PHANTOM LIMBS.

Sense of Feeling in Members That Have Been Amputated.

From the Literary Digest.

We refer a sensation at once to its source in the finger-tips or the ear or the nose, or wherever it may be, and so expert have we become in recognizing the source that we localize the sensation itself there, thinking of the sensation of touch as being in the skin of the finger instead of the brain, where it actually is. Hence the who has lost a finger feels directly to the absent member any irritation of the nerve that formerly connected with it, and can scarcely believe that it is not in its old place. This phenomenon is familiar enough and many are the superstitions to which it has given rise, but it is only of late that it has received serious scientific study. A recent work on the subject is that of M. Abbatucci, published in Paris, which has called forth a paper by Prof. Pitres, contributed to the Annales Medico-Psychologiques of that city. We quote below part of an abstract from the National Druggist. Says that paper:

"M. Pitres shows that the illusion of the existence of a limb (in place of one which had been amputated) may go so far as to cause many accidents. In the majority of cases the illusion is so perfect and vivid that it constantly deceives the intelligence of the individual, so imperiously does it force itself upon him. Some of those who had lost a limb, questioned by M. Pitres, declared that they felt the amputated limb frequently more really and substantially than they did the one still attached to the body. Sometimes they get to believing more firmly upon the existence of the phantom limb than upon those members that remain, as in the case of a patient of Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, who declared: 'I state only the truth when I say that I am more conscious of the existence in place of the limb I have lost than of the one that I saved.'"

"Many of Prof. Pitres' patients made analogous declarations. 'Parbleu!' said one, 'I know mighty well that I have no right leg—yet, when I try to analyze my sensations, I feel that leg there. Why, I feel the foot this minute more distinctly than I do the left one, which is there before my eyes. I (the phantom) hurts me, while the other does not. If I could not assure myself by the touch and sight of the stump, nothing could convince me that the right leg was gone. I am having constantly to reason with myself in order to convince myself of the unreality of my sensations.'"

"When the illusion is as clear as in these cases, the person is constantly unconsciously inclined to attempt to use the phantom limb. Dr. Weir Mitchell tells of a horseman who had lost an arm, and thinking to take the reins in the amputated hand, dropped them on the neck of the horse, which was high-spirited, and leaping to one side threw the rider, badly injuring him. Another party who had lost his right hand always tried to pick up his work with that hand, which invariably caused him a fit of exasperation. "As might be imagined, such unfortunate cases are constantly meeting with accidents which might have easily been avoided but for the unconscious confidence had in the existence of the phantom limb. Dr. Pitres tells of a heavy man who had lost an arm, and who, in dressing one morning, lost his equilibrium, and, starting to fall, put out the phantom arm to steady himself, and, as a consequence, had a severe fall. "We remember an old soldier who had lost half of both feet, and the injury had been partially repaired by a maker of artificial limbs. This man would sit for a half hour at a time rubbing the ends of his shoes, where his corns formerly were, and swearing at the pain the phantom corns were giving him. He would frequently declare, 'There's going to be a change of the weather—my corns are hurting me.' On being reminded that he had no corns, he would say, 'Never mind! I feel 'em all the same.'"

"Now that the results of investigations have proven the reality of the sensations caused by these hallucinations, and the suffering produced by them, we may hope that science will discover some means of preventing them."

He Suspected Rubie.
Deacon Hardacre—And so you seen that 'ere spectacle show they are all talkin' about, did you?
Elder Nipperson—Yes.
Deacon Hardacre—How did you come to do it, Lige?
Elder Nipperson—Well, Rubie Hamby he said it wa'n't fit for a decent person to look at, and I wanted to find out whether he knewed or not. I've always had my suspicions of Rubie.—Cleveland Leader.

Something for Nothing.
We have heard of the boy who wanted to eat his cake and keep it too, but never before of a business man who sold his goods and then gave the purchaser credit for the amount paid. To learn about this send to James Vick's Sons, of Rochester, N. Y., who agree to do this in their Guide. The Golden Wedding edition of Vick's Garden and Flower Guide is certainly an artistic work, with its twenty-four pages lithographed in color, and nearly one hundred more pages filled with handsome half-tone illustrations, photographed from flowers, fruits, vegetables and homes.

What's the Guide really too expensive to give away, they give it with a Due Bill for 25 cents, worth of seeds for only 15 cents. Another new feature is the doing away with the old packet of Vegetable Seeds and sowing the quantity in each of the buyer getting more for his money.

Harry Lathrop Disabled.

[Special to Indianapolis News.]
GREENSBURG, Ind., Jan. 24.—

Harry Lathrop, son of the Rev. James B. Lathrop, of this city, is partially paralyzed, and it is feared that the results may prove serious. On last Friday Mr. Lathrop noticed a sharp pain in his right foot, but paid little attention to it. His condition grew serious, and yesterday physicians were summoned, who pronounced the disease paralysis. Mr. Lathrop, or "Doc," as he is familiarly called, has an extensive acquaintance in Indianapolis, and is a son-in-law of John Browning, of that city, a well known railroad conductor.

Mrs. Lathrop was a daughter of Esquire Butler of this place, and a sister of Mrs. Aiken of west 6th street.

A STRANGER WITH A JAG.

How He Ruined the Hotel Register.

A fellow came into one of the Bloomington hotels last night, Sunday morning, and saluted the clerk.

"Good morn'g, balancing unsteadily as he tried to take a pen from the holder.

"Good morning, sir," said the clerk, as he whirled the register around and handed the man with the rich, ripe breath the pen which he was making frantic endeavors to capture. The stranger took it unsteadily and examined the point with grave solemnity. He turned the pen around and around, examining it from every side. Not satisfied, he drew the register toward him and coolly made marks as follows:

|||||
The clerk snatched the book away from the unsteady stranger, who looked up with comical surprise.

"What the dickens do you mean by marking the register like that?" asked the clerk, indignantly.

"Whash ze mazzler!" replied the stranger, stabbing the pen into the counter, and assuming an air of outraged dignity.

"Why, marking up the page the way you did," he pointed to the row of straight marks.

"If you want to register, sign your name. The page of this book is no place on which to try whether the pen is good or not."

"Aw ri," said the man with a jag, and he drew the book toward him and again drew several straight lines. This in capital letters is the way it looked when the book was turned round.

Mrs. Frye's Advice.

Mrs. Frye, wife of Senator Frye, of the peace commission, accompanied her husband to Paris, and gave much of her time to an investigation of student life in the Latin quarter, especially the environments of the American parents, and she now tells the American parents to keep their children at home. "It is better," she says, "for our young people never to learn art and music than to learn them under such terrible odds."

PUTTING THE PIKE TO PROSE.

Most It Go On?

The following, which we find in the Bedford Mail, is just as applicable to Monroe county roads: "Driving out over the various pikes leading to this city one is often reminded of the apparently 'thrifless' character of our people, as, at the expenditure of large sums of money, splendid pikes have been built in all directions so that travel is so much easier, rapid and more comfortable on man and beast, than under the old dispensation, when there was nothing but mud roads; yet, with stringent laws on our statute books providing for the protection of these pikes when conditions are such that hauling over them practically ruins them, yet by reason of it being no special individual duty to report such things or to prosecute, teamsters have simply cut them up during the recent wet, freezing and thawing weather, so badly, that in places they are almost ruined. The law is violated every time a man, when the roads are wet, soft and thawing, puts a load on, which, with the weight of the wagon, equals 2,000 pounds, and as the wagon alone weighs 1100 to 1500 pounds, teamsters would have to be careful, if they any one whose duty it was to see that the law is enforced. A few days ago, the writer met several four and six horse teams hauling heavy green oak timber from four or five miles out on the Heltonville pike, where each team had on anywhere from 4000 to 6000 pounds of load aside from the wagon. The pike was thawing through, was soft and rotten, and every wagon damaged the pike hundreds of dollars, which must be made good by the taxpayers, so many of the teamsters paying but little tax. Had they waited a few days, as the law requires, for the roads to settle, the damage would have been only cents, whereas the pike now shows it was hundreds of dollars. Wouldn't it be wise for the Auditor, Commissioners or Prosecutor to appoint some one whose duty it would be to see that the interests of the taxpayers are properly protected, according to this law, which has been upheld by the supreme court?"

