Plaint of the Old Man.

This was published some years ago in a book, now probably forgotten, edited by Miss Sheridan, entitled the "Comic Offering." The author's name was not stated.

Some boast of their sons' fore-fathers—I—
I have not (we)
I am—I think (like Joshua,)
The son of Noah!

Heedless in youth, we little note
How quick time passes,
For then flow gaily—wine—not blood—
In our glasses!

Rich friends (poor in honor) all have fled
Society's—
Pshaw!—had they Dives's riches, they'd not be
A mortal's relation.

I've neither child or child, as I have nothing, why
This in my station
Yet who that hears a squalling babe wishes not
To be
A little urchin!

Some few years back my spirits and my youth
Were quite amazing;
Brisk as a per—n's fancy perfumed
Just fresh from Gray's Inn.

What am I now?—nearly, old and poor, and by
The parish fed;
Their praise keeps me, while many an ass enjoy
The parish bread!

From Bancroft's History.

Daniel Boone.

In his peaceful habitation on the bank of the Yadkin River in North Carolina, Daniel Boone, the illustrious hunter, had heard Finley, a trader, memorable as the pioneer, describe a tract of the land west of Virginia as the richest in North America or the world. In May 1769, leaving his wife and offspring, having Finley as his pilot and four others as companions, the young man of about three-and-twenty wandered forth through the wilderness of America, "in quest of the country of Kentucky," known to the savages as "the Dark and Bloody Ground," between the subjects of the Five Nations and the Cherokees. After a long and fatiguing journey through mountain ranges, the party in June found themselves on the Red River, a tributary to the Kentucky, and from the top of an eminence surveyed with delight the beautiful plain that stretched to the north-west. Here they they built their shelter and began to reconnoiter and hunt. All the kind of wild beasts that were natural to America—the stately elk, the timid deer, the antlered stag, the wild cat, the bear, the panther and the wolf—crouched among the canes, or roamed over the rich grasses which, even beneath the thickest shades, sprang luxuriantly out of the generous soil. The buffaloes cropped fearlessly the herbage, browsed on the leaves of the reed, and were more frequent than cattle in the settlements of Carolina herdsmen. Sometimes there were hundreds in a drove, and round salt-licks their number was amazing.

The summer in which for the first time a party of white men enjoyed the brilliancy of the nature near and in the valley of the Elkhorn, passed away in the occupations of exploring parties and the chase. But one by one, Boone's companions dropped off, till he was left alone with John Stewart. They jointly found unceasing delight in the wonders of the forest, till one evening near Kentucky river, they were taken prisoner by a band of Indians, wanderers like themselves. They escaped and were joined by Boone's brother; so that when Stewart was soon after killed by savages, the first victim among the hecatomb of white men slain by them in their desperate battling for the lovely hunting ground, Boone still had his brother to share with him the dangers and attraction of the wilderness, the building and occupying the first cottage in Kentucky.

In the spring of 1770, that brother returned to the settlements for horses and suplies of ammunition, leaving the renowned hunter by himself without bread, or salt, or sugar, or even a horse or dog." "The idea of a beloved wife," anxious for his safty, tinged his thoughts with sadness; but otherwise the cheerful, meditative man, careless of wealth, knowing the use of the rifle, not the plough, of a strong, robust frame, in the vigorous health of manhood, ignorant of books but versed in the forest and forest life, ever fond of tracking the deer on foot, away from men, yet his disposition humane, generous and gentle, was happy in the uninterrupted succession "of sylvan pleasures."

He had no serious intercourse with beauty
Old as creation.

One calm summer's evening, as he climbed a commanding ridge, and looked out upon the remote "venerable mountains," and the nearer ample plains, and caught a glimpse in the distance of the Ohio, which bounded the land of his affections with majestic grandeur, his heart exulted in the region he had discovered. "All things were still." Not a breeze so much as shook a leaf. He kindled a fire near a fountain of sweet water, and feasted on the loin of the buck. He was no more alone than a bee among flowers, but communed familiarly with the whole universe of life. Nature was his intimate, and as the roaving woodsman leaned confidingly on her bosom, she responded to his intelligence.

