SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1893.

A SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS.
The President has issued a proclamation convening Congress in Extra Session on August 7, the purpose of which is to improve the financial situation by repealing the silver purchasing act. If Mr. Cleveland really believes that the Sherman Act is an "unwise law" and that it is the cause of the "distress and apprehension" which pervade financial circles he has performed nothing but his duty. After the Sherman law has been repealed the country will awaken to the fact that the patient has been treated for the wrong disease. The trouble lies in the industrial situation. The primary cause is the threat which hangs over our manufacturing enterprises that the protective policy to which their business has been adjusted will be torn up root and branch. This threat and uncertainty as to the future tariff policy have done more to "cripple" our merchants, stop the wheels of manufacture, bring distress and privation to our farmers and withhold from our workmen the wages of labor than any silver legislation that has been enacted. If Congress, when it meets, assures the country by resolution that there will be no meddling with the present tariff, it will do more to restore confidence and set the wheels of industry moving than simply a repeal of the silver purchasing act.

The Toledo Commercial commenting on the wool situation, says: "Practically a great industry of the United States is destroyed. There has been as yet no change in the laws, but the fears of a change by a Democratic administration of the government has annihilated the wool-growing industry of the country. Once there was a large wool market in this city. It no longer exists. There is practically no sale for that once valuable product. But while a great industry of the country has been annihilated, and while England is rejoicing because of the destruction of the wool-growing industry of the United States, the Democratic promise that there should be cheap clothing for the people is not realized. We give to the English provinces a monopoly of the wool-growing business, and at the same time we must continue to pay for the clothing we wear as high prices as ever."

In 1873 the world's output of gold was $96,200,000, while the output of silver was only $81,800,000. In 1891 the world's total gold product only $126,159,000, while its silver product had increased to $186,174,000. Thus we see that while the gold of the world exceeded the silver in 1873 by $14,400,000 the silver in 1891 exceeded the gold by some $60,000,000. In eighteen years gold production has increased 31 per cent, and silver production has increased 128 per cent. These facts show the causes for the cheapening of the white metal in the markets of the world. The downward tendency of silver has been simply in obedience to the inexorable law of supply and demand.

WHATEVER may be the grievance of the students at the State Normal School they are guilty of insubordination. Refusing to submit to the powers that be and to all lawful rules places them in the position of intractable pupils. And these intractables are to become the teachers of the rising generation! Can they expect to teach discipline in the common schools when they themselves refuse to be taught discipline? These students are incorrigible and should be sent to Plainfield. It is a Reform School they need, and not a Normal School.

THE JOURNAL congratulates Wm. A. Huff on his prospective appointment as one of the watchmen of the treasury. It is to be hoped that his acceptance of this position will not in the least obscure the one best act of his life, and that was when he voted for Benjamin Harrison for President, for the reason, as he stated, that he was not in sympathy with Grover's views on the pension question.

THE Kansas City Journal says: "When tariff reform gets fully under headway labor troubles will become more numerous than they have ever been. Workingmen will be striking for a return to McKinley schedules."

The gold coinage in the United States in 1879 was $278,310,126; at the beginning of the current year it was $649,788,000. That of Great Britain is only $550,000,000 and that of Germany $600,000,000.

GROVER has just landed a goggle-eye in the person of Senator Voorhees, who comes out squarely for an immediate and unconditional repeal of the silver purchasing act. Patronage caught the Senator with which Grover's hook was baited.

BLOOD-SUCKING BATS.

Differing Stories About the Vampires of South America.

Many Species of the Queer Creatures Which Are Harmless and Even Useful Are Regarded as Dangerous.

Ever since the South American continent was discovered, especially that part of it lying between the Amazon and Orinoco rivers, travelers have come from there with wonderful tales of the vampires, or, as they call them, blood-sucking bats. As a fact, little is known about these pests, says the New York Tribune. That there are blood-sucking bats which feed not only on the blood of man but also animals is an undoubted fact, and though the writer himself has never been bitten by one, he has, while traveling in the interior of British Guiana, seen Indians and ponies that had undoubtedly been bitten by these pests. In the case of a man attacked the face or nose is the point punctured, while animals are liable to be bitten anywhere. How the bat does its work has not been made clear, for no man has yet awakened while being operated on by one of these bats, despite the fact that considerable blood is extracted and more or less loss of blood takes place after the operation. It is probable that the bat hovers during the operation rather than rests on the body. The rapid vibration of the soft wings probably also has a soothing effect upon the skin of the part operated on.

The blood-suckers belong to only two or three species, and wherever these are found there are also many others whose food is only fruit or insects, or both. The most natural mistake about the bats which are innocent or preying on man or beast is the common supposition that vampyrus spectrum is a blood-sucker. The stretch of wings of this bat frequently reaches three feet, and it has a most ferocious aspect, with enormously large and pointed canine teeth. It is perfectly certain that in most parts of British Guiana this bat is only a fruit eater and is a serious pest to fruit growers. Bates and Edwards, who traveled much in that country, vouch for its harmlessness, and the writer could never hear of a case where one of these giant bats was even suspected of being a blood-sucker. Wallace, however, gives a different account.

"The vampires are especially plentiful in the Amazon valley. Their carnivorous propensities were once discredited, but are too well authenticated. Horses and cattle are often bitten, and we found them in the morning covered with blood, and repeated attacks weak- ened and ultimately destroy them. Some persons are especially subject to the attacks of these bats, and as native huts are never sufficiently close to keep them out, those unfortunate persons are obliged to sleep completely muffled up in order to avoid being made seriously ill or even losing their lives."

