DAILY HERALD.

MONDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 27.

THE attention of our country exchanges is called to the Prospectus of the INDIANAPOLIS DAILY HERALD in another place. Those who have already published it are of course entitled to an exchange. To those who have not we offer our daily in exchange for one year upon their inserting this Prospectus three times and calling attention to it editorially.

Personal.

For the past two weeks we have been in the constant receipt of letters, from different parts of the State, informing us that the HERALD does not arrive regularly, or that it does not arrive at all. Nor is this all; within the last few days we have noticed in several of our exchanges the same complaint in relation to the HERALD. This is a source of deep mortification to us, the more so as we have done and are doing every thing in our power to transmit the HERALD regularly, and know full well that the fault does not lie with us. The papers are placed each morning in the Post Office by trustworthy messengers. The matter is one to which we invite the attention of the Postmaster, and ask of him that strict justice be done us by his subordinates. We can not think there is any intention on the part of those connected with the Post Office to do us wrong intentionally, but we feel we are suffering from causes which can only be remedied by those having direct charge of postal affairs in this State.

Our Duty.

"The poor you have with you always." "Go, sell all thou hast, and give to the poor."

We apprehend that some of our pious friends will be angry with us for making the above quotations, but, we ask them to withhold its expression till they read our short explanation. When we look back through the history of the world, we discover all the way, in each country we pass through, with scarcely an exception, society divided thus:

1. A great multitude that no man can accurately number, forming the mud-sills of the nation, all toiling from morn till night, poorly clad, poorly fed, poorly housed, poorly educated, made little of in society, and little of as they leave it; with bent bodies and downcast looks, they plod their weary way in suffering and sorrow through life, and dying, leave the same sad fate as their children's inheritance.

2. Above this unhappy throng, and standing upon their backs, collecting into their own possession the proceeds of their toil, stand a comparatively few fat, sleek, joyous-looking fellows, dressed in gold and purple and fine linen, partaking of the choicest dishes, and the most sparkling wines, reading and writing and conversing in "slippered ease," and in most elegant parlors; bowed and crouched to while living, and buried, when dead, at a cost that might make happy, thousands of the poor and lowly, but to rot in the ground as soon and as worthless as they.

3. Above these, still, has been discovered a crowned head, glittering amid diamonds, a being before whom all the nation stood in awe, and upon whose nod depended the liberty and the breath of life of them all from minute to minute. Generally this being lived in a harem of beautiful women, was drunk much of his time, and took from those below him in the social and political cone of society just what he pleased of their means for the unlimited gratification of his desires.

Our fathers determined to settle this country under a different system. Deeply impressed with the "wrong and outrage" of the old system, they determined to inaugurate a new one. Deeply imbued with a sense of justice and right, and a feeling of sympathy with their fellow-man, they determined upon a social and political organization founded on the idea of the equality of men; and thus intended to, and thought they had so framed their written constitutions of government, as to save the people from the growth, in this country, of a moneyed aristocracy, and a costly, corrupt, despotic Administration, necessarily accompanied by a downtrodden people of suffering and dependent poor. Hence, they made our Government elective; they prohibited titles of nobility; the grant, by Government, of special privileges to classes of citizens; they ordained that taxation should be equal and all property subjected to it, etc., etc.

They did this because they knew men, unless restrained, would act from selfish instead of just and generous principles, and would reduce this country to the same sad condition of those above very briefly pictured. But, alas! these supposed checks have turned out cobwebs around the Republican leaders. A moneyed aristocracy, and an arbitrary administration are getting their shackles, upon the limbs of our people, and the iron will yet, we fear, pierce their souls. Now, we, as political editor of the HERALD, feel impelled by our feeling of human sympathy and our sense of justice, to stand up for the Government as designed to operate by our fathers.

It is through false legislation, and perverted administration; it is, in short, by converting this Government, by indirection, from the purpose of its founders, and using it as an instrument of partial legislation, in favor of bankers, manufacturers, and great capitalists generally, as against labor and small capital, and agriculture, that a moneyed aristocracy on one side and a pauper peasantry on the other, can be produced. That condition is approaching. To help arrest its approach, we shall advocate cheap, economical Government, and as little of it as possible; shall oppose partial, corrupt legislation to make the rich, richer and the poor, poorer. We do thus from no hostility to men. With us, it is a matter of earnest conviction of duty, and faith to the wishes, in government, of our fathers.