For him the rocks and the fountains, the leaf and the blades of grass had life; the cooling air laden with the wild perfume came to him as a friend; the dewy morning wrapped him in its embrace; the trees stood up gloriously round about him as so many myriades of companions. All forms wore the character of desire or peril. But how could he be afraid? Triumphing over danger, he knew no fear. The perpetual howling of the wolves by night round his cottage or his hivouac in the brake, was his diversion; and by day he had joy in surveying the various species of animals that surrounded him. He loved the solitude better than the towered city or the hum of business.

Near the end of July, 1770, his faithful brother came back to meet him at the old camp. Shortly after they proceeded together to Cumberland river, giving names to the different waters; and he then returned to his wife and children, fixed in his purpose at the risk of life and fortune to bring them as soon as possible to live in Kentucky, which he esteemed a second Paradise.

Farmers' Department.

Sowing Winter Wheat.

A correspondent asks some questions on this subject, which might profitably fill a long article in the answer; but we have not the space now to give more than categorical replies.

The best time of sowing. Without much qualification we may allow this to be the first half of September. Some prefer the last half of August; and of course ten days one way or the other would be likely to effect no considerable result, except as it might take us into a spell of weather, wetter or dryer as the case might be, than we should otherwise meet. We have known the autumn so dry from the first of August, that no kernel of wheat would sprout till spring, and a splendid crop to be the result. Other seasons August is a very wet month; but it is much more apt to be dry than September. On the whole, the first half of this month is the better rule, with such variations as peculiarities may justify.

Quantity of seed. Something will depend on the quality of the seed, and the mode of sowing. If put in with a good drill, and the seed be good, we should prefer one and a half bushels per acre. Others would say one bushel or five pecks, but plentiful seed is the better rule. If sowed broadcast and the seed be perfect, one or two pecks ought to be added to the quantity used with a drill. If the seed is in any wise defective by shrinkage or injured seed—as will be the case with the best wheat, if threshed with a machine—a proportionate quantity will be needed in addition. As to foul seeds of any kind no addition should ever be made for them, since no man ought to sow either cockle or chess any-where; or rye with wheat. Seed wheat, too, should be grown by itself and not be cut till fully ripened, and then threshed with a flail.

Best mode of putting in the crop. We have no hesitancy in saying we believe that to be a good drill, with flukes seven inches apart. There may be difficulty sometimes in making the drill work on very mellow ground, or in stubble land; and in our opinion it ought not to work on the latter, since stubble land is not a fit place to sow wheat. The drill is best because it deposites the seed at even depth, covers it all completely, thereby saves a quantity of seed and leaves the young crop in such a condition, that the sand, instead of blowing away from the roots is blown to them, by the winter winds.—Plowing in, sometimes succeeds, but is very liable to bury the seed too deep.

The roller. This is a field implement too little used in the West, where of all places in the world it is most needed. Our prairie lands are always in danger of getting too light and require to be pressed together. In England, this has long been an indispensable part of farm practice, and in some places, animals, and even men and women are employed to tread the ground all over, so as to pack the repelling particles together. The roller also breaks down the clods, and puts the field in good order for the hay or harvest machinery.

In loams, where the ground heaves, a spring rolling is desirable to settle the earth about the roots of such plants as have been started by the frost. It would do no harm on light lands, but would not be so essential as the fall rolling.

There is a great difference in the varieties of wheat. The finest sorts for flour are said to be delicate of constitution, and vice versa. We have known the Mediterranean wheat to bring forty bushels per acre, while a beautiful white wheat by its side grew only fifteen.

Hints for September.

In the Northern Middle and Western States, it is the common practice to sow winter wheat in the month of September; in the cotton-growing States, seeding is delayed till October and sometimes till December.—As a general rule, early sowing gives the best crops; other things being equal. Every farmer should use a drill who can conveniently do so; for less seed will answer its purpose, it can be covered at a more uniform depth and with a good machine, it will be more evenly distributed over the ground. Wheat threshed with a six or eight horse power apparatus is usually so much broken that many farmers in Western New York sow two bushels per acre, and few less than one and a half bushels, when not put in with a drill. Such as use that implement, find four or five pecks sufficient to seed an acre.

