TUESDAY MORNING .....AUGUST 2, 1864

OFFICIAL PAPER,

FOR PUBLISHING

THE LETTER LISTS,

HAVING THE

LARGEST CIRCULATION!

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1864,

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

OF TENNESSEE.

We publish this morning a statement made by our Provost Marshal in regard to the deficiency and surplus of men furnished by each township in this District. It will be seen that we have a surplus of 1,020 to apply on this last call. Harrison Township has a surplus of 292, and will not likely be drafted for more than twenty five men.

We see by yesterday's Journal, that the gifted orator, Gol. G. F. Cookerly, is "billed," for divers and sundry speeches, at different points during the next few days. The Democrats always depend upon this gallant "Son of Liberty," to do the "eloquence," of the campaign, but never give him any kind of a chance for official position. This is wrong; it is manifestly absurd. It has been frequently said of late that oratory is on the decline. This is but the result of a certain state of circumstances, which can last but a short time. The authorities on this point are numerous, and of great weight. We will quote only one, however, which no modern rhetorician can gainsay or deny. Cicero, in his oration for Murena, says: "There are two arts capable of placing men in the highest degree of dignity; that of a good General, and that of a good orator. The one secures to us all the advantages and ornaments of peace; the other protects us from the terrors and dangers of war. Other virtues, it must be allowed, are not without their share of praise, such as justice, honor, modesty, temperance * * * * * * * * *

"All these studies vanish at once from our sight, as soon as any new commotion beats the alarm to war; for, as an ingenious poet of approved merit says, 'When war is declared, not only the wordy counterfeit of good sense, but Wisdom herself, the mistress of affairs, quiet the field. Violence bears sway; and the orator himself, not the tedious and prattling only, but the approved and excellent, falls into contempt.'" Now, we do not mean to say that the oratory of the gifted Colonel will "fall into contempt," simply because there is a war in the land, but we do mean to say that if he fails to get a hearing before the people, it must be attributed to the fact that "violence bears sway," and that under such circumstances it cannot be expected that eloquence will be crowned with the fullest success.

It is quite certain, however, that a great many persons will go to hear the orator to whom we refer, simply from the fact of his great reputation as a master in the art of eloquence. This will likely attract a great many who would otherwise have but little respect for his logic. In this way he may be able to get a hearing; we trust he will. It is supposed that he will elucidate his "any platform and any candidate," policy. This the people desire to understand, and the orator should and will be explicit on that point. We shall await developments with interest.

The Rest at Petersburg.

The Army and Navy Journal shows that the present interval of rest enjoyed by our army in front of Petersburg was absolutely demanded by its condition. The men had become worn down by a campaign, which for its protracted energy excited the amazement of all Europe. The spirit of both officers and men was as willing and enthusiastic as ever, but the flesh had become weak. "More than one leader of a storming party," says the writer, "was forced to say, as he came back from an unsuccessful attempt against the outworks of Petersburg. 'My men do not charge as they did thirty days ago.' The corps commanders began to fail in health, in alertness, and in unity. The engagements show the effect of these things. In short, the pace had been too great, and had to be slackened. Besides, owing to the heavy losses, and the infusion of raw troops, an entire reorganization of some parts of the army had become necessary. We presume, also that the return of the greater portion of the troops dispatched to Washington to meet the raider has been waited for.

Government Mechanics and the Draft.

Provost Marshal General Fry has issued an order directing that where skilled mechanics and artisans employed in Government arsenals, armories, &c., are drafted, they shall be exempted from field service if it is certified by a proper officer that their services are needed in the work at which they are engaged.

The Public Debt.

The official statement, as appeared by the records on the 26th, shows that the debt outstanding, bearing interest in coin, is $883,881,842, a difference less than the amount stated on the 19th inst., of $631,000; the interest being $52,425,281. The amount of debt, bearing interest in lawful money, is $404,553,50½, or nearly a million and a half more than in the previous statement, with an aggregate lawful money interest of $21,027,000. The debt bearing no interest is $51,732,032. The debt on which interest has ceased is $370,100. The recapitulation shows that the aggregate amount outstanding is $1,805,523,565, with interest in both gold and lawful money to the amount of $73,650,530. The principle is $9,320,000 more than last month's statement. The unpaid requisitions amount to $77,000,000, and the amount in the Treasury is nearly $15,000,000.

Naval Substitutes.

