An exchange observes that the greatest man after a newspaper is the one who is too mean to subscribe. He is always in waiting for the latest paper and it is not two minutes on the owner's premises till the non-subscriber pounces upon it, and never lets up till the last line is read, and then perhaps casts it aside with the remark that he could make a better paper himself.

A correspondent writing to the Greenback Star-press advises visitors not to come to the Exposition before September 10th, and gives as a reason that the work of putting the Exposition on foot is but begun, and that it will take at least thirty days to get the machinery running and the displays perfect.

Chicago Times: Ben Butler has just been the subject of a distinguished honor at Springfield, Mass., a number of his admirers of that place having gathered in the public park and planted a memorial tree to be known as the "Butler Elm." If the tree is intended to suggest Benjamin's most popular characteristic, it is of course a slippery elm.

Dr. Prime has found an odd monument in Northern New York. A good man lived happily with an excellent wife till they were well on in years, when she died. He bequeathed him of some fitting memorial to place over her grave, and the happy thought struck him that the square stone, by which they had been comfortably through many long winters, would be just what she would like to have if she had a voice in the matter. He had the stone taken to the churchyard and placed over the remains of his companion, who sleeps quietly underneath it.

Here are some curiosities of current suicides: Magruder killed himself in Maryland because of grief for his first wife, though he had taken a second and entirely worthy one. Marks drowned himself in a Kansas millpond, the dam for which he had just built, as the water proved insufficient to turn the wheel. Jennie Roberts of Pennsylvania hung herself into a stream after being refused parental permission to go to a ball. Picketts, a member of the Texas bar, had no doubt to live with his wife, who was and been married by the client. Mrs. Jones of Maryland took laudanum because she could not take money from her husband's drawer. Atkinson of California mentally stalked his life on his horse, and forfeited on the conclusion of the race.

From the Boston Post: Now is the season when we read in "tea table gossip" that Col. and Mrs. So-and-so and family have left their city residence, and during the remainder of the season will reside in their seaside cottage. Perhaps an impartial investigation would show that the Colonel and his estimable lady were still in town, but occupying only the rear portion of the house.

In 1872 Indiana gave a Democratic majority in October for Hendricks for Governor, and a Republican majority in November for Grant for President.

There is interesting matter for study in the following table, showing the majorities on one side or the other in Indiana in Presidential years since 1860.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony are in England, doing missionary work for woman's rights. Miss Anthony is giving to brilliant audiences glowing accounts of the rapid progress of women in this country in gaining admission into occupations long monopolized by men. She says that forty years ago there were but three occupations open to women—teaching, cooking, sewing and factory work. One woman was a physician and one was a preacher. There are now a thousand women practicing medicine, and as far as she has been able to learn "they kill as large a proportion of their patients and receive as exorbitant fees for so doing as male practitioners do." The Professor of Greek in a Kansas College is a woman, and every law school in the country is open to members of her sex. Women not only set type and read proof but edit and publish papers.

A convert in a Methodist congregation had been strictly honest, but profane and a Sabbath breaker. The Christian Advocate, in telling the story, says that he made a full confession in one of the meetings. He said that he had lived an ungodly life, and considered himself an amazing instance of God's mercy. The tide of religious feeling rose high on his positive testimony, and as he took his seat a brother started the hymn, "The dying thief rejoiced to see that fountain in his day." To the surprise of all, the new convert, in a towering rage, left the building. On being asked what the matter was, he said: "There is one thing I never did—I never stole; and that I should immediately sing like that was a perverted insult."

POCKET BOOK LOST.—By S. M. Orchard, on Old Settler's Day, at Glasgow, a small Pocket Book containing notes, accounts and papers. The finder will be liberally rewarded if he will send them to the old settler at Bloomington.

S. M. ORCHARD

Dr. Brown-Sequard has been so much amused and abused recently about cruelty to animals in surgical experiments, that he has recently lectured in Paris on the subject. He said:

"He had been attempting some interesting experiments of partial anesthesia by carbolic acid. For this purpose he had chosen young monkeys as subjects, their physical conformation being more nearly akin to that of man. By this system the doctor deadens all feeling for at least twenty-four hours without danger to the patient, and his anesthetic affects only the sense of feeling. The young monkey who recently caused such an outburst of compassion had been anesthetized by an injection three days previous, and the doctor had made a deep incision on the neck, which the animal had not even noticed. The incision had since been sewn up, the animal eating and playing meanwhile without the slightest show of pain. From the result obtained on the monkey Dr. Brown-Sequard is sanguine of practicing upon man with equal effect. The Prof. asserts that the anesthetic suppresses not only all pain during surgical operation, but also for twenty-four hours after its administration; therefore, the benefit of such a discovery is self-evident."

A Growing Town.
"What is the population of La Bean, D. T., now?" we asked.

"Well, the first lumber was received two weeks ago last Sunday. Now there are six general stores, one dry goods store, one hardware store, five saloons, one meat market, three lumber yards, one bank, one newspaper office, one telegraph office, one Post Office, (with 280 call and 80 lock boxes of the Yale Pattern, in a building 20x30, two stories high), two hotels, and some other structures. Since then there has been started another bank, a fifty-room hotel, a hardware store, a dry goods house 30x80, and a Presbyterian church."

