The manifestations of sorrowing sympathy which have come in from all parts of the English-speaking world, form a very striking phenomenon. The late President's struggle for life seems to have been followed with almost as much interest and anxiety in England as here. The Queen in particular has been most cordial in her expressions of sympathy with Mrs. Garfield, and Mrs. Garfield's one published response to the Queen's enquiries was strikingly characterized both by good feeling and good taste. It was in its way a model composition, and we may say of anything written under such circumstances. The way in which the Southern press has shared in the general anxiety and mourning is one of the most gratifying and hopeful incidents of the tragedy, and would, even if it stood alone, go far to warrant the assertion that President Garfield had not died in vain.

It now seems probable that the President will nominate some of the members of his new cabinet during the extra session of the Senate, which begins on the 10th of October. Attorney-General Mac Veagh expects his successor to be named by that time, and there are at least one or two other members of the cabinet who have the same anticipations. The President has not yet matured any plans regarding his cabinet. He expects to go to New York very soon, and will there confer with his friends on the subject. He is extremely solicitous to select advisers who will not only strengthen and uphold his administration, but will also be acceptable to the country at large and to the Republican party in particular. Whether Secretary Blaine will be retained or not is uncertain. He is authorized to keep his place, and the President is aware of it. From the time that General Arthur visited Washington, shortly after the shooting of the President, until the present time, Mr. Blaine has conferred with him quite frequently. He has visited him in New York three times, and came with him on the special train from New York to Long Branch the day after the President died.

While I was enjoying, (says the Dairy of a Reformed Lecturer), a drive about Maryland, Missouri, the driver, who was a philosopher, lectured briefly on circuses. He told of a man who came to Maryland with his girl one day last summer, to go to the circus. He depended on meeting a man in town who owed him a dollar, and when he got there the man had stayed far, far away, and the circus was one of the unattainable things. The disappointed man sat down on a salt barrel and wept and howled. He hadn't a nickel in his pocket, and his girl hadn't a nickel. He hadn't a friend in Maryland. He didn't know a soul in Nodoway county. He was a stranger in an alien land, and there wasn't one single, solitary, lingering, familiar face about the circus. "But," said the driver, "he raised the dollar. He borrowed it somewhere of an utter stranger, that was moved to pity by his woe and desolation. You can't keep a man out of a circus. He'll get the money for a ticket if the Government has to lend it to him. Why," exclaimed the philosopher of the whip and reins, "if it wasn't for a circus, there are some men in this State that never would have had fifty cents in all their lives." And I thought I had never heard so much truth in one short sentence.

The way of the transgressor is hard. Deacon Richard Smith, of the Cincinnati Gazette, belted the Republican municipal ticket last spring and supported the Democratic nominee for mayor. He is now in sore distress, because the Democratic nominee, having been elected, "acts after his kind"—that is to say, puts every Republican out of office and puts a Democrat in his place. The Deacon ought to have known better in the first place; but he is a reformer, and the leading idea with all reformers is to punish your friends and reward your enemies.

Two of the learned professions are antagonists at Berne, N. Y., in the persons of Dr. Becker and Rev. John Shaffer. It is said that for two years the clergyman bore many affronts meekly, but at length, when the doctor kicked him in so public a place as the postoffice, he seized his tormentor by the beard and rousers, threw him across a counter, and pummeled him well. A case for civil and religious trial is the result.

—Fred Swartz, a Cincinnati law student, was made deaf by smoking cigarettes.

—Governor Porter has issued a proclamation declaring the nets of the last General Assembly in force, and every man in the State is presumed to know the laws. If he is ignorant of them, he may have his attention called to them by the grand jury, or by the constables.

—The number of insane persons in the United States is put down by experts at 100,000, and the same authorities say that from ten to twenty per cent. are curable by present methods.

—Through his long days of suffering, there was never a word of complaint or reproach fell from Mr. Garfield's lips about Guiteau. He seemed to have never known or knowing, to have forgotten the very name of his assassin. This was but another illustration of the nobility of the dead man's character. The more it is known the better and brighter it appears.

The moral courage that will face obloquy in a good cause is a much rarer gift than the bodily valor that will confront death in a bad one.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 26, '80.

On July 2nd the nation became the bedside attendant of its stricken Chief. For they are gathered around his grave from North to South a band of brothers, subdued by a common grief. Not for many years has there been seen and felt a union so complete as to-day exists between the people of this country. How gratifying it is to see the nation united in grief, and how comforting it is to see the nation united in hope.

Another hand now guides the ship of state. General Arthur is President, patriotic and skillful, and no danger to the craft need be apprehended.