Judge Martin Puts on Brakes.
Brother Fulus of the Bloomington Star was admitted to the bar at the last term of circuit court, and as admissions to the bar were becoming so cheap that the Judges evidently feared all the newspaper men in town would be applying for admission soon, he has put the brakes on, and ordered that hereafter all applicants for admission shall be examined by a commission consisting of Judge Richland, Duncan and Wilson. Referring to this matter the Salem Searchlight says:

"Until such time as the Indiana Legislature requires all applicants for admission to the bar to pass an examination every circuit judge in the State ought to follow Judge Martin's example in this last matter. Among those admitted as practicing attorneys every year in Indiana there are hundreds who are absolutely ignorant of the elementary principles of law and entirely wanting in experience. To permit such to appear as attorneys in important cases is as detrimental to the interests of those who employ them as it is disgraceful to the legal profession and damaging to the business of competent attorneys."

Home-Seekers' Excursions.
On January 3d and 11th, February 7th and 21st, March 7th and 21st, April 4th and 18th, agents of the C. H. & D. Ry. will sell home-seekers tickets to points east of the Mississippi River and south of the Ohio River, except to Florida, at the rate of one regular fare plus $2.00 for the round trip. Call on C. H. & D. agents for information.

MONTHLY SUFFERING.

Thousands of women are troubled at monthly intervals with pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides, hips and limbs, but they need not suffer.

These pains are symptoms of dangerous derangements that can be corrected. The menstrual function should operate painlessly.

WINE OF CARDUI

It makes menstruation painless, and regular. It puts the delicate menstrual organs in perfect action to do their work properly. And that stops all this pain. Why will any woman suffer month after month when Wine of Cardui will relieve her? It costs $1.00 at the drug store. Why don't you get a bottle today?

For advice, in cases requiring special directions, address, giving symptoms, "The Ladies' Advisory Department," The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. BOZENA LEWIS.
"I was troubled at monthly intervals with terrible pains in my head and back, but have been entirely relieved by Wine of Cardui."

What a Lie Is.
Dr. Lyman Abbott is telling a story about a Sunday school child under his jurisdiction of whom the teacher asked in the course of his lesson, "What is a lie?"

"A lie," responded the infant, with deliberation, "is—is an abomination to the Lord and a very present help in trouble."

Crippling the Interests of Many Indiana Citizens.

It is estimated that there are over two millions of persons dependent upon or interested in railroads, exclusive of the large number of individuals concerned in the manufacture or production of railroad materials. A large number of this vast army are residents of Indiana and their prosperity depends upon the prosperity of the road in which they are interested as employees. Any legislation which will interfere with the advancement of those interests will necessarily be felt in the communities which are in a great measure dependent upon them for support in different ways.

—Spencer Journal: A few days ago a party of our citizens went on a prospecting tour to the farm of Fred Coats and G. W. Wark, east of town. It had been rumored that there was outcroppings of iron ore to be found on that land. Upon investigation this was found to be true and no doubt but what there is a paying quantity. The ore will probably assay from 60 to 80 per cent. This is excellent. The outcropping of ore occurs in the little branches running through the hollows, and considerable quantities have been exposed.

Small Pox in Indianapolis.

A Threatening Danger.

It is believed that the origin of smallpox in Indianapolis has been discovered. It is probable that a letter from a colored soldier in Cuba was sent to Indianapolis, and that Mr. Kueteimer (a mail carrier) handled it. His system was probably open to infection at that time, and he contracted the disease. The letter then passed on to one of the three colored families in which the disease later developed. The authorities say it would be quite possible for a number of persons to have handled the letter and only one or two contract the smallpox therefrom. Mr. Kueteimer's case antedates all the others which have been discovered. His was very mild and was diagnosed as chicken-pox. He was not confined to his bed, and constantly visited his neighbors and made short trips away from home. The fact that there are smallpox epidemics of more or less seriousness in towns and cities all over the United States, there being no known connection between any two locations, lends strength to the belief that letters from Cuba, where smallpox exists, carried it to the United States.

For the present at least, the Kueteimer children, who are aged 11, 8 and 6 years, will not be removed to the pesthouse but will be left at home for their mother to nurse. Mrs. Kueteimer has as yet shown no signs of the disease. The persons in vicinity of the Kueteimer home are panic-stricken, and it is probable that several other houses in the neighborhood will be quarantined as a precautionary measure. Kueteimer's route as letter carrier was on Pennsylvania-st. south to Louisiana-st. All the letter carriers have been vaccinated, and a careful examination of each one will be made frequently. No particular fear of a spread from this source is felt, unless other infected mail should be received.—Indianapolis Sun.
