ONE SOLDIER SICK IN THOUSAND TROOPS

Reports to General Lewis Show That Percentage in Indiana Camp at Llano Grande.

GUARDING AGAINST DENGUE

More Hoosier Soldiers Applying for Discharge Than Any Other State Guard at Border.

[By W. H. Blodgett, Staff Correspondent of The Indianapolis News]

MERCEDES, Tex., August 9.—Brigadier-General E. M. Lewis, commanding-general of the Llano Grande camp, was well pleased when report was made to him yesterday that the sick list amounted to about one sick soldier in every 1,000 troops. This referred only to Indiana. It did not mean, however, that there are no sick at the camp, because that is not true. The one sick soldier in 1,000 troops meant that the soldiers' sickness was of such a character that if they were at home they would be under a doctor's care.

There are a large number of soldiers in the camp suffering from minor complaints, overeating, drinking too much cold stuff, heat sickness and some who brought their sickness with them. On the day the report was made to General Lewis there were three sick in the Indiana field artillery, and Captain Thompson said one of them would be on duty in a day or two. In the First regiment Major Foxworthy, chief surgeon, reported no one seriously sick. In the Second regiment Colonel Coulter reported two of his men as serious but not dangerous. In the Third regiment Colonel Aubrey Kuhlman, after consulting with Major Humphries, medical officer, reported none of his men seriously sick. The same ratio kept up in the signal corps and in the two ambulance companies.

Sick Reports Are Official.

There is no guess work about this; these are the official reports for the war department. "It don't look as if this was such a camp of sickness," was the only comment the commanding general would make.

"One of the ills that human flesh is heir to in this country is a fever called dengue. It is pronounced as if spelled dengay, with the "g" hard. Its common name is breakbone fever and though it never is fatal, the victim wishes sometimes that he might die. The fever begins with a chilling sensation and intense pains in the wrists and ankles and soon all other joints are affected. The pain, which is simply awful, is accompanied by a high fever. After two or three days, a rash breaks out and the fever subsides and the patient thinks he is well, until there is another attack of joint racking. Then the patient gets well. Usually the fever lasts about a week. It is contagious and a fellow may have it as many times as he has hairs in his head. Brigadier General Lewis is guarding against dengue as much as possible and hopes the camp will escape it. There is one case at Mercedes, a hardware merchant being the victim, but he will be kept in quarantine until he gets well.

Politicians Work Discharges.

At the office of the camp adjutant, Captain Cooper, the statement is made that there are many more soldiers applying for a discharge from service from Indiana than in any other state troops in camp at Llano Grande. There has been a good deal of delay in obtaining discharges for the Indiana soldiers, due to the fact that their applications have not been made out in the form required by the war department. A form that fitted the regulations was drawn up and this seems to have been sent broadcast through Indiana by some one at Indianapolis, because the applications filled out by relatives and dependents are coming in by the wholesale, and there is a grave suspicion that the Indiana politicians are getting busy.

General Lewis has no authority to grant furloughs, but he has telegraphed to the war department for that power in extreme cases while the applicant is waiting for his discharge papers. In one or two instances, the circumstances surrounding the applicant were such that when waiting for an answer from the war department, General Lewis granted the furlough and will take chances on squaring himself with the department afterward. It's only humanity to send a man to the bedside of his dying baby or wife, and General Lewis took the chance in such cases.

Purdue Soldiers Will Stick.

Only one man in Battery B has filed an application for discharge and he is a married man and his family is dependent on him. The battery is made up of students and instructors from Purdue university and the men declare they are ready to stick to the colors as long as their services are needed.

Mess Sergeant Anthony C. Killmel, Company A, First regiment, from Albion, declares Llano Grande camp is a joyous summer resort and a place of rest compared with other places he has visited. Killmel was with the United States land survey department on the edge of the Florida everglades when the call to the colors came. "Some of the fellows who are complaining about discomforts down here don't know what real roughing it is," said Sergeant Killmel. "We spent last winter in a marsh in Arkansas, and before that we were doing boundary work in Idaho. That was the extreme of rough life."