The terrible days of patient and heroic suffering through which General Garfield has passed, have softened and subdued the hearts of all, and General Arthur receives a support and a source of strength that the change came as suddenly as the attack of the assassin. He will prove to be a good President and deserves the confidence and support of all good citizens.

Chauncey L. Filer, of St. Louis, has been named as a possible candidate for Post Master General.

Ladies' Dress Cheaper.

From the Chicago Tribune.

It's not going to be very expensive to dress well this winter. Ladies can no longer put twenty-five or thirty yards of silk into dresses; they are to be made very plain, mostly embroidered with chenille or beads, and must clear the ground ten or twelve inches, according to the foot of the wearer.

At present the great rage of the females is for lovely stockings and nobby shoes. Black silk hose are the favorites, into which are let rows of Chantilly or Maltese lace. At Long Branch ladies do it themselves; buy black silk stockings and insert strips of handsome lace over the instep.

In New York a delightful employment and a beautiful article of dress is accomplished by knitting what are termed railroad stockings. The most stupid person can knit round and round, and that is all that is required. For the pleasure of my Chicago sisters I append the recipe:

There is a silk knitting thread sold here at twenty-nine cents a ball, four of which make a big pair of stockings; but I find the yarn too soft, and prefer a tightly twisted finer thread, which I purchase of a fringe maker in skeins, weighing five ounces.

Cast on twenty-eight stitches on the needles and knit away till you have a slender pipe (entirely suggestive of a stocking) and about one-half a yard long—not that, if the stocking is not desired an extra length. Then knit round once, dropping every fourth stitch; these dropped stitches will run to the top of the stocking, stripping it in lovely open work, and making it instantaneously one-third longer, and wide enough for the largest sort of leg.

After this, the stocking being as many stitches smaller as you have dropped, you knit about three inches at that size, and then toe off. "What! no heel?" I hear the uninitiated exclaim. No heel. "It's a poor foot that won't shape its own stocking," the old lady said when she knit them this way; but the extreme elasticity of the railroad hose makes a heel unnecessary. They are durable, they are handsome; and they are such jolly things to have round for work that I anticipate my Chicago sisters will thank me for the recipe.

A SURE cure for consumption, bronchial affections, sore lungs, whooping cough and all complaints of the throat, lungs or chest. We mean Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup.

WORKINGMEN! look to your interests and save doctor bills, by using Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup for all cases of coughs, colds, etc. Price only twenty-five cents a bottle.

CAMP MEETING.—The African M. E. church of Bloomington, Indiana, will hold a Camp Meeting in the Fair Grounds, one mile west of Bloomington, commencing Oct. 1st, and continuing until Oct. 9th. The following named Ministers will be present and assist: Rev. H. H. Thompson, of New Albany; Rev. H. P. Parker, the Blind Evangelist, of Wyoming, Ohio; Rev. C. H. Thomas of Spencer, and others. Admission at the gate, adults, 10c. Children, 5c. The proceeds to be applied to the payment of the indebtedness of the church. Benjamin Bass, G. W. Walker, Thomas Withrow, Committee of Arrangements. John H. Clay, Pastor in charge.

THE PEOPLE still sing the praises of Twist Bread, of which Benckert is Bloomington's Best Baker. Ice cream and cakes of the best quality can be had at Benckert's. Give him an order for a Pic-Nic or Party, if you desire to see something nice gotten up.

—Old Hamm drew a line in the dust of the road fronting his residence at Dover, Iowa, and said that if any of the Browns, his nearest neighbors, crossed it he would shoot the intruder. Three Brown boys made the venture, and received a slight charge of shot; but they fired as quickly as Hamm did, and with truer aim, for he dropped dead.

—A new and highly successful swindle in Philadelphia is the sale of tea in cans containing prizes. The tea is worthless stuff, and the prizes really given away are worthless brass and glass jewelry. A pretense is made of distributing watches, but they are merely handed to confederates. A large store is crowded constantly with purchasers.

—A Chinese witness in a Philadelphia court, after taking an oath with a particularly loud kiss of the Bible, was asked if he considered himself bound thereby to tell the truth. He complacently answered that the Bible was no more to him than the lawyer's old white hat. The only form of oath that he would respect, he said, was to cut off a chicken's head while repeating certain words in Chinese. A chicken and knife were provided by the opposing counsel, but the Judge said that, though inclined to permit the ceremony, he would adjourn the trial for a week to consider the question.

—Three weeks ago, Dr. Thornton, of this place, formerly of Bloomington, performed a delicate surgical operation on a Mrs. Cannon, residing three miles south of here, in the removal of a tumor weighing twelve pounds. The lady survived the operation, made a splendid recovery, and was enabled to visit the fair at Terre Haute last week a healthy woman.—Brazil Register.