A circular has been sent by Col. Potter to the several Provost Marshals throughout the U. S. which says, "men enlisting in the navy for three years may be received as substitutes for enrolled or drafted men. Exemption papers will not be issued to principals by the boards of enrolment until a certificate is received from a regularly authorized naval recruiting officer, transmitting through this office, that such substitute has been accepted and received into service."

We notice a late article in the Boston Journal which may be read without disadvantage, and the estimates considered by persons of reflection. This writer has several introductory statements, which we do not quote, which show how he adopted the conclusions which he presents. The result of his thoughts are embodied as follows:

Rebel force at the outset, 12 per cent. of 4,000,000 whites	430,000
Four per cent. of 4,000,000 whites in Southern Districts, loyal	160,000
Young men growing up in three years in excess of deaths	90,000
Whole number of men able to fight from the start	730,000
Rebel losses in three years to May 1, lost in field and by sickness, at 120,000 a year	360,000
Rebel losses, East and West, in the present campaign	100,000
Owners of plantatations, artificers, drivers, refugees, and men who will not or cannot fight at least	75,000
Balance in field or hospital	195,000
	730,000
We thus have remaining as the whole Rebel force, either in the field or fit for service, and to be relied upon	195,000
From these we may deduct at least 5 per cent., or 10,000, for the sick in hospital	10,000
And we have fighting men	185,000
Of these are west of the Mississippi at least	25,000
With Johnston	45,000
With Forrest and others	10,000
At Mobile and in the Carolinas	30,000
With Lee and on raids into Maryland	85,000
Total	185,000

Our own strength he estimates as four hundred and fifty thousand in the field, and says:

"Of these we have in front of both Lee and Johnston at least twice the forces opposed to them, at least three hundred thousand, the residue holding the Mississippi, the coast of Carolina, and the communications and depots in the rear of our main armies.

If our Government will but keep these armies up to their present strength, and keep down, as they can (below two hundred) the price of gold, the result is certain. For the last two months we have disposed of our foes at the rate of nearly fifty thousand per month. Should we continue to move with the same degree of despatch, the present campaign of 1864, at its close, would leave few foes in arms or able to renew the contest."

We sincerely hope that this prophet is endowed with the true inspiration.

General Hoon's supersedure of Johnston may be regarded as highly opportune to our cause at Atlanta. Shrman's trouble from the very start, has been to get the rebels to stand up to an open fight. Johnston's policy was to avoid fighting, unless he could have the advantage of fortifications, so as to make a sure thing of it. And it has been true, as a general thing, in the campaign, that the army which has attacked the other has been the one to be beaten. As Sherman could not afford to sacrifice men in butting them against field works, his resource to dislodge them has been to flank movements. But his wish all the while has been to get a fight out of them which should settle the hash as near to his base as possible. Hood has finally come to his relief at Atlanta. A fight was what Hood wanted, and he has had one. He tried the rebel tactics, borrowed from the French army, of massing on a given point. In the earlier stages of the war this was a plan very likely to have a good deal of success. But our troops have got ready for the resources of the rebels, and are ready for them in any way they may choose. So go it Hood, in your own way. The faster you give us the chance, the quicker the end will come.

THE FREMONT MOVEMENT.

Its Real Object and purpose Beginning to be Apparent

[From Wilkes's Spirit of the Times, July 30.]

We regret to see that the movement in favor of General Fremont, which it was hoped would have secured a good national candidate from the Democratic party, has, through the imprudence of its orators and organs, resolved itself into a mere auxiliary agency to the nomination of McClellan.—The elements which originally rallied round Fremont, and which fashioned the platform subsequently modified at Cleveland, was an earnest, ardent, liberty-loving rebel hating element, and which, obeying these instincts, was bitterly opposed to everything that savored of Copperheadism, or that exhibited the slightest indication of Conservative proclivity. Indeed, it was the restive hostility of ardent men to Mr Lincoln's retention of pro-slavery generals, and the suspicion that he was disposed to compromise with the rebellion, which gave shape and vigor to this organization of the radical Democracy.—The Fremont movement was, in short, the fartherest from Copperheadism or retrogression of any political formation known to the country; and yet, strangely enough, we now find it in practical alliance with the Copperhead tacticians, and combining with them actively, in restoring their most pernicious representatives to the popular esteem.

