ORAK SHOW GOING BIGGER THAN EVER

Tonight some lucky visitor at Orak Temple's big winter circus will start home the proudest fellow in Hammond. He will be the owner of an Overland touring car, brand new.

And it will not cost him a cent.

All he'll have to do is show a ticket with a number on it corresponding to one drawn from the barrel. Then he can climb right in, step on the starter and beat it for home.

Monday evening a Ford car was won by an East Chicago man in the same manner. There will be more drawings before the circus ends. So hold your admission ticket until the last night.

The big show is proving a daily repeater. There were sceptics who shook their heads and said Orak was biting off a big hunk in expecting capacity crowds every night for a week straight. They figured one or two evenings would spell the finish of the attendance.

Well, last night's turnout made them feel cheap. It was the same old story. There are still thousands in Lake Co. and vicinity who have not seen the big attraction. There are more thousands who are coming from afar. There are still more thousands who are for it every night because each visit brings to light new wonders which they had missed on previous nights.

Down in the "Days of 49" show, the crowd has a chance all its own. Fortunes are won and lost in the twinkling of an eye and the lone mem of the law is constantly embracing some outlaw who has technically over-stepped Judge Lynch stands, then all. Doc Baron, the entrepreneur, was a millionaire for awhile last night. He had more class money than he had ever seen in his life. But the law got him and he had to quit. Anyway he had the fun of breaking the bank.

This afternoon the school children of Hammond had an opportunity to see the circus. Schools were dismissed at 2:30 and the show did not start until four o'clock.

Tomorrow, the Shrine committee will entertain the unfortunate children of Hammond and West Hammond under twelve years old. Through the co-operation of Carl Griffin and Miss Irene Van Slyke, attendance officers all orphans, cripples, invalids and little tykes whose parents cannot afford to spare the admission price will be admitted free. The attendance officers will be at the door and identify each child seeking free admission.

AT THE PARTHENON.

That deep drama is only a short step from farce comedy is proven by the recent Annie Laurie announcement that Hampden Del Ruth is the creator of Anita Stewart's new vehicle, "The Delicate Pearl" a First National attraction recently completed under the direction of Edwin Carewe. It will be the feature at the Parthenon Monday, Friday and Saturday. Mr. De Ruth for the past few years has been in charge of the production of numerous comedies and was previously an important factor in the making of Mack Sennett's comedies.

"The Delicate Pearl" is a startling mystery drama. It deals with the life of the character and locale which have never before been in the screen. The author, Rupert Hughes, takes the spectator through the wonderland of the Alaska Indian country, and the story deals with a mystery that keeps everyone guessing at the end. Miss Stewart is given a chance to display her talents in the role of a girl of Indian blood, who is left to fend for herself in the world. Throughout the production, the story opens with an unfortunate episode in the life of a girl of Indian blood, who is left to fend for herself in the world. Throughout the production, the story opens with an unfortunate episode in the life of a girl of Indian blood, who is left to fend for herself in the world. Attacked by a man in a lonely cabin, she defends herself and escapes. But she is left to believe that she has killed her assailant.

If green peppers are not available, left-over meat croquettes may be substituted, or hash on toast for lunch.

The fish may be plain or pan broiled. In the latter case grease the spider a little, and when hot put the fish in, skin side down, cook slowly and when the fish seems to leave the bones remove to a hot platter, season with melted butter and pepper.

Remember that the secret of savory boiled fish is that the water in which it is boiled be well salted. This doesn't mean that any sprinkling of salt is sufficient. It means that as much as an ounce of salt to a quart of water should be used.

When a fish is to be steamed, it should be placed in an earthen dish and then a little vinegar should be poured over it. It should then be placed in the refrigerator for a couple of hours, well covered. Then the vinegar should be drained off and the fish is ready for the steaming process of cooking.

To freshen salt fish always remember that you should place it in the water with the skin side up, the flesh side down. The salt then as it soaks out of the fish sinks to the bottom of the dish. If the skin side is down the salt soaks into the fish and is caught by the skin, and so there is as salty a taste as ever when the fish is cooked, for the salt has all collected in the skin.

Remember that smelts spoil more easily than most fish, and should therefore be kept most carefully.

When you are cooking oysters in their shells always place them in a pan with the rounded sides down, to hold as much juice as possible.

SUGGESTIONS

Paper Cups for Funnels—Have a paper cup and keep it handy to use as a funnel. When you fill the salt and pepper shakers pour the salt or pepper from the large parcel in which it is purchased, and as the paper cup will bend at a sharp angle, and thus enable one to pour a thin stream, you can fill a very small mouthed shaker without spilling a bit. Also use it for filling the vinegar and olive oil cruets, and by rinsing it out and drying it, it can be used over and over.

Women Who Wear Camisoles and bloomers that slip on with elastic at waist usually find the elastic is stretched and "dead" after the garment has been to the laundry a few times and so the best thing is to sew a hook and eye, or snappers, firmly on the end of the elastic and remove it before the garment is washed. A safety pin makes a "header" that does not allow the tape to slip while it is put in.

FOR THE SICKROOM

A suggestion for the sick room is as follow: Buy five cents worth of prepared soil from the florist. Fill an ornamental pan or jar half full of the earth, fill the jar with water (keep filled), and place this on the radiator or register. It will make the air feel as if a fresh shower had fallen in the green woods.
