THE OUTLOOK.

In contemplating the bitter political contest now just opening, it is a subject of sincere pride on the part of the Republicans that all the leading political and trade journals of the country, in their New Year's greetings, have indulged in the most sanguine hope of an untroubled prosperity for the year just begun. There is nowhere a suspicion even, that there will be anything but abundance and gladness for all who earnestly seek and labor for them.

Everywhere the leading metropolitan papers speak daily of a growing home trade, new factories, an increasing foreign commerce, and other evidences of a genuine and lasting prosperity. The avocation of the chronic croaker is in deed gone, and his waiting no longer disturbs the universal rejoicing of a prosperous and happy people. The cloud which has so long darkened the path of the farmer is drifting away, and on all hands we hear of good and satisfactory incomes from the past year's products. It is no difficult thing to find farmers, in almost any neighborhood, who will tell you truthfully of net incomes of 10, 15, 20, and some as high as 25 per cent. on the value of their lands. Our railroads, without any increase of freight or passenger rates, are prospering. Indeed, the indications are numerous, abundant, and convincing, that our country is now entering an era of prosperity, growth, and development such as it has never before experienced. Whether or not it is fair to attribute all the brightening "signs of the times" to the legislation of the last Congress, there is no denial of the fact that they exist. If the McKinley bill did not produce this prosperity, it certainly has not retarded it. We think, however, that a fair and just consideration of the events of the last year will convince most unprejudiced minds that reciprocity has opened new markets to our products, both of the farm and the factory. If a great tin-plate industry is on the eve of permanent establishment in this country, certainly none will deny to the McKinley bill the credit for this achievement. If we are more rapidly than ever marching to the front of the procession, in the world's industrial parade, no chances should be taken of changing our place in the grand review by tampering with the policy of the 51st Congress, and the present administration. When the ship is going all right a wise captain will not change his sails. We believe the judgment of all prudent and conservative men will be that it is best "to let well enough alone." These views will doubtless bring regret to that large class of mankind who are always hunting for something to complain of, and who are never happy till they find "a screw loose" somewhere. But, they are nevertheless true views.

A FEW days since the Crawfordsville Journal was grumbling at Brookshire for erecting a government building in Brazil. Should friend Byrd succeed in causing. Very well, but he will not be satisfied with one little building but will demand a second one. Then weeping and wailing will be several meters deep in and around the JOURNAL office.—Brazil Enterprise.

The fact that George A. Byrd intends to shie his custer into the ring for the Democratic Congressional nomination will, perhaps, account for Brookshire's bill to erect a public building at Brazil. Vory's object was to take snap judgment on Byrd and thus make himself solid in Clay notwithstanding his Brazilian rival. Brookshire is a better politician than Byrd.

KENTUCKY lacks $500,000 of having money enough to pay her bills for the past year. Democratic rule comes high but she insists on retaining it any price.

A Woman School Commissioner.

Although Wyoming has now had woman suffrage more than twenty years as territory and state, Kansas is far ahead in the list of woman municipal officers.

Argonia, Kan., has a woman mayor and city officials, and several other places in that state have honored ladies with places as school officials.

Mrs. N. A. Mahr was the first woman chosen to the school board of Atchison and Miss Lydia Stockwell the second. The latter is now in her fifth year of service, and two other ladies have been elected since she entered on the duties of the office.

An Answered Prayer.
"I ask thee not for fame," he said; "I would not wear that weighty crown. Nor yet for riches would I pray. But, God in heaven, bend thee down— I pray for peace," he said.

"From my poor life, grief's stormy sea Hath tossed my fairest hopes aside; I ask not for return of these. Upon some fair incoming tide— I pray for peace," he said.

He turned his head—beside him stood A man whose face was pale, but fair; Whose quiet eyes like starlight shone From out his dark and misty hair; "Thy prayer is heard," he said.

"But thou art Death—thy name is writ Upon thy still and smileless face— I pray for peace—why art thou here? What bringeth thee to seek this place? I prayed for peace," he said.

