

The verdict given to Wm. Harold's adopted son, whose leg was crushed by a freight car at the south end of the depot has been affirmed by the supreme court. The gist of the decision is: L. N. A. & C. Railway Company vs. Daniel Phillips. Affirmed. Elliott, J. The material facts are that in 1853 the track of the appellant was constructed on and along Railroad street in the city of Bloomington, and has since been maintained and used. Between the tracks of this company and on each side the ground is covered by planks. A lad about eight years of age was sent on an errand and passed down Fifth street until he reached the railroad and there entered on the track laid in the street; from this point he walked toward Fourth street, and when opposite appellant's depot and within twenty feet of Fourth street, his foot was caught between the rail of the track and the plank inside of the track. His foot was so firmly fastened that he could not extract it, and while he was thus fastened a train of cars was run on him and he was badly injured. The employees of the appellant were guilty of negligence in the management of the train, but there was no intentional or willful wrong on their part. The track was negligently constructed and maintained, and was in such a condition, through the fault of the company, as to endanger the lives and the limbs of those walking along the track and in the street. Under these facts, the track being laid along the public street, the plaintiff was not a trespasser by going on the track, and the company is liable.

George A. Buskirk, deputy clerk of Marion co., in behalf of his ten-year-old son, has instituted a $5,000 damage suit against the Citizens' Street-railway Company for the whipping of the boy by a car-driver on election day. Mr. Buskirk was on the election board in his ward all day Tuesday, and in the afternoon gave his son 10 cents for street-car fare, and sent him to the court house for his mail. The boy rode down town on the car, and, after getting the mail, started home on an Illinois-street car. He paid his fare as soon as he got on the car, and, after the car had gone several squares, he went out on the rear platform. When the car reached Third street the driver discovered him standing on the platform, and told him to get off the car. The boy told him he had paid his fare, but the driver said he had not, and, stopping the car, ran to the rear end with his whip and struck the boy several blows across the legs that brought the blood. The assault was continued until the boy had to leave the car. Several passengers saw the boy pay his fare. With the help of one of the passengers, the boy reached home and has since been confined to his bed.

The painful lack of respect paid to age by youth, as seen in the public life of Philadelphia, is remarked by the Star of that city. Young men and boys, it says, while they leap to their feet in an instant and offer their seats in a car to any young girl, more especially if she be well dressed and good looking, will permit old men to stand and support themselves by the straps, or as best they can. Robust young girls equally retain their seats, while women bent and gray stand, and the Star adds: "This could occur in no other country than ours, and it argues a want of proper training that is painful to behold." Whether it could occur in other countries it certainly does not. Age is respected there even more than sex. We are alone in the bad eminence of ill-manners, or more properly, no manners at all, from the young to the old. It is doubtless part of the American character, so accustomed to all things new that whatever is old wins, at best, surferance, and generally contempt. Our lack of reverence for established things is notorious. There is much good in the attitude, too, but there has certainly grown with amazing rapidity in a generation or two an impudence and rudeness among the young to the old. It is a dangerous thing. Its influence upon the national character will be bad. So vital in its consequences is respect for the old by the young that most if not all religions have established it as a tenet. In the fifth commandment to honor the father and the mother, the spirit of which is embodied in most religions, due respect for age is inculcated. No children brought up in the nurture of this admonition are rude to age under whatever guise; and this fostering of this due respect in the young is the foundation for due respect to law and the basis of good citizenship in after life.

The pitcher had a little ball, and it was white as snow, and where the striker thought it was, that ball it wouldn't go. It had a sudden out-of-the-blue curve, it had a fearful drop, and when the striker wildly struck, that ball it didn't stop. "Why does the ball fool strikers so?" The children all did cry. "The pitcher twirls the ball you know," the teacher did reply.

OUR NEW RAILROAD.

IT WILL BE BUILT.

P. H. Blue, General Manager of the Cincinnati & St. Louis railroad, in a private letter says: "In reply, permit me first to assure you that the rumors that we are waiting to sell, which you say are in circulation, are wholly unfounded. As you are aware, the officers and ownership of the Indiana & Illinois Southern are practically the same, and neither of these properties are on the market, for sale, or looking for purchasers. On the other hand, the latter is being thoroughly reconstructed and the gauge widened to standard, grades lowered, embankments widened and raised, and new bridges built. It is the desire of the company to put the line from Swiss City to Columbus under contract for construction at an early date, as soon as arrangements can be made. The company is certainly very sincere in its desire to construct this line, believing that it will be a fairly desirable property itself; also that it will add to the value of the Indiana & Illinois Southern property. You will readily conceive the wisdom of not commencing an undertaking of this kind until every arrangement can be made in detail, and this requires time, often more than is seemingly required, and a pardonable anxiety to have it completed makes things seem to move tediously." P. H. BLUE.

The supreme court has reversed the judgment gotten by Mrs. Lydia E. Evans against the town of Gosport. It will be remembered that the case has been tried four times. The supreme court says: If a defect in a pavement presents an obstruction or is of such a character that the municipal corporation is bound to take notice of it, so that it is guilty of negligence in not repairing it, the plaintiff is nevertheless guilty of contributory negligence in venturing upon it, no matter how much care she has used when she went upon it. Her duty was to avoid the obstruction, or go upon it at her own risk.

The first regular meeting of the B. K. C. for the present year, was held on Friday evening, Oct. 14, at the home of Miss Frank Perkins. The work promises to be very interesting and embraces the following: History of U. States, Physics and Hygiene, German Classics in English, American Literature, Readings from W. Irving, History of the Mediaeval church, Plan of Salvation and Readings from the "Chauteau," a monthly magazine of unusual merit. The Oct. number contains an article on "Republican Government," which is very suggestive. The circle is pleased to see the name of Chancellor Vincent on the Lecture Course.

Five branches of manufacturing employ together 85 per cent. of all the water power that is used. Flouring and grist mills use 38.4 per cent.; sawmills, 22.7 per cent.; cotton mills, 12.1 per cent.; and woolen mills, 4.4 per cent. Very little water power is used by the iron industry.—Boston Budget.

Greencastle Banner. "Daniel!" The train was just passing Ben Davis on the Vandalia, when President Cleveland uttered that single exclamation. But the Private Secretary, worn out by the labors at Indianapolis, had sunk into a slumber and was dreaming of the scenes yet to be encountered in their perilous journey into the Great Unknown. "Daniel! Daniel!" called the President more loudly. "Yes, sire," said the individual, suddenly sitting bolt upright, and rubbing his eyes. "Daniel, get your map and tell me the name of the next considerable town through which we are to pass."

"Yes, sire." After some time had elapsed the President called again—"Daniel, have you found it?" "Yes, sire." "What is it?" "Greencastle." "Greencastle! Why, isn't that the place which the gallant Colonel Matson claims for his home?" "Yes, sire." "Well, tell the conductor we will not stop there. Col. Matson—he is the Representative who claims to be my friend and at the same time pretends to be the friend of the Union soldiers. He may fool such ignoramuses as they are, but he can't fool me. I don't want to see him, and I'll not stop at his town. And, by the way he doesn't live there. His real home is in Washington, as he very well knows. That is another one of his frauds upon the people."