We feel quite sure that General Fremont never contemplated the performance of such a role as this, and equally sure he is not yet aware of its character and tendency; nevertheless, no intelligent outside observer can fail to perceive that he and his movement have been appropriated by the Copperheads, and are skillfully directed in behalf of a reactionary, if not disloyal candidate. The unanimous praise bestowed by the opposition journals upon General Fremont's letter of acceptance decoyed his orators into responsive laudations of McClellan. Brownson led off in this unworthy toadyism, at the ratification meeting in this city: Copperhead orators, pure and simple, were then projected upon hotel balconies, to return the compliment in favor of Fremont and the cheers which mingled the names of the military cray-fish and Pathfinder, welded the secondary into the prevailing metal. From that hour the power of Fremont to make a vigorous challenge of Lincoln's policy and Cabinet passed away, while any chance of his receiving the Chicago nomination became too remote for calculation. This latter fact, though concealed for a time from his volatile supporters by deceptive Copperhead hosannas, was patent to that fitful opposition from the first; and their whole object was, to so engineer this apparent reaction in favor of McClellan as to secure that candidate the Democratic nomination. Every one who has carefully looked on, can trace the proof of this performance. When the Chicago convention was postponed from the 4th of July until the 19th of August, it was universally conceded that Little Mac's chances for a nomination were finally disposed of. By common consent (always excepting the Belmont Barlow clique, who own McClellan,) even the Copperheads themselves began to look around for a new candidate; and in the sudden perturbation, there seemed, to the unskillful, to be a possible acceptance of Fremont. It was then that the orators and the organs of the Cleveland movements became most conciliating towards the chieftains of the Opposition; and the result was that McClellan being thus partially lifted from a deserved obloquy, in quarters where it was never deemed he would get another hearing, was thought by his party to be sufficiently restored to popularity to be united on again in August, The hero of the Chickahominy, therefore, who had been virtually abandoned as a candidate, by the adjournment of the convention which was prepared to nominate him on the Fourth of July, has been coming back upon his party during the last three weeks like a fourmiler, and already leads by a commanding distance toward the common goal. As for Fremont having any chance of a nomination from the Chicago Convention, it is reduced to an absurdity; and it is to be hoped he will perceive this fact in time to prevent such a calamity as the nomination of McClellan. It should be sufficient to alarm him that his cause has thus early been subjected to the calamity of Brownson as its leader; while the objects of that leader are unmistakably foreshadowed by the elaborate defense made by him in his last Review of the traitor Fitz John Porter.

It is no reflection on Fremont's sagacity that he has not yet detected the bearing which his impudent or conniving orators have given to his movement; but his aroused intelligence cannot fail to perceive it now; and he has yet plenty of margin to vindicate the lofty declaration of his letter, and his main object is not to advance himself, but to secure a worthy administration to the country. To use an expression or common phrase he has not the ghost of a chance for the Chicago nomination; and the present attitude of his organization is simply that of an auxiliary to the advancement of McClellan. The worst enemy Gen. Fremont has on earth, would not venture to assume that such a role is worthy the adoption and performance.

HOOP SKIRTS.

THIS REMARKABLE INVENTION in Skirts will entirely obviate and silence the only objection to the use of Hoop Skirts, viz: the annoyance to the wearer as well as the public, especially in crowded assemblies, stages, coaches, railroad cars, arm chairs, or sitting down anywhere, from the difficulty of contracting them and occupying a small space.

The invention of the "DUPLEX ELIPTIC SPRING" entirely removes this difficulty, while giving the Skirt the usual full and symetrical appearance, the wearer is enabled to contract it with scarcely any attention or effort into so small a compass that no trouble will be experienced in the most crowded coaches or cars, dispensing entirely with the old difficulty and enabling the wearer to derive all the benefits which the use of this skirt has introduced.

The invention of this "Duplex Eliptic Spring," like all other valuable inventions, is so the most simple kind, consisting of Duplex (or two) Eliptic Steel Springs ingeniously braided together edge to edge, being very flexible tough and elastic, enabling the wearer to place and fold it when in use as easily and with the same convenience as a silk or muslin dress. Another important feature of the Duplex Eliptic Spring is, the durability of the wires or springs giving much greater strength to the Hoop which prevents their breaking or bending out of shape.

The New Duplex Eliptic Skirt being much more durable than the single wire, thus adding economy to the many other advantages. This invention is destined to create an excitement among the fair sex as no lady will dispense with the New Patented Duplex Eliptic Spring Skirt, after once using it. All made of the new and elegant corded Tape.

The Multiform Skirt

Is one of the latest and most practicable Skirts of the season, being a Skirt that can be changed with ease from a large size to a very small one.