"Thy prayer is heard," the angel said; "Men pray for peace, yet Death would slay. Not seeing with thy blinded eyes That Death and Peace are ever one. Thy prayer is heard," he said.

Columbus.
Give me white paper. This which you use is black and rough with smears.

Of sweat and grime and fraud and blood and tears.

Crowded with the story of men's sins and fears. Of battle and of famine all these years. When all God's children have forgot their birth.

And drugged and fought and died like beasts of earth.

Give me white paper. One storm-trained seaman listened to the word. What no man knew he saw, he heard.

In answer he compelled the sea To eger man to tell The secret she had kept so well.

Left blood and grime and rainy behind, Sailing still west the hidden shore to find. For all mankind that unstained scroll unfurled.

Where God might write anew the story of the world.

Death of a Well-Known Artist.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 4.—The sharp, cold weather is having a bracing effect, and physicians are hopeful of a rapid decline of the prevailing epidemic. Altogether the deaths from influenza aggregate fifty since its second reappearance in this city. During 1891 the total deaths in the city aggregated 2,139, as against 1,860 in 1890.

ELWOOD, Ind., Jan. 4.—The grip has become epidemic in this city. A large number of deaths have occurred from it during the last two weeks. One medical man has about 600 patients.

A greater portion of whom have the disease.

Found Dead in the Road.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Jan. 4.—Tonlin Hunt, 73 years old, resident of New Township, Johnson county, was found dead on the highway Saturday morning. He had been absent from his home since Friday. It is supposed that his horse ran away and that the deceased met his death by being thrown from the buggy when it collided with a bridge near which the body was found.

Troubles Amicably Settled.

TERRE HARBOR, Ind., Jan. 4.—The indications pointing to a renewal of the strike in the bituminous coal regions have almost entirely disappeared. The trouble in the Linton district has been amicably settled, and every bituminous miner in the state, with the exception of about 300 at Clinton, is working.

INDIANA.

The Hoosier State Furnishes Many Interesting Bits of News.

Political Pointers.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 4.—Before Senator Turpie's return to Indianapolis on his present visit there was some doubt as to whether he would work for a reelection at the hands of the legislature next year. During the last few days the senator has said to several prominent democrats that it is his ambition to be returned to the senate. He is now considered a candidate and his friends say that in case the legislature is democratic he will likely be returned. If ex-Gov. Gray shouldn't succeed in getting on the national ticket he will contest the senatorship with Senator Turpie.

The candidates for governor on the democratic ticket are beginning the new year by starting their canvases in earnest. C. C. Matson has made a canvass of the Fifth district already and thinks he has it well organized. The pronounced candidates for governor expected that Congressman Bynum would declare his intention in reference to being a candidate during his holiday visit home, but Mr. Bynum has not done so. A good many democrats have approached him on the subject since he has been in Indianapolis, but none of them has been able to get any intimation from him as to what he intends to do. The north Indiana democratic papers have announced that Mortimer Nye, of La Porte, is a candidate for governor. Mr. Nye has been mayor of La Porte four terms, and was a member of the supreme court commission.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., Jan. 4.—The democrats of Putnam county met in mass convention in the courthouse Saturday and selected delegates to the state, judicial and congressional conventions and passed resolutions indorsing Col. C. C. Matson for governor and ex-Gov. Isaac P. Gray for president.

Indiana Drummers.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 4.—The Commercial Travelers' association of Indiana held an annual meeting here Saturday. The delegates were welcomed by Thomas L. Sullivan, mayor of the city. Reports were submitted showing 997 active members and $18,069.69 in the treasury. There were eight deaths during the year. The proposition to join hands with the world's fair commercial travelers' congress, which it is proposed to hold at Chicago in July, 1893, was brought by a communication from the board of directors. A resolution offered by Charles D. Meigs leaving the matter to the discretion of the directors with power to solicit voluntary subscriptions was overwhelmingly adopted. The following officers were elected: Charles W. Lefley, Indianapolis, president; Vice presidents, Indianapolis, J. H. Stubbins, Evansville, W. Shellhorn; Terre Haute, C. D. Griffin; Lafayette, C. C. Ellis; Fort Wayne, August Kreupers; Richmond, G. W. Scheppman; Vincennes, C. H. Hayman; Logansport, W. Lee Smith; Frankfort, Nelson Hanna; Crawfordsville, Perry Hlati; Anderson, C. C. Forey; Muncie, G. B. Best. Secretary, W. T. Henley.