Corporal James Dilts, Company L, First regiment, from Winamac, has received a thirty-day furlough. His baby is sick and has been taken to a Chicago hospital for treatment.

F. W. West, formerly physical director of the Y. M. C. A. at Indianapolis, has been placed in charge of the Indiana Y. M. C. A. here. He is a competent man and has met several boys he once trained back in Indianapolis. The Indiana building is one of the most popular places in the camp.

Y. M. C. A. Building Is Popular.

"The folk back home can not realize the value of the Y. M. C. A. down here," Lieutenant-Colonel E. F. Branch, of the Second, declared. "Last Sunday I watched the crowds going in and out of the place and I visited it several times myself. On that day more than 250 letters were written by soldiers to their homes in that building alone, and I saw a picture there that affected me greatly," continued the lieutenant-colonel.

"A choir of soldiers was practicing in one end of the room and a crowd of soldiers was at the other end listening to them. The director said at the conclusion of one of the songs, 'That was very well done, but we can improve on it. If we had some one to play the organ, we could get along much nicer. Is there any of you who can play the organ?' and he turned to the crowd at the other end of the room. A young fellow, whose clothes showed hard wear and whose face was covered with a two-weeks' beard, came forward and said he could play. He sat down to the organ and played the hymns in a way I have never heard better in church and let me tell you," and the colonel's voice had a little catch in it, "that picture of those boys so far away from home singing hymns accompanied by that unkempt organist is one that I never shall forget."

Battery Has Vaudeville Team.

Battery A has a vaudeville team of its own and it has a vodivil (remember vodivil is for Battery A) that is just about as good as you can see at an Indianapolis theater. Last night, from the stage, the announcement was made that Battery A challenges the world in boxing, barring Jack Dillon and Jess Willard, and when it comes to wrestling the bars are down for all comers. "J. Sipe, of Indianapolis, sent us a set of boxing gloves," said Captain Gavin L. Payne, "and Sol Meyer sent us a dozen baseballs. We were mighty glad to know that our friends back home are not forgetting us."

There was a strike at Llano Grande yesterday. A lot of the Mexican laborers struck on Bill McIlwaine, the boss teamster, while he had them unloading lumber cars. Bill thought that twelve men to carry a two-by-four was a little too many. But the strike did not last long. Bill gave them ten minutes to go back to work and all except six soon were juggling boards, with seven minutes to spare. The other six went down the railroad track and off the reservation in double time. They know Bill has a nervous trigger finger.

The hospitality of Mexico was offered to a party from the Second regiment yesterday, but it was declined. Major Green and Captain Holland, of the medical department; Major Miller, of the third battalion; Lieutenant Cattlin, battalion adjutant, and Captain Green, the regimental adjutant, rode down to the Rio Grande. As they stood watching the swirling waters a Mexican appeared on the other side, made a ceremonious bow, and waved his sombrero toward a point farther down the stream where he indicated there was a ford. But the Indianians did not go across.

Man With One Eye Recruited.

A private with one of the companies of the Third regiment reported to Major Humphries, medical officer, for treatment of his left eye. Major Humphries, in making an examination, discovered that the right eye of the man was glass but so perfect an imitation that it could only be discovered by close examination. Wondering how a man with a glass eye could get by the examining officers at Ft. Harrison, the major looked up the records and found that he had been reported "20-20," that is, his sight was normal. The man was sent to the hospital to have his real eye treated and when it is well he will be discharged from the service.

Companies G, of Portland, and K, of Auburn, Third regiment, are receiving their new square tents.

Major Driesbach, of the First battalion, is the landscape gardener of the Third regiment. He is always finding something new in the floral or plant line with which to ornament the company street. A citizen of Mercedes told the major he would give him some flowers. The major sent two big army trucks and when they returned they were filled with about every plant and shrub that grows in this country.

McIvor Buys Ice Cream and Cake.

Captain McIvor treated the members of Battery B to ice cream and cake Sunday evening in commemoration of his birthday. The battery boys don't care how often the captain's birthday comes around.