In some districts, corn will be ready to cut up at the roots by the last of this month; and wherever fodder is an object, the operation should be performed before frost shall damage the green plants. After the kernels are well glazed the grain ripens without much if any shrinkage, where corn is cut at the ground and set up in small stacks to cure. There ought not to stand too long single, and exposed to the weather, for such exposure to the fall rains injures the stalk and sometimes the corn. Forage of all kinds needs shelter; and it is the part of wisdom to have a plenty of barn and shed room on every farm. Husk corn early and put up the stalks and husks in good stacks, where they cannot be housed.

Apples are not very plenty this year, and the crop is likely to pay liberally for all the attention bestowed in saving them in good condition. Every year's experience serves to satisfy farmers more and more of the importance of fruit-culture. Skill and capital are, however, quite as necessary in this branch of rural industry as in any other. Good fruit of all kinds sells readily and at remunerating prices. Give your fruit trees the benefit of some manure, and strengthen the soil by a dressing of lime and ashes. Apple orchards in particular are often cropped with grain or hay to the injury of the land; and as the annual growth of leaves and fruit rarely rots under the trees, the soil needs considerable manure to maintain its fertility.

Pains in the Joints, Palpitation of the Heart,
Periodical Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia,
Deafness, Biliousness, Urinary Calculi, Asthma,
Hysterics, Pains in the chest,
Side Headache, &c., &c.
The Electric Chains
Are secured by patent in this country, England, France, Germany, Austria, and Belgium—and are also used in every hospital in the city of New York, as well as in Europe—are highly recommended by Prof. Valentine Mott, Van Buren, Post, and Carnochan. A pamphlet, containing much valuable information can be had gratis, who will explain their mode of use. Price of chain $5 to $6.
"Thunder and powder well." The principles upon which it is claimed that the chains produce their marvelous cures are first—that all NERVOUS DISEASES are attended and produced by a deficient supply of nervous fluid, an agent that closely resembles electricity, or electro magnetism and 2d—that the electro magnetic fluid being worn next and upon the part and organ diseased furnish the deficient nervous system, in its powerful tingling effects, the power so long wanted is required to produce a healthy action through the entire system. No disagreeable medicine is required to be taken while using the chain but a rigid observance to the general laws of health is required. Brisk friction upon the part diseased, adds much to the effect of the chains, by increasing their power.
RHEUMATISM. The most severe cases of chronic rheumatism can be cured by wearing the chain a few days. Showering with cold water, and brisk friction to the part affected should be observed under all circumstances. The common practice of rubbing on some greasy liniment is is always to no one. The most severe acute pain can be instantly relieved by a single application of the chain.
FEMALE DISEASES.—In this class of diseases, the electric chains have proved more effectual than any other remedy. In prolapsus uteri they are much more convenient, are more easily worn (weighing but two ounces) than the galvanic supporter, which is heavy and uncomfortable. By attaching one end of the chain upon the abdomen and the other upon the spine, they relieve the hips, the usual troublesome symptoms of that lingering complaint are once relieved. A constant current of electro magnetism is sent through the parts, which acts as a powerful stimulant to the nervous system.
$1,000 will be given to any person who will produce so many well-authenticated certificates of cures, both from intelligent patients and scientific physicians, of nervous diseases, as have been performed by the use of Pulvermacher's Electric Chains within the last year.
For sale in all the principal towns in the United States. JOHN D. CRAFT, Rising Sun, only agent for Ohio county.

A POPULAR PRIZE STORY,
WRITTEN BY MISS MATTIE GRIFFITH,
expressly for the Louisville Courier. We do not hesitate to promise that it will be one of the most successful efforts of this popular writer. Miss Griffith is now busily engaged in writing the story and its publication will be commenced early in January. It will be followed in several other original stories from well known writers.
Politics will not occupy our columns to the exclusion of news and miscellaneous matter; and no pains or expense will be spared to make the Courier an except, his visitor to the family, and an indispensable aid to the man of business.
Notwithstanding the great increase in the price of the paper upon which the Courier is printed, and the large addition to our expenses it entails, our terms of subscription will be as heretofore, viz:
WE WILL STILL SEND THE WEEKLY COURIER for one year for $1 in advance.
We expect to make up all our losses by the business of our list, and ask the aid of our friends to that end. We wish it distinctly understood, however, that we seek no man's patronage who does not think the paper is fully worth the very small price charged for it.
OUR TERMS.
We will adhere rigidly to the CASH SYSTEM and never depart from it in any case. At the following prices, the WEEKLY COURIER is unquestionably