"AN INVALUABLE MEDICINE."

DEAR MADAM:

You speak of using my recent letter as a testimonial — you are perfectly welcome to do so — would that I could influence all suffering women to give your compound a fair trial. I must say to you that it is an invaluable medicine, and, if used according to directions, will prove a certain cure for the diseases it is recommended for. It has been very, very beneficial to myself and daughter.

Sincerely Yours,

Mrs. S. BLAIR, cor. Church and Park Sts.,
Roxbury City, Va.

Master Coville as Cupid.

Mr. Coville's niece, an estimable as well as a pretty young lady, has been visiting him for some time. Shortly after her coming, a clerk in one of Danbury's leading stores made her acquaintance and became at once her devoted admirer.

Very much to the delight of young Coville. The clerk is very fond of good tobacco, and smokes an admirable cigar. The portion of it that is not consumed when he reaches the house he leaves on the porch until he comes out again. The third or fourth time he did this young Coville detected the move, and lost no time in possessing himself of the luxury, with which he retired to an out of the way place.

When this had been done several times, and several times the clerk had secretly felt for and missed his cigar, he began to grow suspicious and uneasy. Perceiving this, young Coville availed to the fact that something must be speedily done to counteract the smoker's discretion, and the best way to do it was to completely involve him in the meshes of love as to make the loss of an unfinished cigar a matter of no account whatever. With this view he put himself in the young man's way at the store. The bait took.

"How's Minnie?" asked the clerk anxiously.

"She's not very well," said young Coville.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"I don't know. I guess you know that better than I do," answered the youth, with a facetious wink.

"I know?"

"I guess so. Oh, she's gone on you."

"She?" cautioned the clerk, looking around to see if they were unobserved.

"What do you mean, Billy?" And he blushed and looked pleased.

"Why, you see, she's as chicky as can be when you're there, but when you ain't she's all down the mouth. She don't fix her hair, she won't see anybody, she goes around the house sighing, an' sets on a chair for an hour without sayin' a blamed word to nobody, but just lookin' at the wall. Then there's another thing," added the young man impressively, "she don't put cologne on her handkerchief only when you're comin' on. Oh, I know a thing or two, you bet!" And he winked again.

To say that the clerk was too pleased and rejoiced for anything is but feebly expressing the frame of his mind. In the excitement of emotion he gave young Coville a quarter. That diplomat hastened home and immediately sought his cousin.

"Minnie," he said, "I have been up to Charlie's store."

"Have you?" she said, trying to look very much unconcerned.

"Yes, and I can tell you, Minnie, he's just a prime fellow—way up. But he's gone on you."

"What do you mean, Willie?" asked the flushed and agitated girl.

"I mean just what I say. He's gone on you. He got me off in one corner and he just pelted the questions into me about you. By gracious, Minnie, it's awful to see how he is gone on you. He wanted to know what you're doing, an' if you're enjoying yourself, an' if you're careful about your health. He'd better be careful for his own, I think."

The girl was pleased by these marks of devotion from the handsome clerk, but her heart failed her at the last observation.

"Why, what do you mean, Willie?" she asked, in considerable apprehension.

"Oh, nothing, only if he keeps a-goin' down as he is of late it won't be many months before he is sailed down for good," said the young man gloomily.

"He told me that the things of this world won't long for him."

And young Coville solemnly shook his head and withdrew to invest the quarter.

A great happiness has come upon Charlie and Minnie now. Four times a week young Coville comes and sits back of the fence smoking a cigar and speculating on the joyful future opening before his cousin and her lover.