While on a trip to Donna Corporal Caylor, of Battery A, bought a young billy goat. He brought his prize home and tied it in front of his tent. The goat was all right when the wind was was from the proper direction and when the battery men did not care to sleep. So, Mr. B. Goat was led away by some unknown stranger and fastened to a stake with a three-inch hawser in the horse corral among the fourteen-hand-high horses and the sixteen-hand-high mules.

The serenades of the coyotes are becoming more numerous and louder. Several officers this morning said they were awakened last night by the desert packs yelping near camp. They are about the only animal, with the exception of Mexican lions, which have not been adopted as mascots. It probably is only a question of time before there will be a dozen tamed coyotes crawling around camp and a few more traveling north in crates to amuse the folk at home.

Offutt Suffers Injury.

Lieutenant R. Keith Offutt, of Terre Haute, is suffering considerable pain from a cut in the eye. He became faint after an anti-typhoid injection and his glasses, breaking, slashed the eye. Lieutenant Offutt has been transferred from the Second regiment supply department to Captain Neville A. Powell's machine gun company in the same regiment. He is in command of the company during Captain Powell's stay in Harlington, where the command is taking instructions.

The Third Indiana infantrymen heard the blithe notes of the pay call bugle yesterday afternoon and Uncle Sam likely will have handed a month's wages to every man in the Indiana units by Thursday evening. The first note in this bugle call, the most cheerful in the manual book, with the exception of "to arms," starts with "do."

"Whenever I hear a soldier grumbling about grub," said a Martinsville man, "I always think of Sam Musser back at home and what he went through. Sam waved us good-by when we left and he is trying to get well after eleven months in French and Belgian trenches. A part of a shoulder is shot away and a hand crippled. His nerves are apparently wrecked for life. He can not stand still and talk to you. He must keep moving all the time. When he sits out in his front yard, his eyes keep glancing up and his gaze circles the horizon. I guess he is looking for bombs and aeroplanes. He knows what war is, and some of us growl when our potatoes are burned."

SPEECH INSERTED IN RECORD

Morrison Presents Fairbanks's Remarks on Mexican Situation.

[Special to The Indianapolis News]

WASHINGTON, August 9.—Representative Martin A. Morrison, of Indiana, yesterday inserted in the Congressional Record as a campaign document a speech made by Charles W. Fairbanks at Indianapolis on August 15, 1913, along with editorial comment carried on the following day by The Indianapolis News. Mr. Fairbanks' speech related to the Mexican situation.

In explaining his action, Representative Morrison said: "The statement I have made will explain why it is useless to seek to induce the members of any political party in Indiana to look with favor upon an attempt to force the country into a false attitude toward a grave international question for the sake of mere partisan advantage. It is too late in our history for that."

Imperial Decree Captured, German Officer Can Not Wed

BALTIMORE, August 9.—An imperial decree permitting First Lieutenant Paul Hespee, of the converted cruiser Eitel Friederich, to marry Hildegard Schwieger, who came from Germany to join her one after the internment of the ship at Norfolk seventen months ago, is believed to have been sent from Germany and to have been captured with other mail by the British. Without it, as German subjects, they may not marry.

Babies Die Because Mothers Don't Know
Most babies are born healthy—yet one in five still slips from its mother's arms each year—simply because mothers don't know the few simple things that will keep their babies well.
Plenty of air—plenty of care—and the right food—that's what your baby should have. The first two are easy—but the last? How are you to know what the right food is?
You know, if you cannot nurse your baby, he must have milk in some form. There is a way to give your baby all the good in cow's milk without subjecting his delicate stomach to the dangers that raw cow's milk so often carries.
Thousands of mothers are finding the right way every day. They are bringing up their babies on
Nestlé's Food
(A complete food—not a milk modifier)
Nestlé's is milk from healthy cows purified, then the tough, heavy, curds are modified—the baby needs are added. Reduced to a powder it comes in an air-tight can. No hand has touched it—no germ can reach it. To prepare you add only fresh water and boil one minute. It is a complete food containing all the nourishment needed to build a happy, healthy baby. Nurse your baby if you can—if you can't—keep him safe on Nestlé's Food.
Send the coupon for a sample can (enough for 12 feedings) and see how Nestle's makes him happy.
