—Rev. Ostrom will leave on Tuesday, Monday night he will give his last address.

—Master Ward Williams went to Waveland this morning to visit Lee and Bert Allen.

—The County Democratic Central Committee is in session this afternoon in the small court room.

—The assessors of the county were in town to-day and left with the proper books to commence work next week.

—Prosecutor Moffett went to Ladoga to-day to attend the preliminary trial of Jim Stark, who hit John Linkenhoker in the head with a club.

—Forty-seven applicants for teacher's license were before Superintendent Zuck to-day. George Brewer took the examination for State license and Miss Fan Watson for primary license.

—Rev. Ostrom while at dinner yesterday received a telegram announcing the death of a sister in Brooklyn, by smallpox. Her husband, A. H. Gilbert, is manager of a Loan & Trust Company there. In consequence of this sad news Rev. Ostrom was unable to address the very large congregation assembled at the M. E. church in the evening. After a time of prayer the meeting adjourned.

Spring Wrap Opening.

Our agent from one of the largest Eastern factors will be with us on Tuesday of our grand opening, with the largest line of handsome spring coats and capes. Do not miss the opportunity of seeing something new and nobby in spring wraps. Respectfully, McClure & Graham.

For County Surveyor.

Harvey E. Wynkoop announces in to-day's JOURNAL that he will be a candidate for the office of county Surveyor, subject to the decision of the Republican convention of June 2. Mr. Wynkoop is in the Senior class of Wabash college, has made engineering a specialty during his entire collegiate course and is thoroughly prepared to fill the duties of the office. He has done considerable work over the country and feels sure of success should he receive the nomination, since he has not only many good friends over the county but a host of student friends who would gladly give their aid to a fellow student.

Entertained Royally at Lafayette.

The K. of P. members from this city were highly pleased with their trip to Lafayette. They were entertained in a royal manner. Among those who went were: Dr. S. L. Ensminger, wife and son Chas. Johnson and wife, T. E. Nolan and wife, Theo. McMechan and wife, Chas. Vanclave and wife, W. M. Reeves, M. V. Wert, H. McClellan, Tom Ross, J. J. Insley, Elmer Crist, Henry Sloan, Dr. Gonzales, S. J. Beach, Geo. Shepherd, G. E. Mayhew and J. C. Hutton.

After a Hawk.

This morning in the circuit court L. J. Coppage filed a complaint against Wilbur Hawk, and asking that he be disbarred. Coppage alleges that Hawk is guilty of misconduct in a law suit, which he has kept going for personal aims. The petition asks that the court appoint a committee to investigate the matter. The court has taken the case under advisement, before further action is taken.

The Fire.

The alarm of fire this morning was at the house of Mrs. Richard Epperson on east Main street just across the Monon tracks. She was moving and had set out a stove. In some manner the stove was upset and the straw in the buggy shed was soon on fire. Put out with buckets.

New Social Organization.

The members of the old Montgomery Guard will hold another meeting this evening and hear the report of the committee upon re-organization of the Guards upon a social basis.

ADDRESS TO MOTHERS.

A Very Interesting Meeting and Appropriate Words by Rev. Ostrom—Programme To-morrow.

