

—Looks like Gov. Hovey is on top, so far as the late Democratic Legislature is concerned.

—The selection of Ex-Governor Porter for Minister to Italy was a good one, and will be endorsed by the people of Indiana irrespective of party.

—Gen. Hovey, the Democrats said during the canvass, didn't amount to anything; but the manner in which he has settled and rode the Democratic Legislature is something worthy of being remembered in all time to come.

—The legislature has passed a bill providing for the burial by the township of the body of any honorably discharged soldier. The township trustee is required to defray the necessary funeral expenses of soldiers dying without having means to give them a decent burial. A sum not to exceed $30 is provided for. The county commissioners shall allow the bills of the trustees, and the money is to come out of the county treasury.

—In looking over the new law which authorizes County Commissioners to establish orphan homes, John H. Gillette, of the Attorney General's office found that it is an amendment to an original section which has once before been amended. The supreme court has always held, he says, that when a section is amended it is in reality a new section, and that any subsequent amendment must be made to the amended section. As this law stands it is an amendment to a section which does not exist, and is therefore absurd.

—There is a possibility that all the partisan measures passed by the fifty-ninth general assembly and vetoed by the governor, are not laws. They were not signed by the president of the senate, and speaker of the house, and passed over the veto of the governor. It is a question whether or not they should be signed by the governor.

The constitution is not a suicide on this point. It states that immediately after a bill has been vetoed it shall be reconsidered, but fails to state positively what evidence shall be given that it has been so considered and passed, notwithstanding the objections of the governor. Some of the best lawyers believe the signatures of the president of the senate and speaker of the house is the only evidence that can be entertained. The bills as they are only bear the evidence of a statement signed by the clerk of the house and secretary of the senate that they have been passed over the veto. It was rumored that a similar case had been decided by the supreme court to the effect that the signatures of the speaker and president were necessary after a veto, but the supreme court judges state that they know of no such decision and believe it to be a new question. Of course, they will give no individual opinion in the matter because it will probably fall upon them to decide the question as a whole bench. The republicans feel confident that a construction in their favor is the only construction that can be placed on the constitution.

—Last September Prof. Morgan, at one time a candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction of this State on the Democratic ticket, left Richmond for the South. Though he was then a Democratic nominee for County Surveyor, it was several days before his friends were aware that he had departed. It appears that he went to Texas and engaged in teaching school. The first that has been heard of him was in a letter written recently to a friend. He claims that he secured employment in one of the country schools near Corsicana, and that he was given notice to leave the country within ten days. He sets up the plea that he was ordered to leave because he was from the North, and that his friends were afraid to harbor him. —Indianapolis News.

—A physician has imparted to the Atlanta Constitution, for domestic application, the exact recipe of the solution used in the first extinguishers now offered for sale, as follows: "Take twenty pounds of ammoniac salt and ten pounds of sal ammoniac (marinate of ammonia, to be had of any druggist), and dissolve in seven gallons of water. When dissolved it can be bottled and kept in each room of the house, to be used in an emergency. In case of a fire occurring, one or two bottles thrown with force into the burning place so as to break them, and the fire will certainly be extinguished."

—The grandfather of the Adams, who to-day control $300,000,000 worth of property on Manhattan Island, was a little shabby peddler, a self, peddler, all the time carrying foreigner, who wrestled with the English tongue, most unaccountably, but in him and his career is aptly illustrated a possibility at the back and call of any honest, sturdy, prudent man.

About Heart Disease.

This alarmingly prevalent disease is treated by Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, in one of the city papers, as follows:

Like every other muscle of the body, the heart is strengthened by exercise, but this exercise must be systematic, regular, and not so excessive as to make too great a demand on the powers of the organ. For instance, a person who has not been in the habit of taking much physical exercise has a heart, which like all the other muscles of the body, is comparatively weak. He is suddenly forced to exert himself in a manner which is unusual to him. He runs a hundred yards or so, or rapidly ascends a long and steep staircase. This exertion causes him to breathe more rapidly than is natural to him, the blood must be sent into the lungs in increased quantity, the heart must respond to the demand made upon it and in order to accomplish its work its pulsations are greatly increased in number. It may be unable to accomplish its task and it suddenly stops altogether, and in the twinkling of an eye death ensues.

Another may think he is leading a very regular life, his business is of a sedentary character, and when he has to go from place to place, he rides in a horse car or drives in a carriage. He probably does not walk altogether so much as a quarter of a mile a day. Suddenly some violent emotion is excited within him, the heart participates in the general disturbance, it throws more blood into the lungs than they can manage, the pulmonary vessels are clogged, it cannot overcome the obstacle of a column of almost stagnant blood, it stops and the individual is dead of heart failure. We can scarcely pick up a newspaper without reading of some such occurrence as these, not the result of epidemic disease of the heart such as derangement of its valves, but a functional disorder, the result of a vicious mode of life.

PROCEED WITH CARE.