AFFLICTED READ!
PHILADELPHIA MEDICAL HOUSE—Established 20 years ago by Dr. KINKELIN, corner of Third and Union sts. between Spruce and Pine, Philadelphia, Pa.
INVALIDS are appraised that Dr. Kinkelin confines his practice to a particular branched medicine, which engages his undivided attention. He cautions the unfortunate against the abuse of mercury; thousands are annually murdered out of life. Recent affections are promptly extinguished.
TWENTY YEARS OF EXPERIENCE
In the treatment of a class of diseases hitherto neglected and imperfectly understood, has enabled Dr. Kinkelin (Author of a work on Self Preservation) to prove that nine tenths of the causes of nervous debility, loss of constitutional weakness, mental and physical suffering, are traceable to certain habits, leading the most secret yet deadly and fatal ruinous of domestic happiness and premature mortality.
TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE
There is an evil habit, sometimes practiced by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manhood, and which, if not relinquished in time, not only bereats setting obstacles to matrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted, insidious, and devastating diseases. Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and unaccountable feelings, and vague fears in the mind, which are the usual attendants of guilty indulgence. The unfortunate thus addicted becomes feeble, unable to labor with accustomed vigor, to apply his mind to study; the spirits become nervous and weak, he is dull, irresolute, and engages in his sport with less energy than usual.
If he ever expects himself before the practice has done its worst, and ere matrimony, his marriage is unfruitful, and his sons, tells him that this is caused by his early follies. These considerations which should awaken the attention of those similarly situated.
MARRIAGE
Requires the fulfillment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the cause of mutual happiness. Could the veil which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed—in how many could it be traced to thy-lest disqualifications, and they consequent disappointments. Apply then while it is yet time, in order to have your blooming and relaxed organization invigorated, revivified and strengthened.
REMEMBER
He who places himself under Dr. Kinkelin's treatment may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and rely upon the assurance, that the secrets of Dr. K's patients will never be disclosed.
Young man—let no false modesty deter you from making your case known to one who, from education and respectability, can certainly be friend you.
Too many think they will conceal the secret in their own hearts and cure themselves. Alas! how often is this a fatal delusion, and how many a promising young man, who might have been an ornament to society, has faded from the earth.
Strictures of the urethra are rapidly removed by the application of a new therapeutical agent, used only by Dr. K. Weakness and constitutional debility promptly cured, and full vigor restored.
COUNTRY INVALIDS
Can have (by stating their case explicitly, together with all their symptoms, per letter enclosing a remittance) Dr. K's medicine appropriately accordingly.
Forwarded to any part of the United States, and packed secure from DAMAGE or CURIOSITY.

EAR AND EYE.
DEAFNESS,
Partial or Total Entirely Removed!
TO those suffering under a partial or total loss of the sense of hearing, Dr. Abernethy begs leave to call their attention to the following:
During the past ten years many wonderful discoveries have been made in the practice of Medicine, and more so, perhaps, than in the treatment of the Diseases of the Ear. In the ear infirmaries of Berlin, Leipsic, Brussels, Hamburg and St. Petersburgh, the most signal success has attended the introduction of medicated douches in curing diseases of the middle and internal ear. For the past few years it has been adopted by the most distinguished Aurists in London, with the same marked success. The medicated douche are prepared upon simple Philosophical principles, the patient being enabled to use them himself, in his own dwelling, without exposure, or any inconvenience, for a season from daily to weekly, according to the severity of the disease. The treatment will be in reference to nearly SIX HUNDRED CASES, produced in the U. S., Canada, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, who have been pronounced incurable by eminent practitioners, and not a single case in my hands has failed to receive a good deal of relief, and in most instances complete restoration of the hearing. Many persons have been deaf for years, and have only been induced to try the remedy after hearing of a cure effected at a great distance. Many persons have been cured in a few days, after all other means had failed, and have written to me, expressing their astonishment at the wonderful effect produced upon them by the medicated douche.
