Republican Progress

ED. DO. FOR AMERICA.
W. A. GAGE, Editor and Publisher.
FOR PRESIDENT IN 1892:
THE MAN NOMINATED
BY THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

BLOOMINGTON IS A REPUBLICAN CITY.

No more favorable opportunity for success is likely to be offered to the Democrats than was given them by the circumstances surrounding the election on the 5th. A complete and creditable organization had been formed, and each Democratic candidate followed a well-defined policy of persistent solicitation. They made such a canvass as would be expected of them at a county election, they polled the city, visited the factories, lunched around the establishments at which men were employed, "set up" the cigar, and did everything that they believed would further their interests. All manner of rumors were started; appeals were made to hired prejudice, and no scheme was left untried. For a time, on Tuesday, the Democrats expressed themselves as hopeful of electing their candidate, John C. Dolan, but later in the afternoon when the Republicans got warmed up to the work, their chances faded as certainly as the "dew disappears before the warmth of the sun," or words to that effect. In the 3d ward, a very bitter personal fight was made against Dr. B. A. McGee-James Campbell, a very popular salesman in the Hinkle meat shop being held pitted against him. Campbell was elected by a majority of eighty votes. The vote in the city, by precincts, was as follows:

We Spilt in His Eye.
Bordette tells a story of a man who was "made up" for emergencies. The gentleman referred to leaped out of a car window as the train stood at a station and ejected a large mouthful of to-bacon juice. A brawny Irishman was crawling out from under the car and happened to look up just in time to catch the extract of bacon in one eye. The passenger realized too late that he ought to have expected somewhere else than in the eye of a total stranger. He saw Pat take a firm grip on the hammer with which he had been tapping the car wheels and then ran back and swing aboard the car. Quick as thought the terrified passenger snatched off his wig, clapped a plug hat on his bald head, jerked out his false teeth and jolted out his glass eye. He had just sat down on the opposite side of the aisle when the irate Irishman entered and looked in vain for the man who had insulted him in a most painful manner.

Wears in Greene County.

A surveying and exploring party composed of A. J. Cox, H. V. Norwell and others has returned from Lattice Creek marsh, a matted thicket of underbrush and swamp growth, and revive the swamp growth, and revive the swamp that bears still infest that swamp. A number of people have seen the animals and secured some of the young, which lived but a short time. Two of the older animals were seen roaming about that wilderness. Lattice Creek marsh is eight miles from Bloomfield, on the I. & V. railroad, and is composed of thousands of acres of the finest wet lands. The soil is a black loam, four to six feet deep. This marsh is being drained by a large ditch, and the land is being cleared and made ready for cultivation. There are hundreds of acres that no human being ever saw or set his foot upon, and the story that bear still live in that dense marsh is very reasonable.

Don't Be Scared About Tea.

"The story telegraphed from the East to the effect that the tea crop this year will be short twenty-seven million pounds isn't true," remarked a Cincinnati tea broker. "There is little likelihood that the price of tea will be advanced. The fact is an advance would be injurious, for the supply more than equals the demand now. The crop this year will approximate the average in China, India, Ceylon and Japan. The consumption of coffee has increased far more rapidly than that of tea. This is due to the great increase in German immigration and the falling off of Irish immigration. The Germans are great coffee drinkers, while the Irish and English are more fond of tea. You need not fear that tea will be either scarce or higher in price than it is now."

Fifty Cents a Drink.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: "Fifty cents a drink, or, as they call it out there, four bits; what do you think of that?" said J. B. Sargent in the rotunda of the Southern last night. Mr. Sargent had just returned from a trip to California, and is on his way home to Nashville, Tenn. He was relating some of his experiences. "It was at the Hotel del Monte, at Monterey, the swell coast resort of California," he continued, "and it was 80c. for anything from cider or beer to Pommery Sauternes or Veuve Clicquot. It is a beautiful place, and a fine hotel, fitted up with all that money could buy. The bar is a separate building; a kind of pavilion. You go in, take a chair at a table, and a waiter brings you whatever you want to drink. A lemonade or a glass of champagne is charged for at 50c. a drink. At first it kind of knocks you; but after a few days you get used to it, and it seems all right. They don't bathe on the beach, although there is a beautiful drive along it. The salt water is brought into a huge bathing pool and heated to a comfortable temperature, so that winter or summer you can enjoy the pleasure of an ocean plunge."

WOMEN'S SUPERIOR COURAGE.
"Most people think that men are more courageous than women," said Dr. S. D. Black of New York, "but the dentist knows that this is not true. As a rule a man will groan and sweat when a dentist tries to fill his teeth, squirming, gripping the arm of the chair and making a big row about it. And the heavier the man the bigger the coward he is. I've seen a strapping big athlete sit down to have a tooth pulled and almost faint while I was looking at it. On the other hand, a light, little bit of a woman will calmly close her eyes, lean her head back in a chair and submit to tortures that would make a Sphinx sink into insensibility. No, sir; a woman can stand a dozen times the pain that a man will undergo."

Aristocratic Whiskies.

A "blue book" issued by the English government discloses the fact that 152 peers of the realm are the owners of places in which intoxicating liquors are sold. The number of drink shops owned by these peers is 1,609. The list is headed by the earl of Derby, who, the blue book shows, is the owner of seventy-two drinking places. Next come the Duke of Bedford with forty-eight drink-shops to his credit. Then comes the Duke of Devonshire with forty-seven, followed by the earl of Cawdor with thirty-nine, the Duke of Rutland with thirty-seven, the earl of Derby with thirty-five, the Duke of Northumberland with thirty-four and the Duke of Portland with thirty-two. Included in this list is the Rt. Rev. Richard Lewis, D. D., Bishop of Llandaff, who, the blue book shows, is the owner of two places which are devoted to the sale of intoxicating liquors.

SAVE YOUR SHOE BILLS.

A pair of shoes made of good leather will last much longer if properly cared for than when neglected. When shoes are only blacked the leather soon becomes hard and dry, the best fitting pair will be uncomfortable and here and there little cracks will appear which will soon become chams. Every week or two the blacking should be wiped off with a damp cloth, the shoe should be allowed to dry and then be rubbed with the best harness oil. Every part, including the sole and seams, should be oiled and the oil given a chance to soak in. The toughest leather can be made soft in this way, and good leather will after this treatment, feel like kid. The shoe will wear three times as long and be much more comfortable.
