—Indiana Farmer: The late date at which corn planting is done this season will make it necessary to do most, if not all its cultivation while small. Just as soon as it can be seen the cultivator should be put to work, and from then until the crop is laid by the soil should be kept clean and mellow. The later workings should be shallow, the main object being to keep a loose mulch of fine earth, in order to retain moisture. The corn plant is almost tropical in its habit, needing abundant moisture and heat to bring it to the fullest perfection. We need not despair of a good crop even though we are a month late in planting. The fall will most likely be late in proportion, and the growth of the crop will no doubt be much more rapid than if planted earlier.

NOT TOO LATE TO PLANT CORN.
—James Riley, who is first rate authority on corn, tells us that his favorite Yellow Dent corn, which is only a medium early variety, will mature in about one hundred days, and it will do to plant it in the latitude of Indianapolis, and south, any time this month. He adds that it will do to plant Leaning corn as late as the 10th of June. A Marion county farmer has assured us that he once made a good crop of corn from a planting made on the 27th of June. So do not be discouraged friends.—Ind. Farmer.

Some Seasonable Advice.
Joshua Hoopingartner writes thus to his friend Bill Simpkins, who contemplates going into the business of farming:

"Beware of the young Orphan Kalf. Nothink makes a man so Godless as a kalf which is gravely for its Ma. It is very opinionated, and its refusal to Forgit the past makes it very Troublesome at meal time. When it frequently tries to cut up Part of the Helping hand which has Ben held out to it in its hour of need and it also breathes its damp greasy breth over the clothes of its tutor.

Beware of the litten red peddler. He will sneak in on you in the morning with his insidious arts, prase your krops, and when you aint lookin' put enough rods on yore place to call down the vengeance of the clouds and the animosity of the sherriff. Don't try to convert an erring hen when She wants to set. When A Hen is prone To Retire Far From the Madening Crowd And Leed A Sedentary life on a Door Knob nothink will reform her till her misurable spirit has Burnt its fire of Passhon out on the hearthstone of obstinacy.

Blackbirds are uncommon numerous this year, and in plantin' yore korn you oughto tie the kernels down to the hills with horse hair. It makes the crop more purmanent altho sometimes it interfears with the blackbirds crop. The blackbird often wants korn to come up earlier than Nature does, and the horse hair tied to each kernel reminds him that it is not wise to be too previous.

You will find the melon patch the worst source of trouble. Few good men like yourself have been able to raise melons and still love nabors' boy as themselves. I raise melons but we never eat 'em. We innokulate them with arsenick and keep them as obжек lessons to teach the bad boy that The way of the transgressor is hard.

Don't let the old farmers in yore naborhood play jokes on you because Yo are green at the bizness. Remember that a bushel of wheat yore nabor horrors of you weighs 60 pounds and that what he brings back aint liable to tip the scales at 50. Keep your shot gun loaded for the book agent and your hull-dog hungry for the tramp. Vote the Republican ticket and you'll be happy.

—In the "Columbian Exposition Illustrated" for May is printed very handsome and life-like portraits of Mrs. Worley of Ellettsville and her sister, Miss Florence Davis of Nashville, Tenn. Short biographical and historical sketches are given of each lady. This publication will do much toward making the exposition known to the people of the whole country and is one that should be seen to be thoroughly appreciated.

The following matter is published in connection with Mrs. Worley's portrait:

Mrs. Laura Davis Worley is a member of the executive committee of the World's Fair Commission of Indiana; is by birth a Tennesseean and a descendant of one of the first settlers in the State; is a graduate at St. Cecilia's Convent at the age of sixteen, but felt that only the foundation of a liberal education had been laid. She continued her studies in music, parlance, brance; is one of the State private teachers and supplemented it by visits to various points of interest in the United States and Canada. She married Frank E. Worley, a banker of Ellettsville, Indiana. All us provided in an Act of the General Assembly of Indiana, approved March 28, 1889, and amended March 28, 1891.

—The bi-chloride of gall Courier, having almost taken a fit, last week, over the Progress' expose of increased State taxes in the township of Clear Creek, we propose to keep him busy taking these hypodermic injections. So here goes for Polk township:

Democracy is a Tax.
For the benefit of our numerous readers who may think that they are the only ones whose taxes are increased by the so called "wise and beneficent" tax law passed by the last Democratic Legislature we have taken the pains to take a few names alphabetically from the tax duplicates of Polk township for the years 1891 and 1892, showing the amount of increase.

By a little calculation it will be seen the increase is about 20 percent, showing that it not only comes high but that Democracy is a tax:
