Death of a Child.

Agnes, the six year old child of James Reddy and wife, died this morning at their home, just east of the Vandalia railroad on Market street. The funeral will occur to-morrow morning at ten o'clock at New Market.

The Foot Ball Game.

The Purdue foot ball team accompanied by several hundred admirers, came down from Lafayette this afternoon on a special train and is now playing the Wabash eleven on the college grounds. The Wabash team is badly crippled, not over half the regular team being in service. The following is the personnel of the two teams:

The State Farmers' Institute.

The State Farmers' Institute to be held in Crawfordsville Nov. 23 and 24, will be one of the best ever held in Indiana. Mrs. Virginia C. Meredith, of Cambridge City, one of the Board of Lady Managers of the World's Columbian Exposition, will be present throughout the institute and will deliver two lectures, one on the value of corn fodder. This practical paper has attracted attention all over the United States. Mrs. Meredith has as fine herds and flocks as can be found in Indiana, and corn fodder is fed to the exclusion of hay. Her able paper will tell the farmers how to utilize this great western product. Mrs. Meredith is honored for her literary ability as well as for her advanced ideas in farm economy. Mrs. E. J. Howland, of Indianapolis, will tell the farmers how to spray their fruit trees to insure perfect fruit. Mrs. Laura D. Worley will give an able paper on dairying. Mrs. Worley has attained a national reputation. The committee have secured the best institute workers in the State and every farmer should be in attendance. J. B. Conner's paper on the waste of the farm will be an eye opener to our farmers. The program abounds with good subjects and able speakers to discuss them.

CHURCH NOTES.

Rev. G. P. Fison will conduct the Y. M. C. A. meeting to-morrow afternoon. Rev. G. P. Fison will preach both morning and evening at the Baptist church.

Rev. G. W. Switzer will occupy the pulpit of the Methodist church to-morrow morning and evening.

Dr. R. J. Cunningham will have charge of the usual services at Center Presbyterian church to-morrow.

The regular services will be held at the Christian church to-morrow conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. W. Brown.

Rev. A. K. Glover will conduct the usual services to-morrow at St. John's Episcopal church, at 10:30 a. m., and 7:30 p. m.

Rev. R. S. Ingalls will conduct the usual services at the First Presbyterian church to-morrow. In the morning a collection for the Freedman's Aid Society will be taken.

To-morrow at the Y. M. C. A. armory Rev. Penny will preach twice. Mr. Penny is the minister appointed by the U. B. conference to this place and is endeavoring to build a church here. It is to be hoped that his efforts will be crowned with success.

Beginning with next Tuesday at St. John's Episcopal church the Central Deacons, of Indiana, will hold its convocation. The following is the program:

Thursday, 7:30 p. m.—Opening sermon by the Dean, and an address by the Bishop. Wednesday, 10:30 a. m.—Morning prayer; Holy Communion by the Bishop; sermon by Rev. C. S. Sargent. 3:30 p. m.—Woman's Auxiliary meeting with addresses. 7:30 p. m.—Missionary meeting, with addresses by the Bishop, and Messrs. Hunter, Stanley, Cathell and others.

SCENES AT SHERIDAN.

A Graphic Account of the Scenes Round About Crawfordville's Gas Reserve.

SHERIDAN, Oct. 22.—Having met A. P. Ramsey in the Union Station at Indianapolis, and having accepted his invitation to attend the inaugural ceremonies of the first Crawfordville gusher The JOURNAL correspondent turned up at Sheridan about 1 o'clock this afternoon. Successfully resisting the entreaties of two ragged youngsters, both of whom represented "the best hotel in the city," we found Mr. Frank Colby the charge d'affaires at this end of the line who was in waiting with a carriage. Passing through the business and residential portion of the town which is kept nicely and looks not so dead as most towns of 1,000 people, we drove north about a half a mile, and then turned east on a gravel road on which are situated three of Crawfordville's wells. A fourth derrick on "rog," as it is called, has just been put up in the woods a mile north of the road. The first well we came to was the one that was expected to gush, but the tool had only a few minutes before broken off, and consequently the gusher was delayed several hours. But there was unmistakable evidence of gas. You could smell it, and by putting your hand over the hole feel it coming out in puffs like the smoke of a locootive. The well was 1,054 feet deep, and seven feet into Trenton rock. About six feet more and the operator said he would have a strong flow with a pressure of at least 300 pounds to the square inch. The other two wells further up the road at a distance of about a mile apart, were each 450 feet deep. At one of them the boss said he would get gas by a week from Saturday. There are two contractors at work, Churchill and St. John. They are to dig seven wells between them, but as the former has three derricks up, one well practically done and another under way, while the latter has but one well only half done, Churchill will doubtless make the most money out of the deal.

Mr. Colby showed us a map of the gas region near Sheridan with the territory leased for the Crawfordville company shaded in green. There was a decided greenish tinge about that map, for under the management of Mr. Colby several thousands acres of the best gas land in the field have come under the Crawfordville company's control. It all lies east of Sheridan and a little to the north. This makes the piping distance a little greater but it also makes gas surer than if experiments were tried further west. There is only one well west of Sheridan as yet, but in all probability the Crawfordville company will do some drilling over there after they are sure of enough gas to supply their consumers this winter.