Yesterday morning at the Baptist church a large number gathered to hear Rev. Mr. Ostrom speak to mothers and their friends. He took for his text 2 Tim. 1:12: "I am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." He said: "I will not presume to give you a lecture upon the duties of motherhood. It would be far more appropriate on my part and far more beneficial to you for me to direct you to Him who made a mother's heart. Common doubt has one watchword, it is 'I can't, I can't.' Christian confidence has one watchword and it is contained in this text, 'He is able, He is able.' No other person in all the world has more frequent occasion for uttering that watchword than a mother. Benjamin West, the great artist, after drawing a rude picture with a piece of dead coal from his mother's fire place was taken up into her arms and kissed repeatedly as a token of her recognition of his success in his rude attempt. Said he in after years: 'My mother's kiss made me an artist.' I hope you recognize the importance of committing your child to God. 'He is able to keep that which I have committed.' When I was a wayward boy nothing so repeatedly appealed to me as a tender act of mother. When at the age of 6 or 7, as I played in the kitchen of our old house, one Sunday morning, she took me in her arms, looked steadily into my eyes until tears dropped on my face and said to me: 'My dear boy I gave you to God when you were an infant and I am looking for you to grow up to be a Christian man.' She committed me to mother, that wayward boy of yours may be far from home this morning and your heart-breaking interest in his welfare may be weighing upon your health. You think of the interest you took in him when you first began to admire his cute ways as a babe in your arms or when you began to discuss about what name you should give him. Or that daughter of yours may have strayed from your splendid ideal when you dressed her up for her first day's schooling. I beseech of you commit these children unto God. As far as you possibly can be concerned about them, place them in His hands. Then ask Him for orders as to the next best thing to do for their salvation.

Unless you have carefully examined into the customs of the larger cities you do not know the terrible slaughter of boys and girls from the better homes of such beautiful residential cities as this in which you live. In the houses of correction, in police courts and in rescue missions of Chicago, San Francisco, New York and Milwaukee these boys and girls from just such towns are found by the hundred and I visit scarcely a city without having either a mother or father come to me with the request that I try to avert the awful probabilities in the life of their sons or their daughters. I have found this particularly to be true in the experience of those whose children have decided to be actors or actresses. (Here the speaker cited several cases.)

One lady said to me: "O sir! My daughter is in this house to-night. If you see a very pretty girl, that's my daughter and she is determined to be an actress, and if she should you know the consequences." Then she threw herself helplessly into the pew and sobbed out her sorrow. I tell you mothers I have no time to debate the value of impersonation, or mimicry, or humor on the stage. The great problem with me is become this: Whose girl is that on the stage, and who is her mother, and how does her mother feel about her daughter's life?

At the close of the address Mr. Maxwell arose to sing the following song, but he was so affected that he broke down completely, the fact being that his own mother was dead:

SHALL I MEET MY SAINTED MOTHER?

"The writer of these words in childhood promised his dying mother that he would meet her in heaven. Forgetful of his promise, he in reaching manhood became an infidel. The silent words of Evans, "Sorrow," brought to mind the long forgotten teaching of that Christian mother, and casting aside his infidelity he accepted Christ as his Savior."

Shall I meet my sainted mother, in her home beyond the skies?
Will I see the love-light beamimg, from her tenderness, do you give eyes?
Will she kiss me when I meet her, for I'm changed so sadly now?
Will she see her fair-haired darling in this old and wrinkled brow?

When the bells of heaven ring, wake the one who's long been waiting, returning from the paths of sin and pain.
Will my mother be waiting, waiting with the look of love?
Will she bring me to her bosom, as she did when I was a child?

All the years of sin and sorrow, that I've suffered since I shed.
Will she bring me on that morrow, when I stand by mother's side?
Stand by her before the Savior, there among the blood-washed throng.
Joining in the heavenly rapture of the glad redemption song.

Darlington's Busy Man.

Monday he is second lieutenant to the grand chief and lecturer of the Good Templars.

Tuesday he is before the town board asking and receiving a donation for his assistance outside the corporate limits.

Wednesday his voice is heard explaining his Republicanism in a Republican convention before he is allowed to vote.

Thursday he is arrayed in all his glory as chairman of the Democratic convention, under, as he says, a call of the citizens.

Friday he is president of the Darlington horse racing association.

Saturday he clothes himself in sack-cloth and ashes for the sins of the people and cries: "Darlington, O Darling-ton! how often would I have gathered thee in, but I could not."

Sabbath, commonly called Sunday, he devotes to his fields, flocks and fast horses, with an occasional rebuke to his hirselings. He has full confidence in the doings of the church and ministry, as he leaves it entirely alone.
