Printed each Tuesday Morning, by
WILLIAM A. GARE, Editor and Publisher.

News Items Solicited.
—The date on the label, on which your name is printed, shows the time to which your subscription is paid. The list is revised every week and subscribers should notice the date, and see that they have the proper credit, and also that they are not in arrears.

—Spanish shepherds keep a few tame wethers, which they feed from their hands, and when they wish to move the flock they call these and the rest follow. Their dogs are used altogether to protect the sheep from wolves.

—The barbed-wire monopoly is at an end. After long litigation a decision has been rendered, the effect of which is to throw open the manufacture of this article to any who choose to engage in it. In 1882 the amount of barbed-wire manufactured in the United States was 80,000 tons, or a length of 500,000 miles.

—The Baptist pastor at Shelbyville, Ind., does not weigh more than 125 pounds, and one of his young women converts not less than 300. The rite of immersion, under the circumstances, drew a great crowd, and expectations were realized, for the minister and the candidate had to be helped out of the water.

—A stern reformer is the Prince of Montenegro. Some time ago he closed all the cafes and drinking shops in his dominion, regarding them as schools of effeminacy, extravagance and corruption. Then he abolished all titles, so that while every other man in Montenegro was an "Excellency," now even the Ministers have to be contented with plain "Mr." And now the Prince has issued an interdict against all "luxurious wearing apparel," including cravats, gloves, walking-sticks, parasols and umbrellas. And no one dares complain, because the Prince himself lives up to the strictest letter of his law.

—When such a remarkable supply of weather as has been experienced this spring is encountered the ability to explain and account for it would be very valuable. It was supposed that some progress had been made in that direction by the work of scientific men and the widespread observations of the government weather bureau, but in reality we know but little more than we did fifty years ago. He who can solve the secrets of a dispensed with spring, and show the reason why summer has come in wrong end foremost, will accomplish a scientific work of the greatest human interest. Although many have attempted it, however, none have yet made an approach to success.

The theory that sun spots and the falling of meteors into the sun have produced the late weather is based on unsound logic. There has been spots in the sun and meteors are supposed to have fallen into that orb and been consumed by the millions; and at the same time the earth has had a remarkable succession of cyclones, rain and thunder, and vibrations from summer heat to spring coolness. The connection apart from the coincidence is not clear, and astronomers are by no means certain how these phenomena affect terrestrial temperature.

A very great number of these recent waves of heat and cold are certainly due, as Dr. Goelkoff, the Russian meteorologist, recently said, "to causes which have nothing to do with anything beyond the earth's atmosphere." There may be something in the sun-spot and meteor theory, but it is yet in very embryotic shape.

—The German military papers announce that an exercise in the art of besieging and defending a fortress will be held next autumn at Coblenz. The object will be to illustrate by actual practice all the maneuvers which might come into operation in the attack or defence of a modern fortress, employing everything, both in the way of weapons and material and of tactics, likely to come into use in such operations. A very large number of officers, selected from all the branches that generally take part on either side in sieges, have been already ordered to proceed to Coblenz for this exercise; the majority of them belong to the foot artillery and engineer corps. The exercise will extend over fourteen days, and will be under the general direction of Major-Gen. von Adler, Inspector of Engineers. The siege operations will be commanded by Col. Hassel, senior chief of division in the general staff, under Count von Moltke; and the defence will be directed by Col. von Sobbe, chief of the staff of the Eighth Army Corps. The 1st of October has been appointed by the Ministry of War as the date of commencing operations.

—The issue to be argued in Ohio during the election canvass just begun between Republicans and Democrats is likely to be chiefly on the policy of a restrictive license tax on liquor traffic and the freedom of that traffic so far as the state law can affect it, subject only to the practical restrictive rules by which all trade is generally governed.

Universal Prohibitionists, not satisfied with the Republican position on this subject, have already made themselves an independent ticket which may get 10,000 votes, and chiefly such as probably would otherwise support the nominees of the Republicans. In view of this fact and the solid union of the wealthy liquor interest with the Democracy, Republicans appear to have an up-hill success there to carry the election. We should have more confidence in their success if they had made their policy the prohibition of all wrongful and the toleration of all rightful trade in all commodities, and easy, prompt enforcement of appropriate remedies by courts. This will eventually be the temperance position, and will win. A sale of liquor may be rightful in a certain case, where harmless, and be wrongful in another case, where obviously dangerous or hurtful, just as may the sale of any drug or other thing, according to the evidence in every case. This is the common-sense view of the matter, which must ultimately triumph.

