A Treatise on the cultivation of Peach Trees, showing how effectually to prevent the Grub, or worm, from injuring them, &c. To which are annexed certain cures for White Swelling, Dropsy, and Scrofula. By J. E. Christian.

Notice.—After considerable research, with much anxiety, for twelve or fifteen years, it at length gives me patinular pleasure to have it in my power to communicate to the public an effectual remedy to prevent the Grub, or Worm, from, in the least, injuring Peach Trees and also, make them grow more thrifty.

Notwithstanding I have twice made known, through the public papers, this remedy, which has long, and with much solicitude been sought through the length breadth of our country, I still consider the discovery of such great importance to the public that I should think myself unfaithful to society, were I not to make known all the particulars concerning it. To me it is indeed very exhilarating to be able to say, emphatically, that I have, without doubt, found out that long sought remedy. And have no doubt but the same surprise will be felt by all lovers of that excellent fruit, when they read this good news. In fact, the remedy is so obvious that it carries conviction with its mere relation, for I thought, and is so simple and easy that many will be astonished that it was not sooner discovered. The community will no doubt agree with me, that its simplicity and convenience increase, if possible, its value.

Another reason for this publication is, that so few men pay any attention to remedies published in the papers. I was not aware of these things until after my first publication; and if I knew that my second would have the desired effect, I would not attempt the proof.

Rheumatism.—While writing on this subject, thoughts of olden times crowd thick in my mind. Yes, when I was but a small boy, I saw peach orchards in their vigor and prime, and the delicious fruit hang abundantly and most invitingly on the then large and flourishing Peach Trees. Many a day have I assisted to gather that charming fruit; and I was delighted each year, when my father repaired the kiln for the purpose of drying peaches. I recollect of hearing my father say that he was once in Lexington, and several Indians being there, he offered them some dried, but they shook their heads; then stirring them some peaches, they said with delight, "ah! peache, peache." So we see that even the savages are not only fond, but very fond of peaches. How often have I looked, with painful pleasure, back to those times. But now I can say, how pleasantly pleasing the fond recollection.—Yes, I almost attribute that I now taste that palatable dish, soft peaches and sweet milk.

I also remember that of late years I have sprouted and planted hundreds and hundreds of peach stones, and when my hopes were as I thought almost realized, suddenly my prospects were all blasted; but now they are vigorous, erect and increasing.

Properties.—There are few trees more ornamental of life, or more productive, than the peach tree. How often have we seen them apparently dead, and yet in the spring some few twigs would be in full bloom, as if awaiting to depart—lingering to life until the worm at the root has consumed all vitality, and even then not willing to leave without unfolding her beautiful blossoms.

By judicious planting, I have obtained one good crop of peaches. The spring after, the prospect still appeared goodly but alas, before the fruit was half grown, it began to wither, ripen, and drop off. This it was with me from time to time, until I had nearly given up the idea of trying to raise peaches. At length, however, found a remedy—a sure remedy—a remedy that I am confident will never fail. The my hopes are not always gone, but grow brighter, and that continually. Now that we have good encouragement to raise and improve that precious fruit, I have no doubt, in a few years we will see plenty (if such a thing can be) of peaches in this country, and of the best kind.

How pleasing, when a neighbor steps in, to have a basket, of choice peaches to set before him, which would have been my case this year, had it not been for the late frosts. Yet I feel assured it will not be as formerly—instead of the worm killing the trees, they will now be growing vigorously for the next year.

What tree unfolds her beautiful blossoms earlier in the spring? What fruit more nourishing in the summer and fall, or more wholesome in winter? Well might our hearts sadden, when we thought there was no remedy.

How Discovered.—For twelve or fifteen years, I have endeavored to get all the information I could on the subject of cultivating peach trees—to find, if possible, something that would prevent the worm or grub from destroying them—but all in vain, until, about three years ago, my brother was speaking of having put manure around his apple trees, and how much they were benefitted by it. The thought occurred to me that manure would also be beneficial to peach trees. While thinking on this subject I concluded that by pressing large lots of manure around the trees at the root, they might thereby be preserved from the worm. I concluded that by putting it around them about the last of July or first of August, it would at any rate prevent the fly from getting to the tender bark to deposite her eggs. Accordingly I done so, and have repeated it, and others, at my suggestion, have done the same, and find it to be an effectual remedy

Beards or no Beards.