New Publications.

The enterprising book firm of Messrs. BOWEN, STEWART & CO., have laid upon our table the Atlantic Monthly for December, and also "An Illustrated Magazine for Boys and Girls," called "Our Young Folks," for the same month.

They are excellent numbers, each containing a variety of interesting and instructive articles. The Atlantic Monthly contains "The Parting of HECTOR and ANDROMACHE," from HOMER, who, it will be recollected, is supposed to have written three thousand years ago; in which, as HECTOR returns his son to the arms of his weeping spouse, ANDROMACHE, he says:

"Sorrow not thus beloved one, for me,
No living man can send me to the shades
Before my time; no man of woman born,
Coward or brave, can shun his destiny."

Whereby we may infer that the doctrine of fate, the doctrine of foreordination and predestination is natural to man.

There is but one political article in this number of the Atlantic, and that is a somewhat lengthy and interesting piece of literary history, biography and criticism, designed to illustrate two Latin verses, which we will not quote but give the interpretation of, in substance, viz: that government to be stable, must be made so by clemency; and that in attempting to shun Charybdis we must be careful not to dash against Scylla. The article is entitled "Clemency and Common Sense," and is, the writer says, "only a long whip with a snapper to it," and the crack which he gives the President in applying to him the snapper may be judged of by the following sentence. "Never was their lesson more needed than now, when, in the name of clemency to belligerent traitors, the National Government is preparing to abandon the Freedmen, to whom it is bound by the most sacred ties; is preparing to abandon the national creditor also, with whose security the national welfare is indissolubly associated; [what is meant by this?] and is even preparing, without any probation or trial, to invest belligerent traitors, who for four bloody years have murdered our fellow citizens, with those equal rights in the Republic which are denied to friends and allies, so that the former shall rule over the latter."

☞ The Chicago Times and Lafayette Courier contain notices to the effect that Edwin Booth's wife is still living. Such is not the fact. His wife's maiden name was Mary Devlin, a favorite Eastern actress and she died about two years ago in Boston.

Judge Sydney Bruce, of the Illinois Supreme Court, is writing some memoirs of the early settlement of Illinois. No man living is better qualified for the work, as the Judge has been a resident of the State nearly 50 years.

The Currency.

We have heretofore shown that our entire currency before the war amounted to three hundred millions—that the increase of the public debt and taxes has rendered an increase of one hundred and fifty millions necessary, making the proper amount of our circulation at this time to be four hundred and fifty millions. We have shown that the present amount actually is nine hundred and fifty millions, being five hundred millions in excess, or more than double what it should be. It thus appears that prices, at present, are really about double what they should be, upon present actual value estimated on what we are in the habit of calling a specie basis, but which really means a price estimated upon a proper quantity of convertible currency. But in this growing Western country there is, to real estate a prospective value to be added, based upon the prospects of future advancement in population and wealth. We have, also, seen that but about sixty millions of our present currency is specie. Now, of the four hundred and fifty millions of circulating medium demanded by the country, at least one hundred and fifty millions ought to be gold and silver. The quantity of United States free bank paper now authorized is three hundred millions, which added to the required amount of gold and silver, makes the sum of four hundred and fifty millions, the proper amount of circulation. Hence, no more banks should be created, and yet, the Secretary of the Treasury, while pretending one day that he is determined to go back to a specie standard, announces, according to the telegraph now, after the modern manner of so conducting public affairs as to deceive the people, that he will recommend the creation of more National Free Banks, though, as we have seen, the quantity of paper already authorized is up to the maximun of what the country ought to have thrown upon it.

Hence, we are, probably, not to have much if any reduction in the volume of currency,

"Blest paper money, largest, best supply,
That lends corruption lighter wings to fly!"

