell to the day that is done, and seldom are people seen on the streets after its sound has ceased. It has never missed a night during the last century, and there is no disposition to abolish it. It also has a town crier, but in this it is not alone, Columbia, S. C., keeping up that custom, which has fallen into disuse elsewhere.

—There is a disease among the cattle along the river bottoms in and about Paragon. The disease affects the eyes of cows and calves, and in its very incipiency is virulent and the animals are discovered in the pastures wandering about in an aimless manner, running against fences, stumps and obstructions of all sorts and kinds. On the farm of Joe Hodges, ex-Trustee of Ray township, there are several cows afflicted with the mysterious malady. Mr. Hodges said that the disease was a mystery, that there was no fore-runner of it and that the animals would be found in the pasture, in some out-of-the-way nook where they had wandered in attempting to come up at feeding time. The farmers of that vicinity are somewhat alarmed at the new disease that comes unheralded and with no premonition. There is no similar disease among the cattle of the county in other places and this peculiar malady is confined within the limits of Ray township. Whether it is contagious, as the "Pink-eye" and "Epizootic" that a few years ago raged among the horses is not known, but it is thought to be closely related to the "Pink eye."

—The habit of taking headache powders is increasing to an alarming extent. These powders, as their name indicates, are claimed by their manufacturers to be a positive and speedy cure for any form of headache. In many cases their chief ingredient is morphine, opium, cocaine or some other equally injurious drug having a tendency to deaden pain. The habit of taking them is easily formed, but almost impossible to shake off. Women usually commence taking them to relieve a raging headache, and, finding it successful, soon resort to the powder to alleviate any little pain or ache they may be subjected to, and finally, like the morphine or opium fiend, get into the habit of taking them regularly, imagining that they are in pain if they happen to miss their regular dose.

—The cry of "Hey Rube" in a circus is a very old one, and when it is called it always means business. There have been explanations of its origin, but nothing is really known about it. Every circus man recognizes it and is familiar with its significance, although not with its meaning. It comes from the canvassmen, and when it is raised every one of them springs to the front armed with anything he can lay his hands upon. It is a war cry from which there is no escape, and every man will fight if necessary to the death. When any of the men think they are being imposed upon and the opposing force is too strong for them, as a last resort they will make this cry. The result is generally an exceedingly bloody conflict. It was raised once by the white men against the negroes in the Davis show on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, and twenty or thirty negroes were thrown off the train while it was going forty miles an hour. A better class of men is being employed by circus managers as roustabouts, and fewer troubles occur each year. It will be but a short time comparatively until the cry of "Hey Rube" is heard no more, and its significance becomes a matter of history only.