A correspondent of the London Daily News, writing under the signature of "A Working Man," has the following admirable observations on this subject:—

"As the above movement appears to be engrossing some of the public attention, I trust you will not consider the following observations in relation to the growth of the hair on the face unworthy of your notice.

Each hair is furnished with a distinct gland, elaborately and beautifully complete. Under the facial hair are innumerable nerves, immediately connected with the various organs of the senses, ramifying in every direction, and performing most important functions. This hair, when in full growth, forms a natural protector to the nerves, and also holds, as it were, in suspension, a quantity of warm air through which the cold air in breathing passes, and so becoming rarified or attempered, enters the lungs without giving to their delicate texture that severe shock which arises from the sudden admission of cold, so often the forerunner of fatal disorders, (any one putting his fingers under the hair of his head will there feel warm air.) The hair also wards off east winds, a prolific source of toothache and other pains, and so tends to preserve those useful and ornamental appendages, the teeth.

It is said that an intimate connection exists between the moustache and the nerves of the eye, and that many diseases of the eye are traceable to shaving. Who has not felt his eyes smart under the application of a dull razor?

May not shaving, by depriving the lungs of the male of their natural protection, and exposing them to the uninterrupted action of cold air, tend to weaken the chest, and that weakness being transmitted in an increasing proportion from generation to generation, at length induce consumption or consumptive tendency?

Persons who wear their hair under their chins, do not, except in rare cases, suffer from sore throats.

There is in the crypt of Hythe Church a vast pile of bones, which were gathered many years after a battle fought on the sea-shore, between the Danes and Saxons, about one thousand years since, and amongst them are skulls of aged warriors, finely developed, the teeth in many of which are so perfect, so beautifully sound, and so firmly imbedded in their sockets, that you cannot move them. The owners of these teeth wore beards, and the writer remembers witnessing, several years ago, some excavations on the site of the old priory at Spalding, when many stone coffins were dug out whose inmates had, almost without exception, sound, entire, and elegants sets of teeth. Did not beard grow on their chins?

Shaving occupies, on an average, fifteen minutes. A man who shaves every morning for fifty years, thus employs in that time upwards of 380 days, of 12 hours each. Is this a profitable application of our fleeting moments?

The face, exposed to a microscope immediately after shaving, presents a most unsightly appearance, the stumps assuming the forms of narrow totes sawn transversely.

Do not the teachers of the faculty approve of moustaches?—and are they not of opinion that they play a most important part in the animal economy?

Is it not probable that, by unduly stimulating the growth of hair by shaving, we draw too largely on, and so cause an unnatural action of the nerves, producing an injurious effect (no matter how slight) on the brain?

Did not the patriarchs and sages of old wear beards, and were they not remarkable for longevity, as well as for being exceedingly fine-looking fellows?

Is not shaving a bore?—and does not a man whilst undergoing the operation, look extremely ridiculous? And if it is right to rasp the chin, why not the eyebrows and the head also?

Does it not appear foolish to shave on a cold morning, that which nature has provided to protect us against the cold?

Do we not at once despise and hold too cheaply a beneficient arrangement, and infringe a natural law, when we cut off what Providence says so plainly shall grow, for the more a man shaves the more the hair grows, even to the hour of his death? The beard shall become bald, but the face never.

In conclusion, when man was created he had given to him a beard, and who will dare to say that it was not a good gift? Turn to the first chapter Genesis, and you will find that God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good.

I could go on almost indefinitely; but, for fear of being considered too prosy, I will only ask: Are we justified in shaving?"

A Mammoth Bouquet, composed of 100,000 violets, arranged in the form of a dome, surrounded by 300 camelias, was recently presented to the Empress of France by the Horticultural Society of Toulouse. The diameter of the bouquet was two feet and a half, and the artificial stem upon which it was built, a yard high.

Fall in Wool.—At Painesville, on Wednesday night last, as the ten o'clock train was approaching the depot, it ran through a flock of sheep lying on the track, killing twenty-two of them. They were the property of R. W. Skinner, and had broken out of the field in which they had been kept.

Affray at New Orleans.—Dan Rice was attacked at New Orleans, a few days ago, by a man named Robinson, formerly attached to his circus. A pistol which Rice held was twice accidentally discharged, a ball from which passed into the foot of a boy in the vicinity.

Another Shipwreck.—The new packet ship Robert L Lane, from New York, for New Orleans, with an assorted cargo, went ashore recently on the Berry Islands, near Nassau, N. P. She was valued at 90,000.

