Walter Johnson Speed King, Lets New York Yankees Down With Five Hits

KNOCKED OUT BY PITCHED BALL BUT CONTINUES GAME

Kingpin of All the Hurlers Shows Graveness in Close Contest.

By Associated Press:

NEW YORK, April 29—Washington got an even break with the New York Yankees by winning the last game of the series by a score of 2 to 1. Johnson outpitched Jack Quinn, though it took a great catch by Milan to save Johnson in the 9th inning. A home run by Picinich proved to be Washington's winning run. Johnson was knocked unconscious on a queer play in the fifth inning. In trying to throw out Bodie at first, Third Baseman Shannon hit Johnson on the head with the ball, but the pitcher continued the game. Score:

Brains and Wallop Hard to Find

By ED HUGHES.
The Famous Sports Cartoonist.
(Copyright, 1920, by the Wheeler Sydicate, Inc.)

Sometimes a clear, well lubricated brain doesn't accompany that other prize ring virtue—a stiff wallop. When it does, fightdom glimpses a champion—or something near it. When it doesn't the unfortunate boxer is lucky if he becomes even a near champion. Such was the case of Sailor Burke who will be remembered not many years back as one of the toughest middleweights ever produced in or about Manhattan.

Burke, who wasn't an Irishman at all, but whose real name was Prasser, achieved fame as the first man to knock out Joe Grim, "The Iron Man." This was a feat Bob Fitzsimmons, Jack Johnson, Joe Gans and all the heavy hitters of that period had failed to accomplish. Burke could surely hit and had he more brains and a little more heart he might have become a champion.

Usually Got K. O.

When the Sailor followed instructions from his corner he usually terminated his bout with a knockout. But there is always the possibility of receiving a chop on the chin when turning the head cornerwards for instruction. Burke's manager realized this but he hated to let the mariner work out his fistic destinies with his own unreliable noodle. Then a brilliant idea struck him.

"Say, Sailor," piped the mentor, "Yale and Princeton use number signals for moves on the football field. Why not the same thing for Sailor Burke in the ring?"

Burke's face flashed a grin. "What could be sweeter?" opined Mr. Prasser.

So Burke in his ingenuous manager worked out the plan. Such and such a number called from the corner meant to side-step, another stood for uppercut, another for the "one-two" etc. They had a numeral for every move on the pugilistic checker board.

Worked Fine.

The first try out the Burke coaching code received was with the sailor's big Gotham rival, Willie Lewis. The thing worked fine for the first two rounds. Lewis was dumfounded when he heard the numbers being called off and Burke's cleverness surprised him. It was a gruelling fight, first Lewis having the upper hand and then Burke asserting the mastery. Perhaps it was the general strain attending a big fight or it might have been too large an order for Burke's gray matter. Or maybe it was one of Lewis' heavy wallops. But at any rate Burke's substitute for brain work—this signal code—didn't work. The sailor forgot the numbers and what they represented. He became so confused trying to remember them and also follow instructions that Lewis made a show of him—finally knocking the Brooklyn star out in the sixth round.

After that Burke never used the number system in a fight. But his fighting days were numbered for Willie Lewis taught him that there is no home made recipe for brains. Burke fought with his own head after that but he didn't become a world beater or give that type of fisticuffs very great concern.

LONDON, April 29. — Plans for British participation in the Antwerp Olympic games are being held up pending the outcome of the money raising campaign for financing the entrants. Pressing appeals have been made in recent weeks for 13,000 pounds sterling, of which 1,600 pounds have been subscribed up to the present.

"There has been no lessening in the country's traditional enthusiasm for sport, nor can the withholding of funds be interpreted as an indication of any lack of sympathy for world games nor of ill feeling growing out of previous meets," said Sec'y Laffan of the British Olympic association to the Associated Pres this afternoon. "Our main difficulty has been the multiplicity of appeals on behalf of the war charities."
