ENGLISH ADMAN HERE THIS WEEK

Charles F. Higham Will Be Convention Speaker.

Charles F. Higham, of London, England, who is European vice president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, is expected to arrive in Indianapolis Friday for the convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs, which opens next Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Higham also is a member of the British parliament and is regarded as one of the leading advertising men of the world.

He will discuss economic conditions in England before the convention.

Mr. Higham won a place in parliament largely through the popularity he attained in the application of advertising to the needs of the British government during the war.

He was one of the first to see the value of advertising as a weapon against the enemy.

He looks upon business and advertising as a form of public service.

With numerous other leaders in the field of advertising, he contends that advertising cannot be of service to the business man or to the publication except when it is of primary service to the buying public.

In addition to Mr. Higham at least two other prominent London advertising agents will attend the convention.

Many delegates already are on their way to Indianapolis for the covention, which opens next Sunday afternoon with an inspirational meeting in University park.

Five Given Diplomas at School for Blind

Five students at the Indiana school for the blind received diplomas at exercises held last night in the auditorium of the school.

The graduates presented a musical and literary program before Rev. O. D. Odell, vice president of the board of trustees, presented the diplomas.

Those who received diplomas were Lourie Stafford, Juanita Schardt, Ethel Straffner, Ray Judd and Sheldon Davis.

Lens Co.'s Attorney Denies U. S. Charge

Vigorous denial was made by V. H. Lockwood, attorney for the One-Piece Bifocal Lens Company, 426 North Capitol avenue, of the charge of unfair dealing entered yesterday against the company by the federal trade commission.

It is alleged by the commission that the company was unfair in competition in trade and that they have been using "tying" contracts in violation of the Clayton act, making it impossible for their dealers to handle the lines of their competitors.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS

—And What They Mean—

Did you dream of graves?

To dream of a grave is not considerer by the mystics as one of the best omens, but it not, after all, a wholly unfavorable one.

Most of the oracles say that a dream of an open grave signifies that you will lose a friend through death or estrangement, but a dream of a grave filled up is a sign of good luck and an increase in fortune.

To dream of looking into an empty grave is accounted by some to be an omen of unpleasant news, which will soon reach you, and is a warning to look well after your business.

If you dream that you are digging a grave it is a sign that enemies are seeking to injure you, but will, in all probability, be powerless to do so; and to dream of seeing your own grave is given the same significance.

Many oracles declare that a dream of a grave or tomb is an omen of marriage and births in the family, and it is affirmed by the great majority of the mystics that a dream of a grave or tomb means a legacy in the near future.

If you dream that you are reading the inscription of a tombstone it is a sign that you will be soon called upon to perform some unpleasant duty. A tombstone in a dream also means an inheritance, and to dream of breaking one augurs great happiness in store for you.

To dream you are emerging from a grave or tomb is one of the best of omens.

It signifies that you will achieve great success in life and be most happy in your old age.

A dream of tombs or graves may be connected with the unconscious death wish of which Freud talks so much; that is a wish for the death of some one; generally an infantile primitive wish, existing in the unconscious and of which the possessor would disclaim with honest horror the possession. Or it may arise from one of those inversions of which the dream not infrequently makes use and by which it transforms a thing into exact opposite, in which case the psychoanalysis would interpret the dream in a manner quite as cheerful and satisfactory as that of the mystics.—Copyright, 1920.

"TIZ" GLADDENS SORE, TIRED FEET

No puffed-up, burning, tender, aching feet—no corns or callouses.

"Tiz" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, blisters, bunions and chilblains.

"Tiz" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "Tiz" brings restful foot comfort. "Tiz" is magical, grand, wonderful for tired, aching, swollen, smarting feet. Ah! how comfortable, how happy you feel. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a box of "Tiz" now from any druggist or department store. End foot torture forever—wear smaller shoes, keep your feet fresh, sweet and happy. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for a few cents.—Advertisement.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

A New Serial of Young Married Life

By ANN LISLE.

CHAPTER L.

"Anne, will you give me a lift? I've forgotten the trick of tying a four-in-hand," called Jim from the bedroom.

I deserted the peaches I was slicing for breakfast and went to my husband's rescue.

I knew this was my boy's generous way of helping me over the first stabbing moment when I must see my soldier transformed into a blue-serge "business man."

