For Governor.
It may perhaps be regarded as a little premature to talk of a candidate for Governor of Indiana at this time, but it will not be long till aspirants for this high office will be brought into notice. Republicans will of course experience no difficulty in finding suitable and competent candidates, and from this abundance of material the best should be selected. Among those spoken of for Governor, at present, is Caleb S. Denny, the Mayor of Indianapolis. Mr. Denny is an active, far-seeing politician as well as a man of sterling character as a citizen—a man who is careful to investigate before he takes a position, and when he does this, stands by his convictions. He is a Republican from principle, and is one of those men who would be a Republican if all others were to renounce the faith. Mr. Denny first saw the light of day seven miles west of Bloomington, and so is a Monroe county man by birth. The Progress believes that Monroe county could be depended upon to support Mr. Denny heartily for Governor in 1896.

Mrs. W. B. Hughes.
Mrs. W. B. Hughes died at her home on West Kirkwood Avenue on last Sunday morning after a long illness. Mrs. Hughes was born in Lawrence county, but the greater part of her life was spent in this community, where she was well known and loved by a large circle of friends, who will always remember her as a model woman, and as a kind christian friend and neighbor. Her perfect patience, and loving consideration for everyone, throughout her long and painful illness, was indeed wonderful. She was almost a life-long member of the Methodist church, an active member of the W. C. T. U. and Relief Corps of this city. Her husband, during the last weeks of her life, devoted himself entirely to her care and comfort, and her pathway to the grave was made as smooth as husband, mother, sisters and friends could possibly make it. The sympathies of the community go out to the stricken family: to the widowed mother who made her home with this daughter, who was so congenial and who was always planning for mother's happiness, and especially to the husband who will so sadly miss the sympathy and aid of his life-time companion. The funeral services will be held in College Avenue M. E. church to-day (Tuesday) at 2 p. m. Services will be conducted by Drs. Steele and Willis.

—Whenever a man tells you there is nothing in the whisky cure, set it down that he is either ignorant of the facts in the case, or he is malicious. There must be virtue in anything that picks a man up out of the degradation into which intemperance has plunged him, and restores him to his manhood, his family and his friends. That is precisely what the new treatment is doing. —Orleans Examiner.

An American Whist Author.

"Whist," is a monthly publication devoted to the interests of the game, and is printed at Milwaukee, Wis. In the number for April we find the following article, accompanied by a fine steel portrait of Chas. E. Coffin, who grew to manhood in Bloomington:

Charles Emmet Coffin, the author of the "List of Whist," is a descendant of one of the oldest families in the country, being of the seventh generation from Tristram Coffin, who came to this country from England in 1642 and became one of the ten original owners of the island of Nantucket, Massachusetts. Matthew Coffin, the grandfather of Charles E. Coffin, emigrated to North Carolina before the war of the revolution and became one of the army under Gen. Nathaniel Green. He was afterwards one of the pioneers of Indiana, having emigrated to that State about the year 1800.

The brilliant writer of the "List of Whist" was born in Salem, Ind., July 13, 1849. At an early age he went to Bloomington, the seat of the State University, and spent the remainder of his youth there. He was a student of the law, and became a member of the bar. He was a successful lawyer, and was for many years a member of the Indiana bar association. He was a man of great energy and ability, and was a successful business man. He was a man of great energy and ability, and was a successful business man.

His legal education perfectly equipped him for his chosen vocation, and he was a successful lawyer, and was for many years a member of the Indiana bar association. He was a man of great energy and ability, and was a successful business man. He was a man of great energy and ability, and was a successful business man.

For a long time Mr. Coffin has been interested in Whist. About four years ago he began the investigation of the modern scientific and statistical standard works on the subject, all of which he has in his library. It is safe to say that no work or article upon the subject of Whist is published that does not soon find its way to his library.

While the country is conceding him to be the author of one of the most useful books on this subject and to be an expert in the "greatest intellectual diversion ever devised," Mr. Coffin claims that he is nothing more than a student of the great game.

His deep study of the standard works on Whist, accompanied by his experience with skilled and unskilled players, together with the ignorance of the game found among society players generally, convinced him that the world of Whist needed a simple, lucid, compact and yet complete work, which would instruct the uninitiated players without wearying the experienced ones, and endeavor to teach the novice to some of his friends, this conviction grew and Mr. Coffin began the writing of the "List of Whist." The labor extended over a year, and the result is a book of little more than a hundred pages, but which represents perhaps as much labor, study and thought as any book of its size ever written on any subject.

—Last Monday, while David Taylor, of New Philadelphia, was tearing away an old barn he discovered underneath the floor a bed of snakes varying in length from five inches to nine feet. Securing a few, he commenced killing the serpents right and left, killing forty-seven. One of the largest started up a young apple tree near by, swiftly circled its trunk with numerous coils, and, in the effort to get up, squeezed it so hard that the deadly embrace forced the sap up into the branches, caused the buds to open, expanded and mature with such rapidity that before he was succeeded in killing the snake apples grew, ripened and fell from the branches in such profusion that he was enabled to gather over two bushels from the ground.

If we hadn't read the above story in the Salem "Sun" we'd have been impelled to regard it as a lie.

—One year ago the commercial agency of R. G. Dunn & Co., in summing up the review of trade said: "The most prosperous year ever known in business has just past." The same agency in reviewing the business of 1893, says the year has been the worst in fifty years in sudden shrinking of trade, in commercial disaster and depression of industries. The majority of the Democratic press will say this change was caused by thirty years of Republican legislation. Everybody knows that this statement is false. The last year of Republican rule was the one that was prosperous while the first business year under an administration pledged to repeal the laws under which this prosperity was attained was the year of disaster and bankruptcy. The people know this and regret they voted for a change. The people will not be fooled again the same way they were at the election of 1892.

—Col. Nicholas Letz, of Reading, Pa., furnished supplies to Washington's army at Valley Forge. His heirs claim that he has never been paid in full, and will present a claim to Congress for nearly $4,000,000. About forty persons are interested. The necessary funds were subscribed to push the claim.

The convention was in session just one hour and a half, and on motion of J. B. Wilson the convention adjourned, after the ticket was endorsed by a unanimous vote of everybody.

The nominees of the convention are well known to the people of the county, and they will be still better known before the first week in November. John Woodward is in every way qualified for the office of Clerk, and will be popular in that position. Joseph S. Woodward is one of the solid men of Clear Creek tp., and is spoken well of by all who know him. Wils. Adams and Jim Jackson can speak for themselves—they can't be beaten. The remainder of the ticket is well balanced, and we will have more to say of all these men before the canvass progresses very far.