We are opposed, all the time to the creation of United Staes Free Banks. We are opposed to the increase of paper circulation. We desire to see, at least five hundred millions of what we now have got rid of, and one hundred and fifty millions of gold and silver brought into use. We are not in favor of reducing the volume of currency rapidly. Were that done, it would illustrate too forcibly the beauties of paper expansions and contractions. For example, a humble, industrious, unposted Irishman, thinking every thing was to go on as usual, bought a house and lot a year ago, paid five hundred dollars on it, in interest-bearing treasury notes, on which there was fifty dollars of interestdue, but he did not know it, and paid them in for five hundred dollars, though the seller of the property, who was sharp enough to understand the matter, got credit at the bank on his deposit, $550 (a great many, by the by, pay these notes into bank without being aware of the interest, which the bank, however, always foots up against Uncle SAM, singing at the time, "Blest paper money," etc.) Well, the Irishman has paid his five hundred dollars, the mortgage for the balance has become due, the money king just at this time contracts the currency to enable the rich creditor portion of the community to make a haul, the Irishman's house and lot fall one-half in price, the seller takes them for his mortgage, keeping his previously paid $550, coolly and carelessly singing at the time, "Blest paper money," etc., but the Irishman sings not. Such things could not happen, but for the wicked device and devices of paper money.

What the poor man wants, what the unsophisticated man wants, what the honest man wants, and what the general welfare demands, is a stable, uniform, non-interest bearing currency, and a steady course of business and prices. You can't gamble men out of their property with marked cards, in the above mode on a non-fluctuating currency.

The Two and a half Per Cent. Bonds.

These bonds are not due by contract. They are payable when the State is reasonably able to pay them. We are under no obligation to raise the interest on the bonds, because they were taken to be held, till the State was ready to pay them, at two and a half per cent. If A gives his note to B promising to pay B one hundred dollars, with interest at two and a half per cent., when he, A, is able to pay, the note is not due till A is able to pay, and he is not bound to increase the rate of interest in the meantime, nor to give any new note. It would be proper for the State to levy such tax, to be applied toward the payment of the bonds, as she was able to bear from year to year, till they were all paid off. The amount thus raised might be paid pro rata, from year to year, on the bonds. This would be exactly fulfilling our contract. But to, in the meantime, raise the interest on the bonds till paid is voting away the people's money, by her representatives, without authority, to be paid in time of her distress. We hope the bondholders will not attempt the use of money to carry the bill.

Carthage Must be Destroyed.

Carthage must be destroyed, said old Rome; and, after terrible contests, Carthage was destroyed; and then, Rome, her rival being removed, waxed fat and kicked, and finally fell, because she became too rotten to stand up. And in the war between Greece and Troy, who does not remember HECTOR and ACHILLES? Now, however, reader, we are to have another little fight, that will, perhaps, furnish a history of sufficient heroic and romantic incident to supply the place in your historic reading, of the memorials of the great Grecian and Trojan heroes. JULIAN, MORTON and HOLLOWAY will doubtless become as immortal as HECTOR ACHILLES and AJAX, if the Republicans can only furnish some petit HOMER or VIRGIL who will make them the theme of song. JULIAN shall be destroyed says MORTON and says HOLLOWAY, and fall he must, but he will fall with his face to the foe, and with their blood on his garments.

What is a Fenian!

Editor of the Herald:

It takes a long way round to answer this question, and the writer after laborious research is not prepared to furnish an exhaustive history of the Order for various reasons, but chiefly by reason of ignorance. His knowledge, however, can be depended upon as far as it goes, which will be found about as far as most of his readers will care to follow.

Most of us remember the poems of Ossian, now sometime superseded, but once so popular that the great Napoleon—the uncle of his nephew—in vain attempted to imitate their turgid swell Ireland, as most booksellers over the water will sorrowfully admit, is not a good market for the book trade; but "Fingal" did penetrate to that dark retreat and on perusing its resounding periods, something fell musically upon the Irish ear. Reality dawned at last. Who was this Fingal but their own national military hero? Fen McCoul, and the whole machinery of these romances were worked out of their own old genuine annals. The appropriation was harder to bear because circumstances gave Ireland a particular interest in her Fen McCoul as we will see presently.

The three nations had been running a sort of race in establishing each for itself an ancient mythical history; a series of treasured memories of the hoariest antiquity, and where the raw materials were fiction and blarney, Ireland of course produced a far finer article than either England or Scotland. A day of self-sacrifice came, came, however, when each nation was obliged to abandon its ancient fictions, and Ireland gave up her connection with the daughter of Cain, and the wonderful Birth, of whom it was questioned among the learned whether he was hid in the ark with Noah, or had a boat of his own. Finally it came to be doubted whether Erin was inhabited eighteen hundred years before Christ, but it was necessary to make a stand somewhere against these new doctrines, and it was resolved to retain Fen McCoul, the founder of the great national militia of Ireland.

The modesty and moderation which is so becoming to Irish historians, appears in the later accounts of this wonderful man. Some exaggerated qualities attributed to him in former times, such as his having been fifteen or twenty feet high and of gigantic strength, were gracefully abandoned, and the first Fenian was permitted to stand forth clothed in the dignity of his simple greatness.

It was also desirable to abjure certain other exaggerated notions about the prowess of the national force under this chief, but sufficient testimony remains to prove them slightly superior to the present growth of Fenians, mentally, at least, since no one was admitted unless he had a poetical genius and could compose verses.

After these moderate and indeed rather prosaic notices of the ancient Fenian brotherhood, it may prove inspiring to the holders of Fenian bonds, and perhaps silence the cavilling of any miserable sceptic who may doubt the whole story, to add that topographical vestiges of their existence remain to the present day.

The Millenium About Here—A Few Years more of Republican Rule will Bring it.

In Boston, yes, in Boston, the hub of the universe, where the people daily thank God that they are not like their hewers of wood and drawers of water in the west, and where the divine elders continually play upon harps, each with a thousand strings, we are told that crime is so prevalent that the young men have organized a city patrol, and that hundreds of revolvers are purchased daily for self-protection, as the law gives none. Where is Carrington?

In Nashville, the papers tell us every farmer nearly who comes to market is robbed by negroes, often in daylight. But why particularize? Happy, thrice happy, country under Republican rule!

State Items.

—The Bloomfield Indianian mentions the passage through that town of a fine drove of cattle, in three lots, purchased by the owners at five cents gross, and considers it a pretty fair price.

—Mr. A. Pardee, of Hazleton, Pennsylvania, who has already given $20,000 to the Lafayette College, now offers, on certain easy conditions, to give $100,000 more for the establishment of a scientific school in connection with the College.

—The Indianapolis Daily HERALD, published by Hall & Hutchinson, is decidedly the best Daily in the State. It is the old State Sentinel revised, enlarged and improved, which is saying, in our judgment about all that could be said for any paper.—Rochester Standard.

—The Seymour Times tells of a gang of fifteen or twenty "highly honorable gentlemen" who attempted to rob a soldier of his money in the Exchange Saloon, some of whom were arrested and sent to Brownsville jail, and the money recovered.

WHAT'S THE MATTER.—From some cause or other, not a single copy of the Indianapolis HERALD has been received at this post-office the past week.—Princeton Democrat, 25th.

[The fault is with those who have charge of the mails.]

POISONED—A little son, three years of age of Mr. B. F. Brownlee, of this place, poisoned himself on Tuesday, by eating Jamestown (commonly called gympsum) seeds, and last evening when we went to press, but little hopes were entertained of his recovery.—Princeton Democrat.

—The pews in the new Synagogue of the Congregation Benai-Israel, at Evansville, were sold at auction. The whole number of pews is ninety, of which fifty-eight were sold, at an aggregate of $10,800, being an average of $200. The highest price paid for a pew was $300.

—What has become of the Indianapolis HERALD? We have not received a copy for several days. Will our friends at the capital ascertain?—Evansville Journal, Nov. 24.

[Our paper has been sent regularly to you since the first issue. The fault is not ours.]

—The Bloomfield Indianian remarks:

"Greene county will have a reputation if it keeps on doing as well as it did last week. A robbery and an assault and battery in one week, with three arrests, ought to be as much as an ordinary backwoods county could be expected to do."

INDIANAPOLIS HERALD.—Not a copy of this paper has been received at our post-office for three days. What's the matter, friends? We can't well do without it. We hope the cause of the failure will be investigated.—Vincennes Sun, 24th.

[The paper has been mailed regularly. The fault does not lie with us.]

—The Corydon Democrat states that an attempt was made last week to rob the store of Captain Strong, in Harrison county. The robbers were unsuccessful, however, for strong discovered them and immediately commenced firing. They fled to the river, and strong followed and fired, but to no purpose, as the robbers succeeded in crossing the river.

CHILD FOUND DEAD.—Last Sunday a male child, supposed to be about twelve hours old, was found in the river at Wright's Landing, in this county. It was in a garden seed box, and had a calico dress wrapt around its body. Another instance of shame and sin, and to cover which the terrible crime of murder has been added.—Vevay Reveille.

—The last Johnson county Press says:

On Monday night last, some unmitigated scoundrel entered the dwelling of Andrew Ferrill living in the eastern part of this city, and robbed him of some 120 to 150 dollars.