A good story is told of the wife of an American diplomatist, who is fond of calling upon the celebrities in every place which she visits. Being in Florence some time ago, she expressed her intention of calling on "Ouida," the well-known novelist. Her friends attempted to dissuade her, saying that "Ouida" had a violent prejudice against Americans. Undeterred, the female diplomatist called at the novelist's house and was met by "Ouida," who said: "I must tell you that I exceedingly dislike Americans." "I am very much surprised to hear that," was the reply, "for they are the only people who read your nasty books!"

One afternoon a stranger, observing a stream of people entering a church, approached a man of gloomy aspect who was standing near the entrance, and asked: "Is this a funeral?" "Funeral! No," was the sepulchral answer. "It's a wedding." "Excuse me," added the stranger, "but I thought, from your serious looks, that you might be a serious mourner." "No," returned the man with a weary, far-off look in his eyes, "I am soon-in-law of the bride's mother."

"My hearers," began the lecturer, "I trust—Before he could proceed further a babel of voices shouted, 'We'll trade with you mister; we'll trade with you, never you fear for that.' The ignorant citizens thought he was going to open a grocery in town."

Grape growing in California pays about as well as any form of agricultural industry, even without discounting the extravagant stories told about the profits of orange culture. The Napa Register tells of a vine grower in Green Valley who has a vineyard comprising only twenty-one acres, but these yielded enough to enable him to ship 100 tons of grapes to a wine cellar in Napa city and 9,000 boxes of 35 pounds each to San Francisco, and still keep on hand ten tons for his own use. The grapes thus shipped by him sold for $30 per ton at Napa city and at 2 cents per pound in San Francisco, giving him $5,100. The entire net was $590, leaving him a net profit of over $4,000, or more than $200 an acre. Wheat growing, even with the most successful crops, could not have paid over $80 an acre. The land that yielded so bountifully could have originally been bought outright for much less than the profits of a single year.

To protect themselves against dishonest passenger conductors, if there are any on the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago system the management will hereafter enforce the rule that a passenger shall pay ten cents extra when he does not purchase a ticket before boarding the train, and that the conductor shall then give the passenger a check, which will redeem the money if presented at any ticket office within ten days.

A good covered buggy will be traded for wood, if application be made soon, at Stuart & McPheeters' hardware store.

To drive away rats, take potash that has been left in the air till it becomes pasty, or incorporate it with soft soap, and smear well all places where they run; or set some of the soap and potash near their holes, and they will not trouble you long after getting into it.

Bill Nuckells, a prospector fall down a prospect shaft forty feet deep, right into a nest of black-snakes. Most men would have died of fright, but Nuckells was not that sort of a man. He tied several snakes together, and started them up the side of the shaft, tying on a fresh snake as the head of the snakes got over the edge and started down hill. Nuckells kept tying on fresh reptiles—every snake there was in the shaft. By this time the crowd of snakes on the outside was strong enough to pull him out of the shaft, and he soon reached his ranch safe and sound.—Denver Tribune.

Here is an economical suggestion for our rural readers: Old boot legs are worth very little as mending material. The best use that I have found for them is to cut the leg low down, draw the legs on, put on your shoes, letting the legs come low down over the shoes. If plowing, or walking through mud, wet grass, etc., put your pants inside, and the leggings will answer as well as a pair of boots entire, and cost about half as much.

In Mexico nearly every one is a smoker. The school children who have done well in their studies are rewarded by being allowed to smoke a cigar as they stand or sit at their lessons. The school-master is seldom without a cigar in his mouth. In the law courts all persons commonly enjoy their tobacco freely, and even the accused in a criminal trial is not denied this indulgence, and is allowed, if his cigarette goes out in the heat of the argument, to light it by borrowing that of the officer who stands at his side to guard him.

Why a Poolecat Lives.
[W. E. Hamilton, in American Field.]
One point as to the skunk. It is a well ascertained fact that many asthmatic persons find relief in smelling the odor of this—to most persons—hateful quadruped. I have known cases where asthmatic people would stay for half an hour in a fur war-house after the arrival of recently killed skunks, and depart relieved, so that the latter make some posthumous atonement for their inodorous lives.

Nat. Goodwin, the actor, replied, on being asked what was the first thing that struck him on his recent trip to Europe: "The fellow who wanted to be 'tipped' by a horse me everywhere. He's a bore of the worst kind. They seem to think we only work for the purpose of going over there once a year and spending the million we make here. My wife who is English, is thoroughly familiar with these practices, and so was continually pointing out to me that I was being imposed upon." So he fought the rascals, but found that victory was only to be gained at too great a cost of effort to make it worth while trying.

A machine which combines the whole operation of harvesting and husking corn has been patented by Mr. William H. Seor, of Farrago, Iowa. This machine is designed to be driven over the row of corn, and the ears are stripped from the stalks as the machine passes along, by radial wings, which are connected with a rotating shaft. The ears are then carried by an endless apron to the rollers located in the back part of the machine, which rollers strip the husk from off the ear and deposit the latter in a receiver.
