—There is an apricot tree in Fresno county, Cal., that measures sixty inches around the trunk three feet from the ground. It is estimated that there is not less than a ton of fruit on the tree.

—Fatal leprosy is making its appearance on the lips and tongues of those who smoke the Chinese cigarettes, and yet the smokers will not cease their dangerous indulgence, seeming to regard the warnings as but scarecrows.

—The Indiana Republican Convention demands that all the constitutional amendments proposed shall be voted on at a special election, unqualified by partisan issues. So say you all, gentlemen.

—The London Tablet says of France: "One after another the outward and visible signs of religion are disappearing, and the bulwarks of morality are being cut down." The Spectator, too, "has little hope for democracy penetrated with a kind of active distrust for religion and religious teaching."

—The very few real gypsies in this country always deny that they ever steal children, and argue that, if they had need of any, they could easily supply themselves at foundling asylums. Nevertheless, attention is called to a case of actual gypsy kidnapping. Fourteen years ago a little girl was taken from a strolling party at Genoa, Ohio, and given by the town authorities to a farmer. She has now, at the age of 18, been identified by her parents in Michigan.

—A female who may well be described as a phenomenon is just now being exhibited in London. She is just 18 years of age and is said to be eight feet two inches in height. To crown the matter she is still growing. Her face is rather prepossessing, and her feet are simply prodigious. The only disagreeable peculiarity of this fair giantess is that she cannot hold herself easily erect. She always appears to be sitting or falling down.

—The only way to deal with a liar is to beat him at his own game. This is, of course, unless he is the editor of a news newspaper. What started this item was reading about an American who had been to Europe, and who was telling a friend, who knew he was a liar, about his trip across the Atlantic, and how, on the 25th of the month, "they encountered a swarm of locusts, and the locusts carried away every stitch of the canvas of the ship." The listener looked thoughtful a moment and then said, hesitatingly: "Yes, I guess we met the same swarm of locusts the next day, the 26th. Every locust had a pair of canvas pants." The first liar went around the corner and kicked himself.

—A truthful exchange remarks:

"It is very convenient to have town newspapers to announce marriages, deaths, religious meetings, etc., etc.; it is very nice to speak well of and encourage enterprises that will help build up the town; it is convenient to have them do a thousand things which they are constantly doing to benefit the public, and for which they get no pay, but it is not convenient for some who are abundantly able to support their home papers by becoming subscribers and paying for the same."

—Dion Boucault has been lecturing in London on acting. He held that training was of more account than natural gifts in making a good actor. Speaking of the management of the voice, he explained that the secret of being heard distinctly was not to speak in a loud voice, but to carefully articulate every syllable. If emphasis were required, the consonants should be expressly articulated; but if it were desired to be soft and agreeable, he should say, "Go heavy on your vowel." Gestures should be distinct and deliberate, and every movement "should proceed straight from the shoulder." He illustrated this part of his lecture very amusingly, pointing out that when appealing, the palms of the hands should be held upward, "because you want something;" that if it were necessary to take a hat on the left side of the actor it should be done with the left hand, the action of the right crossing the body being awkward; and that if necessary to raise a hand it should be the one furthest from the audience.

—The charge that some Philadelphia druggists do not honestly compound prescriptions seems to be borne out by good evidence. "Not long ago," says one physician, "one of my patients was suffering from malaria chills, and I prescribed quinine, but the disease showed no signs of disappearing. Then I began to suspect something wrong. The patient was taking sugar-coated quinine pills, each pill being supposed to contain two grains of quinine. Upon making a quantitative analysis of some of the pills I found that they contained one-quarter of a grain each. This is rather a large discrepancy between the prescription and the medicine when you consider that my patient was made to pay full value for the worthless pills. The substitutes for quinine were starch and the cheaper kinds of alkaloids of the cinchona bark. I made my patient take my prescription to a druggist whom I knew to be honest, and her recovery was rapid."

—A few mornings ago a man living near Wolf Creek was attracted by the barking of his dogs, and going to where they had treed a ground hog on the mountain, he found him in a hollow log with the entrance lying up hill. He procured a long pole to reach the game, but this being too short he crawled in to lengthen the pole, and hung his toes over the end of the log. In this position he lost his hold, and down he went into the log on top of the ground hog, and a lively fight began. The man's superior strength prevailed, but not until he had been bitten in eleven places, and scratched and scarred. But the trouble had not ended. He could not crawl backward up hill, so he was a prisoner in a critical, not to say ridiculous, position, with no escape.

Fortunately at this frightful juncture the family became uneasy and went out to see what had happened, and were horrified at the discovery. Finally, after a round of cursing, praying and crying, the victim was cut out of the log, "set right up," clothed and in his right mind, but the ground hog was dead.—Tusculum Alabamian.

—How LIGHT AFFECTS THE BLIND. An interesting account has been lately furnished by M. Plateau, the eminent Belgian physicist (who has been blind nearly forty years), of the sensations he experiences in his eyes. He has no sense of objective light even when turning his eyes to the sun. But his visual field is always divided into spaces, some of which are pretty bright and others sombre or nearly dark, and merge into each other. Their general tint alternates, in time, between gray and reddish. The relative arrangement of these different spaces is always the same, but the intensity of their tints varies. The central space seems now rather bright, now very dark; above and below, and on the left to the limits of the field, there are sometimes brightness, sometimes darkness, and on the right there is generally a vertical band, nearly black, and beyond this space which is nearly always bright and reddish. These appearances follow all the movements of the eyes, which probably do not participate in the same way in the tints, but M. Plateau can not distinguish what belongs to one from what belongs to another. No connection of the general tint with the work of digestion is observed. The author states that he became blind through looking fixedly at the sun for some time, with a view of observing his after sensations; it was not till about fourteen years after that inflammation of the choroid set in, destroying vision, but, during the interval he often saw colored and persistent halos around flames, etc., and he advises those who have such vision to consult an experienced oculist.