Hulsman & Alexander's Saloon was also entered the same night and some several dollars worth of property taken.

—The Vincennes Sun of Friday contains the following account of a "Flight and Foot Race:

"On Thursday, about 1½ o'clock P. M., the man Jenkins, confined in jail on a charge of counterfeiting, attempted to take French leave of our worthy Sheriff LaHue, while some of the prisoners were being fed. He rushed out unceremoniously, leaped a fence, and sped like a deer for the timber. The alarm was quickly given, however, and in a short time a crowd of persons were in hot pursuit, and after over a half mile chase, the criminal was overhauled by young James Reed, who was in advance of other pursuers, and proved too fleet for Jenkins, who had tumbled over into a fence corner pretty well used up."

—A country Justice named Helse, recently married a couple at the Lahr House, Lafayette, and that being out of his jurisdiction, the marriage had been pronounced by the lawyers illegal, and the Justice liable to be punished for a violation of the law. But the trouble did not end there. A few days after the event just described, a soldier took his Susan Jane to a preacher and requested to be spliced. The gentleman of the cloth was in glee at the prospect of some scrip, and told them to stand up. But before proceeding he called for the license. To this the soldier replied that he had been engaged to Susan J. four years, and thought that license enough. The clergyman couldn't see it. Soldier offered to procure an order from General Reynolds, who was in the city. The clergyman declined, and concluded by telling the soldier that he had better take the girl and go to Helser. "You can go to hell yourself," replied the indignant blue coat, "and if it was not in your own house, I'd bust your head for you."

MURDER AT MT. VERNON.—The Evansville Courier of Saturday contains the following account of a murder perpetrated at Mt. Vernon:

We have learned the particulars of a murder committed at Mt. Vernon, Posey county. Charles Gallkamp was, on Tuesday, the 22d, killed by Peter Speicher, under the following circumstances: It seems that Gallkamp, was in the employ of Wollin of that place, and formerly worked in the city for Mr. Weil, was on a spree, roaming about at night seeking shelter, and wandered into the basement of Speicher's brewery, where he built a fire, and also stumbled upon a keg of beer, which had been tapped. After helping himself, and sleeping till daylight, he arose and was sitting upright, when the proprietor found him. Mr. Speicher became so enraged upon the discovery of what had been going on, that he struck him several terrible blows upon the head with an iron bar or poker, crushing in his skull, and producing immediate death. Speicher was arrested and had been taken before a magistrate, but we were unable to learn what disposition was made of his case.

PROSPECTUS

INDIANAPOLIS HERALD,

Daily and Weekly, for 1865-66.

The Undersigned, Publishers of the

Indianapolis Daily & Weekly Herald,

In soliciting a generous support from the people of the State, have but few words to say and few promises to make; while it shall be their purpose to make it equal in mechanical execution and literary merit to any paper published in the West, they prefer to let it speak for itself.

In politics the HERALD will be thoroughly Democratic, and to assure the party of its political fidelity and ability, its editorial columns have been placed under the exclusive control of the Hon. S. E. PERKINS, one of the ablest and readiest writers in the State, whose long and intimate acquaintance with the history of political parties in our State, together with his life-long devotion to Democratic principles, makes him peculiarly fitted for that position.

In addition to the political matter contained in the HERALD, a large space will be devoted to general news and literary subjects, so as to make it a faithful chronicler of passing events.

Its Local Columns shall receive special attention, and an able corps has been engaged to report the Special Session of the Legislature shortly to convene.

Its Commercial articles and Price Currents will be carefully revised, so as to make it an object to men of business to consult it daily.

In short, we do not intend to spare either time or money to make

Herald Meet the Demand

Northwestern

MUTUAL LIFE

Insurance Company.

ASSETS OVER - - - - - $800,000.

THIS ENTERPRISING COMPANY, IN A LITTLE over six years, has issued over 13,000 Policies and paid near $200,000 in Losses. It is prompt in all its business transactions, paying its losses as cheerfully as it receives the premiums on its policies, departing in no respect from the general principles upon which all the great Mutual Life Insurance of America have based their success. It claims the advantages of increased rates of interest on its investments, over Eastern Companies; and, also, a less rate of mortality than is experienced in the East—two very important items to consider in the selection of a Life Insurance Company. Over two hundred of the Northwestern Policies are now held in Indianapolis.