—Three or four recent cases of suffocation from descending into pits and wells have been rendered specially pathetic from the fact that brave attempts to aid the victims have resulted in the death of the would-be rescuers. In one such case a woman perished in trying to save her husband; in another, a brother of the man first overcome by the poisonous gases met the same fate in going down the well to help him. Many men were at hand in these various instances, but it was the well-founded fear that the roundabout process of rescue by ropes and hooks would come too late that caused relatives or comrades to risk the perils of personal descent. The unselfish spirit that prompted their action can not fail to secure recognition; yet it is evident that the gases which overcome one man in going down are likely to render unconscious any one who immediately follows him, or to so affect him that he can be of little service to the man he seeks to rescue.

One of the Greatest of Speculators.
From the National Republican.
P. D. Armour is of sturdy Scotch Presbyterian Stock. He was born in one of the central counties of New York, on a farm among the hills. It was the highest ambition of his boyhood days to earn money enough to buy the farm adjoining his father's. When the gold fever broke out he was still a mere stripling; but, full of youthful enthusiasm, he started for California, driving a wagon across the plains and mountains. He remained there three or four years, and in that time saved a few thousands of dollars. He had cash enough to buy that farm and settle down. He had no sooner reached home than he experienced a sudden revulsion of feeling. The streets of the village looked narrow, cramped and dull. The houses appeared mean and dingy. He only remained on the farm two or three days, and then took himself to Cincinnati. Later he drifted to Milwaukee, and at the close of the war he sold a great lot of pork at $40 a barrel, and bought it in again at $18 to $19, realizing a profit of about a million. To-day he ranks as the wealthiest man in Chicago, being rated by those who know something of his business at $25,000,000 or $30,000,000. His transactions are colossal. His firm employs between 5,000 and 6,000 men, and on his pay rolls are about fifty men who receive salaries of $5,000 and over. He is not yet 55 years of age.

How Beauty was Dressed at Asot.
From the London Truth.
At Asot, on Tuesday, the Princess of Wales looked charming in a cream colored gown of some sort of woollen material, and with a little red in her bonnet. The Duchess of Albany wore a lovely shade of wallflower red. Lady Brassey was as gorgeous as usual, but her gown appeared rather hot and heavy for the day. The Duchess of Manchester looked splendid in black, made over red. Maria, Marchioness of Ailesbury wore the same gown she had on at Monday's wedding. Lady Dudley, "gowned in pure white that fitted to the shape," looked poetic. Gladys, Lady Lonsdale, in gray, suggested the thought that in no other color could she possibly look so well. The sight of her on a succeeding day in mauve totally subverted any such narrow ideas. But I heartily wish that she had not worn a bonnet made of seagull. She can so easily set fashions that she ought to be careful not to set cruel ones.

—Orlando Hungerford, a prominent farmer residing near Cynthiana, Shelby county, came near ending his life Saturday evening, while fishing with dynamite. The cartridge exploded in his hand, his left arm was fearfully lacerated and burned and both legs broken and mangled. The physicians amputated the left hand at the wrist. He is twenty-eight years old and a man of family.

Consumption Contagious.
Fresh proof of the danger of inhaling air exhaled by persons having lung diseases has been given by a characteristic French experiment. M. Giboux took four young, healthy rabbits from the same litter and kept for one hundred and five days in cages, as follows: Two were placed in a cage where they were obliged to breathe the air expired from consumptive animals, twice a day for two hours; in a short time they became sickly, and on killing them they were found to have tubercles on their lungs. The other two breathed twice a day the same air, but disinfected by being passed through cotton wadding impregnated with carbolic acid; these rabbits remained in good health, and were finally eaten by the experimenter.

—An Indianapolis man writes that he is coming to Bloomington with a big stock of dry goods, and is having a room built on wheels, to cost him $1,000. He says he will place it on College Avenue, just west of the 1st National Bank. He thinks he can sell goods lower than the New York store, because while Field & Co. pay a rent of $500 and have nothing to show at the end of the year but rent receipts, he can pay for his house at the same rate, in two years, and have a better location all the time.

Cheat as Wheat.
From the Chicago Tribune.
Recently the agricultural journals of the country have been devoting some time and space to consideration of that old question, "Does wheat turn to chaff?" It is now some years since discussion of this question raged hottest, and men of prominence all over the land ranged themselves on either side of a controversy that for a time waxed warm and wrathful. But certainly if there is any one thing that is definitely known to-day, it is that wheat does not, in fact, cannot, turn to chaff. In every case where stalks of wheat and chaff (or cheat) are apparently all springing from the same roots, have been subjected to a microscopic examination, it has been discovered that the roots supporting the one were quite separate and distinct from those supporting the other." It seems that, this spring, numerous complaints are made by farmers that their wheat is turning to chaff, and hence the resurrection of this subject. These farmers should know that not only cheat, but other seeds will lie in the ground for years below what is called the line of germination, without sprouting pure, and on being brought near the surface will then germinate and grow. So the best way, the only one in fact, to keep "wheat from turning to chaff" is to keep the ground clean, and to sow only clean, fine seed.