—William Chapman, of Worthington, paid the penalty of his life for keeping a manumitted wife at home when she ought to have been in the asylum. She had long threatened to make away with him, and the cunning of these demented creatures can sometimes discount the best laid plans of the sane.

—The Supreme Court of Iowa rules that a police officer is guilty of manslaughter if he strikes a prisoner a fatal blow with a club, to defeat an attempt to escape, unless the officer has reason to believe that he is in danger of great bodily harm or loss of life.

Ground Raw Limestone as a Fertilizer—The Cheapest and the Best.

The results of experiments made this season show that "Carbonate of Lime" is superior to all other fertilizers (burned manure not excepted) and we challenge a comparison of results with any fertilizer in the market. See statements in circular, which will be sent on request. Farmers, give it a fair trial. Manufactured and for sale by JAMES SMALL. Price only $6 per ton. Sept 13-82-3w

FOR SALE.—I desire to sell my property on Grant st. Also property consisting of 13 lots and improvements west of College. Property cheap and terms easy. All in city of Bloomington. J. R. EAST.

—Ellettsville News: Last week H. M. Edmondson, while plowing on Sanford Johnson's farm, plowed up a nest of sixty snake eggs, and on examining them, each egg was found to contain a young snake about eight inches long. During the day he killed two large snakes, making sixty-two in all.

A Life-Long Remembrance.

The Cincinnati Tenth Annual Industrial Exposition opens Sept. 6th and closes October 7th. This Exposition long ago gained a national reputation, as its exhibits have always been larger than those of any similar exhibition throughout the United States. The Board of Directors (of which Capt. W. W. Peabody, General Superintendent of the O. & M. R'y, is President), have decided that this year the Exposition will be grander in every respect than those of former years. Additions have been made to the permanent buildings, including the new building for the manufacture of floor room. Among some of the prominent features of this year's Exposition will be the internal workings of a large Post Office. (If you intend receiving correspondence while at Cincinnati, you can have it sent care of the Exposition Post Office.) The manufacture of silk, showing the process from the time the silkworm leaves its cocoon to the completion of the goods in the piece. The manufacture of ice by chemicals will also be a prominent and interesting feature. Lastly, we will mention the manufacture of tobacco, showing the different stages of the process, from the time the tobacco is first reduced for smokers. The Ohio & Mississippi Railway will sell excursion tickets at greatly reduced rates during continuance of Exposition. For any particular rates please call on or write to their nearest agent.

—It is not to be wondered at that people crowd the New York Store of Len. S. Field & Co., both by day and night. Len. S. Field returned from Boston and New York last week, having bought largely of all that constitutes a choice and general stock of goods, and now they are arriving by every train. It is estimated that he has bought $200,000 worth of new goods, exclusive of the stock already in the store. Every one who has visited the new quarters of the store, and seen the large amount of stock on hand, and the quantity of clothing, boots, shoes and hats is certainly sufficient to "astonish the natives." Persons who know nothing of the immense business done by Len. S. Field & Co. are at a loss to understand how they will get rid of this mass of valuable fabrics, and it seems a problem to Field himself sometimes, but he buys the goods and they are sold. He has quite giving himself unhesitatingly to that. The only trouble is to keep in stock a sufficient quantity of such goods as the people demand. Some of the old fogies who are in the habit of saying that they will never buy of a man who is not a native of the city, are all slipping around now, peeping into the big glass front of the New York Store. This great exposition of fine fabrics and choice goods is now open for inspection and purchase. It is the only place in the city where you can get the best of all the goods of the surrounding country.

WIDE AWAKE.—The Sept. number of this excellent children's publication opens with a charming little sketch, "How Jacky Went to Church on Easter Sunday," by Mrs. Elizabeth Barnett Hitt. In addition to giving Mrs. Hitt's sketch the place of honor, the publishers have prefaced it with a beautifully printed full-page illustration designed by Mrs. Jessie Curtis Shepherd. It is impossible in a brief notice to give even the full table of contents, and the statement that it comprises about forty articles by well-known caterers to juvenile taste must suffice. D. Lathrop & Co., Boston.

THE SEPT. CENTURY is a fine number. The frontispiece is French's bust of Emerson, which shows the Concord philosopher at his best. The illustrated articles are: "Among the Thickets of Alaska," "The Evolution of the American Yacht," "The Horse in Motion" and the "Bee-pastures of California." John Burroughs has an article on Thoreau, with a portrait; The conclusion of Carlyle's Irish Journal is published, and there are in addition, installments of Howells' romance and Mrs. Burnett's story, besides the usual literary and editorial features. Address the Century Company, New York.

ST. NICHOLAS, for Sept. opens with a charming frontispiece by Rosina Emma, illustrating a timely little poem by Mary Mapes Dodge, entitled "An April Girl." "Lord Malaprop of Moonshine Castle" is a bright comedy in children, by E. K. Dowds. The veracious legend of "Mr. Wattebreuck" is given by "Ann Fanny" Barrow. Walter Satterlee has drawn four full-page illustrations for some satirical sketches, called "Lament of the Child," "The Boy of the Future," "Myth" and "The Legend of the Swothy Elves." Of interest to many readers will be Isaac Allen's report on the "Historical and Literary Character of the Hundred Years' War," and the long roll of heroes. Mary M. Prescott, Margaret Johnson and Margaret Vandegriff are among those who contribute poems and stories. There are drawings by J. Wells Champney, Walter Shirah, Addie Lydard, J. G. Francis and Jessie McDermott.