Facts You May Depend On!

THE ladies and gentlemen of Rising Sun and vicinity are requested to call at the

LARGE HOUSE, NO. 10, MAIN STREET,

Where they can find four hundred packages of goods direct from the importers in New York, that are opened and for sale; and as the undersigned is connected with a large jobbing house in Cincinnati, and also one that imports exclusively in New York, and thereby supplies his retail store in Rising Sun, Aurora and Petersburg with every variety of dry goods, I flatter myself that I sell cheaper and better goods than any other merchant in the city. My stock is full, and consists in part of the following articles, to-wit: Straw bonnets, from 25 cents to $3; silk bonnets, from $2 25 to $4; Mantillas from $2 50 to $10; Lawns from 5 cents to 25 per yard; Calicoes from 3 to 8 cents per yard; Muslins of all qualities and prices; Crape Shawls and crape goods of the latest styles and most approved fashions; Ribbons from 3 to 25 cents per yard; Hats, Caps, Boots, Shoes, and Clothing of the greatest variety.

I have a young man in my store who has been for several years engaged in cutting clothing, and is an experienced workman; and by his aid I flatter myself that I can defy all competition in this line of trade. apr 1m ISAAC ZELLER.

Fairview Buildings for Sale!

TWO large Warehouses and one Dwelling house situated on the corner of Main and front streets in the city of Rising Sun, will be offered at public sale on the 27th day of May, 1854. Those warehouses have a front of 20 feet each, with a depth of 70 feet; 4 story high on the river sid, and two story on front street, and adjoining the Main street landing. These stories can be entered from the streets. They are built in a substantial manner, and have heavy foundations. The materials are of the best quality and the work well done. The house is a new one, sold, and a good business has been done, both by the way of goods, and also in pork packing, for which they are well yet suited. For storing and shipping produce, either by steam or flat boat, they cannot be surpassed. The buildings would suit well for a running mill. The lot runs to the river; and there is room to take up a wharf boat in front of the buildings and adjoining the landing.

The dwelling house adjoining the warehouse is a brick front, two story high, and a good cellar; three rooms on the first floor, with a passage, and five on the second, with a pantry fronting the river, on both first and second stories. The title is indisputable and no encumbrance on the property whatever. The reason for selling is, the owner is residing in the City of Baltimore, and it is inconvenient for him to attend to it. Terms—one third on the day of sale, one third in twelve months, and one third in two years. The whole of the property with six per cent interest secured by mortgage.

N. B. The property may be purchased at a private sale if application be made soon. Colonel H. E. Dodd will show the property to any one wishing to purchase and give any necessary information. apr25 JAMES S. BRAY.

I HAVE just received one of the most elegant assortments of Cloths, Cassimeres, Vestings, &c., ever brought to this market. Also a very superior stock of gentlemen's furnishing goods in endless variety. The above goods were selected by myself from the stocks of the largest importing houses in New York, and I feel confident I shall be able to give satisfaction in every particular to all who may favor me with their patronage. These descriptions of goods in my line would do well to give me a call before purchasing elsewhere. Remember the old stand, No. 165 Main street.

WHOLESALE
Book and Stationery House
IN NEW YORK,
On the Cash Plan!

EXTENSIVE sales and no losses make it profitable to sell at very low prices.

Mason Brothers,
23 Park Row, opposite the Astor House,
NEW YORK,

Offer one of the most extensive stocks and complete assortments in the country of books and stationery, for cash only.

The amount of goods in our line purchased by country merchants is usually quite small, compared with their dry goods, hardware, and other lines, and this very circumstance, added to the fact that our business is conducted on the cash plan, to get larger profits in order to make up for the losses and extra expenses necessarily involved in a credit business of small amounts. It is absolutely for the merchant to make arrangements to buy his bookbill for cash, the night it might not be so convenient for him to purchase his larger bills in this way.

These considerations have led us to adopt in our business, from this date, January, 1854, the following principles, viz: small profits, ready payments and terms always cash.

Being ourselves the sole publishers of a number of the leading and most extensively selling School Books in the country, as well as works in other departments, our facilities are unsurpassed.

Call upon us, or send an order, and judge for yourselves, if the saving you can make by buying of us for cash is worth while.

Our location is very central, and easily found. Stand on the Astor House steps, and look straight forward across the corner of the Park, and you cannot avoid seeing our signs. Remember, the name is mar24 MASON BROTHERS.