Wallace, in saying that "the huts are never sufficiently close to keep them out," evidently uses the word "vampire" as a generic term and does not mean the vampyrus spectrum, for that bat would find no space large enough to let him into even the loosely built huts of the natives. It is this slipshod way of using the word vampire that brings trouble to many a useful bat. The writer has been in a house where every precaution was taken to keep out bats which would have been a perfect blessing in the rooms, as they would have caught hundreds of mosquitoes.

ONLY SALVINI KNEW IT.

No American on Board Could Recite "The Star Spangled Banner."

The lack of knowledge on the part of the average American of patriotic literature and national lyrics is aptly illustrated by a story told by Senator George Handy Smith at a social session in Harrisburg one day recently, a Philadelphia friend of his being present. Senator Smith had as his guest on the occasion the well-known actor, Alexander Salvini, who was visiting the state capital and who was the hero of the story. "When I came over from my annual trip to Europe last summer I made the journey across the ocean in the steamer New York," said the senator. "Mr. Salvini was one of the passengers. During the voyage an entertainment for the benefit of the Seamen's home was arranged, and everybody volunteered to take part in it. The people who managed the affair wanted some one to recite 'The Star Spangled Banner,' but came to the conclusion that no one could do it. I, however, knew the words of the famous song. Mr. Salvini learned of the difficulty, and to the surprise of everybody on board, told them he would fill that part of the bill. He recited the poem with great effect and knew every word of it. He had learned it, he said, as soon as he was able to speak the English language."

Not Up on Art Topics.

The "Saunterer" in the Boston Budget tells of a "grind" on a certain wealthy pork packer in the Hub, who is known among his friends as an admirable financier but a total failure as a social success. Although his friends realize that his education has not been such as to fit him for cultured conversation with the best ton, yet Mr. X's money is a powerful lever, and it opens open the doors of society sufficiently wide to let his corpulent body in. It was at the house of Judge Macdonald one night that the pork packer's knowledge of art was clearly shown. Mr. X had been lionized by the lovers of his money bags and was in high spirits. At last the Judge took him in hand and led him round to look at the pictures. Teniers, Wouvermann, Rembrandt—all had no charms for him and he soon grew tired. But as he was going out of the door he looked back and caught sight of a "Stimie Madonna." He clasped his host's arm. "Ah," he said, moving nearer to the picture, "now that's what I call a work of art. Mrs. Macdonald and the baby, of course?"

"Your Money or Your Life."

Such a demand, at the mouth of a "six-shooter," sets a man thinking pretty lively! With a little more thinking, there would be less suffering.

Think of the terrible results of neglected consumption! which might easily be averted by the timely use of Nature's Great Specific, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Consumption, which is lung scrofula, is a constitutional disease, and requires just such a thorough and effectual constitutional remedy. Taken in time, before the lung tissues are wasted, it is guaranteed a radical cure! Equally certain in all scrofulous affections and blood disorders. Large bottles, one dollar, of any druggist.

History and Poetry.

Three men seem real as living men we know—
The Florentine, whose face, we wore worn and dark
Rossetti drew; the Norman duke, "so stark
Of arm that none but him might draw his bow."
And gentle Shakespeare, though enshrined so
In his own thought that some men cannot mark
The soul his book reveals, as when a lark
Sings from a cloud, unseen by men below.
But still more real than these seem other three
Who never walked on earth—Hamlet, the Dane;
The "mole Moor," the cruel Scottish thane,
Ambition's thrall. How strange that they should be,
Though naught but figments of the poet's brain,
Instinct with life and yet more real than he!

Oldest Text of the Gospels.

Mrs. A. S. Lewis of Cambridge, Eng., has suddenly become a celebrated woman by discovering in the famous Convent of St. Catherine on Mount Sinai a copy of the gospels in Syriac, probably the oldest text of the gospels in the world. When she first saw the palimpsest, it was in dreadful condition, the leaves being stuck together and full of dirt. She separated the leaves, cleaned them, photographed the entire book, nearly 400 pages, and took the negatives back to Cambridge, where they were deciphered.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

"Fat Doctor Bills Make Lean Wills," but Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy costs less than one doctor's visit. Catarrh is a loathsome, dangerous disease, and the time has come when to suffer from it is a disgrace. No person of culture and refinement cares to inflict upon his friends his offensive breath, disgusting hacking and spitting and disagreeable efforts to breathe freely and clear the throat and nose—hence the cultured and refined use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. And no wise and prudent man cares to run the risk of leaving his family without a protector, by letting his "slight catarrh" run into serious or fatal throat and lung troubles. Hence the wise and prudent use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. The proprietors of this remedy are so confident of its curative properties, that they have made a standing offer of a reward of $500 for a case they cannot cure.

It brings back tone and vigor to the system weakened by those distressing complaints known only to women, which make life such a burden. It restores relaxed organs to a normal condition, it fortifies the system against the approach of diseases which often terminate in untold misery, if not in death—which is preferable to the pain and torment of living, in many instances. It is the great gift of scientific skill and research to women, and for it she cannot be too grateful. It cures her ill when nothing else can. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction or price, $1.00 returned. Absolutely sold on trial.