In adjusting the tie—slowly, with stumbling fingers—I adjusted myself, too. Jim was tense, but absolutely controlled.

"That's a pretty good knot—I like black ties with blue serge," I ventured when I had finished.

I lifted my fingers from the scarf to my boy's face; he caught them in a burning hand and crushed them against his mouth.

But in another moment he had banished emotion and was talking of the new work he was going to meet; and I, respecting the grave reserve that sometimes overshadows all the boyishness in Jim's nature, chimed in with a discussion of his new "job" with Snedden & Co.

Then I turned to the task I dreaded—packing away his uniform. It was nowhere to be seen!

I could picture the pain at the back of his eyes as he had folded it and had laid it away. Wounded and alone stood my Jim—and I, who loved him so, couldn't help!

The morning dragged by. At noon there was a phone call from Evvy.

She was lunching with Sheldon Blake and he wanted the "Jimmies" to join them. I tried to refuse on the score that Jim was out, but Evelyn announced that she would drop in and call for me just the same. I was glad to have her tyrannize over me—it wasn't healthy to be alone with my constant vision of the unfathonable look in my boy's eyes.

"How sweet you look!" cried Evelyn, breezing in picturesquely in a white Georgette topped by a sleeveless jacket of turquoise blue satin, and with a tiny wrapped turban of blue riding gracefully above the soft fluffiness of her spun gold hair.

She was beautiful, and the compliments she paid my simple blue navy calico and white sailor seemed to emphasize her loveliness rather than to glorify my simple costume.

Her little car whisked us over to the Santvoort, where Sheldon Blake was waiting.

"Alone?" asked Evelyn.

Afterward I remembered her half-whispered question, for just as we were finishing the hors d'oeuvre for which the Santvoort is famous in strolled Tom Mason.

"Room for one more?" he asked.

And Sheldon Blake replied: "Tardy as usual, Tommy—but welcome."

Then it was that I wondered why I hadn't been told this was to be a party of four.

Did Evelyn and Mr. Blake guess that I would never have come?

"Where's Jim? I suppose he's going to land some soft snap office job in one of the army departments," said Mr. Blake suddenly.

"He's not looking for any 'soft snap,' Mr. Blake," I replied, with a cold dignity I hoped was worthy of my boy.

"Oh, I didn't mean to offend"—— began Mr. Blake.

But Evelyn interrupted him angrily:

"Sheldon, you old stupid, don't you know Jim is a hero?"

Her tone sounded sincere, but Mr. Blake laughed as if unconscious of reproof.

"Jim is out of the army," I managed at last.—Copyright, 1920.

The Young Lady Across the Way

We asked the young lady across the way what she thought of the Japanese consortium with the Chinese and she said of course the Japanese and Chinese are a great deal alike but in her opinion marriages of people of the same nationality are much more likely to turn out happily.—Copyright 1920.

NAB 7 IN SECOND RAID ON HOUSE

Police Say Place Was Open 5 Hours After Conviction.

Four men and three women are awaiting trial on statutory charges again today following a raid on an alleged resort at 230 West Maryland street yesterday afternoon, within five hours after Frances Claston, 37, proprietor of the place, had been convicted in city court.

A "wild scramble" for escape occurred at the time of the second raid.

A fine of $10 and costs and a sentence of thirty days in the woman's prison, imposed on the Claston woman earlier in the day, was appealed.

When arrested the second time the woman gave her first name as Mary instead of Frances.

The police say she was arrested more than a year ago under the name or Minnie Miles in a raid on a house at 130 West Tenth street.

Mary McCoy, 23, who was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to ten days in jail, was caught again in the second raid.

Mary Aldering, 20, who told the police she would go to Cincinnati if not arrested in the first raid, failed to leave the city and also fell in the net.

The four men caught yesterday gave their names as James Black, 53, of Greenwood, Ind.; H. C. Kiser, 26, of 1406 Oliver avenue; L. L. Scherer, 26, Fisher, Ind., and Pete Mehigh, 46, of 11 North California street.

Hoosier Sold Cider; Now He's Wiser

LAPORTE, Ind., June 1.—C. D. Bates is in jail today under sentence of thirty days and $100 fine for selling cider that federal prohibition agents said ran from 3.80 to 6 per cent alcohol.