That in many cases the heart may be strengthened by proper hygienic measures and medical treatment is a question. In regard to this there is no doubt. Systematic but moderate exercise which, strengthening the other muscles of the body, also strengthens the heart, is probably the most valuable of all the means to be adopted, and of this climbing heights should be a prominent feature. A person unaccustomed to this kind of physical exertion should, of course, proceed very carefully, and under the direction of a physician, till the body has become habituated to the work. The food should be of the most nutritious character, not over stimulating and especially not excessive in quantity. Tobacco, if used at all, should be used in moderation, for it is very certain that inordinate indulgence in this direction weakens the heart. The like is true of alcoholic drinks of all kinds. The mode of life should be such as to militate against the accumulation of fat in the body. The heart of a man weighing 150 pounds, for instance, may be strong enough for all the purposes of life, but if he makes his body weigh 200 pounds the proper proportion is destroyed and the heart is relatively weak. The materia medica embraces several agents which are directly heart-tonics, and by the use of which the tone of the organ is increased; but they are not to be employed without the advice of a physician. It is just as easy to make the heart strong as it is to strengthen the muscles of the arms or legs. And if proper views on this subject can be caused to prevail, and to be carried out in practice, we shall have less of weak heart and heart failure. A person will then be able to dispense with an elevator when he has to ascend to the seventh or eighth story of a building, and he can then indulge in a fit of anger, if so disposed, without running the risk of dropping dead at the feet of his antagonist.

—Recently there came to work in a Brookfield (Conn.) family, a Swedish woman, who hearing of a young woman's trouble from insomnia, told her of the practice of the people in her country who are similarly afflicted. It was to take a napkin, dip it in ice-cold water, wring it slightly, and lay it across her eyes. The plan was followed, and it worked like a charm. The first night the girl slept four hours without awaking, something she had not done for several months. At the end of that time the napkin had become dry. By wetting it again she at once went to sleep, and it required considerable force to rouse her in the morning.

—A glimpse of Colonel W. W. Dudley comes unexpectedly to the public, in a letter written by him to a Republican club at Aurora, Ind., which had asked permission to use his name in the title of the organization. In his reply he said: "Tell them I appreciate the honor they have done me in this matter, and that, notwithstanding the effusive abuse that has been heaped upon me by Democratic newspapers from one end of the country to the other, I want them all to understand that my fundamental idea in all political work is not to accomplish things by strategy or corrupt means, but by careful painstaking work in small things, not only during the campaign, but anterior and subsequent thereto; that my belief in the average wisdom of the people is so firm that I believe in referring all political battles to them as closely as possible, relying on the honesty and good judgment of the people of the State to maintain and foster Republican sentiments and Republican ideas." There is a whole political guide book in these few and timely words, against which not even the most cranky of Colonel Dudley's critics could find a word of just criticism. The idea that he is a corrupt and vicious politician, which is sought to be fastened on the public mind by his political antagonists, whose machinations he has defeated, is very far from the real fact, as this manly letter indicates.

—One of the managers of the largest watch factory in the world was speaking of watches, about which he gave some interesting information. A first-class American watch kept well, will last thirty or forty years, or sometimes even longer, before the works wear out; but the average life of an ordinary low-priced American watch is ten years, and that of a Swiss watch of the same grade seven years. The length of life for a watch depends largely on the number of its jewels. The range of prices for American watches runs from $5 to $500, the costliest being a split second minute register timing watch. In the United States about 3,500 watches are manufactured every day. The Waltham factory turns out 1,500 per day, and the Elgin factory between 1,200 and 1,800. There are a few watch factories in the west but their output is comparatively small, and the two here spoken of are the biggest in the world; in fact, there are none abroad that can be compared with those in America. The south has no watch factory.

A summer normal will be conducted by Prof. Wiley and Mitchell this year.

Many of the students are nervous over the result of last week's examinations. Prof. Atwater has been connected with Indiana University twenty-three years. On Friday night last Prof. Taylor lectured in Noblesville, before the high school. His subject was "Magnetism."

The spring term begins Wednesday of this week. It will be the interesting term of the year.

The majority of the students staid in Bloomington during the vacation. They were studying. McMillan, the sure base ball catcher of the former college nine is at DePaul, but will attend law school in Bloomington. Dr. Samuel Garner has been appointed to the Chair of Modern Languages, in the U. S. Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Md. The University Trustees are in session in Indianapolis, to-day (Tuesday) to consider certain matters, among others, a "reorganization" that they are to act upon.

The Historical Catalogue of I. U. is now nearing completion. It is being prepared by Dr. Wylie, and will be printed this summer. The alumni are to be included in this historical publication, giving a sketch of the life of each after graduation. It will make a volume of 200 pages.

—The seventeenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Turner was celebrated in a way that will be long remembered, last Thursday evening. Invitations were sent out by Mrs. J. Hooper and Mrs. W. J. Turner, a number of Mr. and Mrs. Turner's intimate friends and neighbors, and these met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Allen and proceeded to the house of Mr. Turner. The plans were carefully arranged and the surprise was complete. The "victims" were taken unaware, and this was the source of much merriment upon the part of all participants. The elegant repast prepared by Mrs. Hooper and Mrs. W. J. Turner, having been quietly carried to the back door, was now brought in and enjoyed by all present. There were many beautiful presents given. At a late hour the guests retired, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Turner many returns of their wedding anniversary.