The only other company which has wells in this region is the one at Lebanon. Frankfort has no well here but does not use much, as it was drilled before gas was found at Kempton. Mr. Colby, who came here last June from Pennsylvania, is, as the driver of our vehicle told me later, "a slick man." He oversees the drilling, hires men to work in the trenches, but most important does that delicate work of leasing territory. Gas territory leases have a very uncertain market value, ranging in price from nothing up to $100 per well. This wide range is due somewhat to the location of the land whether it is in the neighborhood of a good gusher or over on the edge where no wells have been dug, but much more to ability of the man after gas to make a good impression on the farmer and give him the right kind of a talk. Some grangers will give a company the privilege of drilling on their land for the right to have three fires and a lawn burner (being an upright piece of gas pipe eight feet high, used to light the front yard) while others with an exaggerated idea of the value of a lease demand a price that is out of sight. As much as $100 a well has been paid, but the average price is $50. Natural gas has increased the value of farm land in this field to almost double its former worth. Ex-State Superintendent of Public Instruction LaFollette holds a farm here which he asks $150 an acre for but this is an exceptional case. In Sheridan the increase has been about the same and the population has increased considerably also, but it is by no means a boomed town and no large factories have been started.

An unusual sight is a line of pipe lying right on top of the ground along the roadside. It is only an inch in diameter, yet it supplies fuel for the engines at all of the derricks and twenty-five families along the road. Mr. Ramsey is of the opinion that seven wells will be amply sufficient for all the consumers along the line. He estimates that there will be 3,000 fires (not consumers) in Crawfordville and about 1,500 fires outside. Farmers who use the gas will have to bear all the expense of the piping to their homes and Montgomery county farmers will pay Crawfordville prices, while those in Boone county will pay Thornton prices. The company has made no arrangements yet with the town trustees of Lexington or Thornton but no trouble is anticipated. In these two places the company expects to do private and street lighting also.

In regard to meters Mr. Ramsey says they will not be used simply because they cost too much. He estimates that with their use the people would burn about one third less gas and it would also cost them some less. Natural gas companies, it has been stated, are as a rule so regulated that the investors will get all their money back in about three years. This is because of the uncertainty of the supply and the certainty of large loss if the supply should cease, but Mr. Ramsey states that the People's Natural Gas Company is not expected to pay back all of the investment before ten years. The first dividends will be declared next spring. A. A. M.

Since this was written the drillers went eight feet deeper, and withdrew their drills, to find that they had a gusher. The noise of the escaping gas is as the rush of mighty waters. It will be packed and all saved. A. A. M.

HIGH OR LOW?

Dr. E. R. Lewis Inciting an Insurrection In St. Paul's Episcopal Church of Indianapolis.

When Dr. E. R. Lewis resigned the chair of chemistry in Wabash college a id removed to Indianapolis three years ago he was as staunch a Presbyterian as John Calvin or even Dr. Patton, of Princeton, would have cared to meet. Somehow or other, though, after the genial Doctor became domiciled in the capital city, he decided to change his church affiliations and not so very long ago withdrew his letter from the Presbyterian church and became a member of St. Paul's Episcopal church. Now, the goodly people of St. Paul's church considered him quite an acquisition and smiled most benignly as they hastened to make him a member of the ancient and honorable order of vestrymen. This suited Dr. Lewis all right and being naturally of a pugnacious temperament he proceeded at once to lock horns with Mr. Jenckes—not Capt. Jenckes of the horse marines, but the Right Rev. J. S. Jenckes, LL. D., Dean of the Central Deacons of Indiana and Rector of St. Paul's church. The difference between the doctor of medicines and the doctor of laws is simply a difference of degree. Dr. Lewis, when he changed churches transferred his radicality as well. St. Paul's is distinctly "low church" and so is Dr. Jenckes and most of the membership. Dr. Lewis had not long been a vestryman, however before he organized the scattered "high church" people and began to take steps toward making St. Paul's "high church." Astonished by his presumption, Dr. Jenckes and his "low church" followers at first held up their hands in holy horror and then began to struggle gallantly against the inroads of the revolutionary doctor. The contest is now in full blast and Dr. Lewis is making a gallant fight under the banner of the high church. He seems to be out-numbered, however, and thus far has succeeded only in stirring up as much of a mess as the unfortunate individual in the comic play, who in a luckless hour stepped on the "flea in the hair of the tail of the dog of the child of the wife of the wild man of Borneo." Dr. Lewis is still hanging out defiantly for the high church and being treasurer of St. Paul's, he wields no mean influence. He is becoming somewhat discouraged, however, and recently stated that he would probably return to the Presbyterian church in the course of time, especially as he had lost patience in Dr. Jenckes' declaration to the effect that the world would come to an end in ten years. With a man of Dr. Lewis' push and determination on his track the only wonder is that the good Dr. Jenckes did not set the Great Day at a much earlier period than ten years. The controversy now in progress probably explains Dr. Jenckes' hallucination. In fact, you find a reason for everything if you only go to the bottom of things.

A Feast at New Market.

Last night at the home of John Warbritton, at New Market, there was a party given by the members of the corner band in honor of one of their members, Al Armstrong, who was married last Sunday to Miss Emma Vancleave. The menu was prepared under the direction of Mrs. Warbritton and Mrs. Scott Wray. After the guests had partaken of the feast they passed the time in conversation and listening to music by the band.
