A LAST WORD.
To-morrow the city election occurs. Three full tickets have been placed in the field—Republican, Democratic and Prohibition. The latter, it is safe to say, will not cut much of a figure in determining the result. The real contest, therefore, is between the Republican and Democratic forces. There should be no doubt as to the outcome. The Republicans have a good working majority, and if all the voters professing that political faith go to the polls and cast their votes for the nominees of the party the victory will be complete and overwhelming. There is no reason why a Republican should cross over and stamp in favor of a single Democrat on the ballot. THE JOURNAL hasn't a word to say derogatory of a single man, on either the Democratic or Prohibition tickets. As we have said heretofore they are all clever gentlemen and good citizens. But what we do say is that the personnel of the Republican ticket is the equal in every respect of the opposing candidates. This being true it is the duty of Republicans to stand by their ticket. It is a notorious fact that the Democratic party during the year it has been on trial in the Nation has shown its utter incapacity to manage public affairs. Wherever public opinion finds expression it sets the seal of emphatic disapprobation upon the entire work of the Democratic party during the first year of its control, which has been a year of destruction and retrogression. To-morrow's vote should be a vote to indicate a want of confidence in the Democratic party to rule the Nation, the State or the city. If you believe in smiting this party, hip and thigh, give such a vote to-morrow that will be in the nature of congratulations to the Republicans of the country that a better and brighter day is dawning.

The Indianapolis News, in criticising the declaration in the Republican platform in favor of increased tariff duties on the products of nations which refuse to aid in the establishment of an international standard of value, composed of gold and silver, says that "there is not a nation in the world which needs to trade with us," and that we need not hope to force any concessions from England. Of course everybody acquainted with the News knew that it would take sides with England in the controversy. It may be true that not a nation on earth needs to trade with us, but it is equally true that there is not a nation on earth with which we need to trade. The United States is the most independent nation on the earth, for we have all the resources of war and all the comforts and necessities of life to a greater extent than any other people. The News further argues that England will not suffer other nations to dictate a financial policy for her. But at the same time, the News thinks it perfectly proper for England to adopt the policy of gold monometallism and force all other nations to follow her example. The News can see no merit in anything that don't come from England.

Last year Frankfort had a survey made for a complete system of sewerage. The Council of that city has now taken the project up in earnest and has passed the necessary resolution which provides that the city shall take charge of the work, assume all the cost and pay for it in cash. Under this plan the indebtedness must be paid by way of taxation, and will necessitate the issuance of bonds. Sealed bids will be received up to June 1 and the work completed by November 1. The main sewer will be about 9,500 feet long, and will cost in the neighborhood of $25,000. Frankfort has set a good example for Crawfordsville.

The Cleveland badge is not worn on the breast or in the button-hole as it was in 1892. It adorns the seat of the workman's trousers.
This ratio in value of gold to silver was 1 to 14 in 1862, 1 to 16 in 1872, 1 to 18 in 1882, 1 to 20 in 1882, and is 1 to 28 now.

THE OLD MILL MYSTERY.

By Arthur W. Marchmont, B. A.
Author of "Miser Hoadley's Secret," "Madeline Power," "By Whose Hand," "Isa," &c. &c.
[Copyright, 1892, by the Author.]

It was no wonder she despaired. Those who might have given assistance in helping to unravel the mystery either could not or would not help. Reuben Goringe was too firmly convinced of Tom's guilt to be able to see a single ray of hope anywhere. Savannah had turned away and had refused even to let the truth, while the only man who had made any sort of profession of belief in Tom's innocence, Gibson Praxie, was worthless and unreliable and had not even taken the trouble to let her know what he had done.

Had he done anything? Was he in earnest? Or was he merely a shifty, worthless scamp, whose word and help were at the purchase of the last bidder? Could it be that he had had anything to do with the deed?

Then a hundred reasons flashed upon her why he might have been involved in it. He had been on the worst terms with both Coode and Goringe; the latter had ruined him, and the former, as she knew, had refused to reinstate him. He was hard pressed for money even to exist upon; he knew the mill thoroughly; he was not unlike Tom in general appearance, build and carriage, and in the dark might have been mistaken for him. Given that he had broken into the mill to rob the place, and had been caught and surprised by Mr. Coode, what more likely that he should have turned upon him?

As she thought of this, she grew excited at the idea and was angry with herself for not having thought of it before. She recalled how he had flinched when she had asked him pointedly the reason of his great interest in the matter. Added to that was his certainty, expressed over and over again, that Tom was innocent; and as she thought of all this she was ready to rush at once to the conclusion that Gibson was in some way involved in the mystery. She grew more excited as the belief increased, and after some time she dashed her hand on the table and exclaimed to herself:

"I'm right. That's the reason for his interest in the mystery. The villain!" Just then a hurried knock sounded on the door of the cottage, and Gibson Praxie himself entered the room.

CHAPTER XXV.

"YOU ARE A MAD WOMAN."

When Mary saw who her visitor was she flushed, nervously, as though he could tell what her thoughts of him had just been. She saw that he was tired and haggard and travel-stained. He sank down into a chair, as if exhausted, and was a sigh of relief.

"Give me some water," he said, eagerly. "I've had neither bit nor sup for hours, and I'm faint." The girl brought him food and tea, and watched him while he ate rapidly and, indeed, ravenously. During the meal he made no attempt to break the silence, except now and again to declare what a long time it was since he had broken his fast.

She eyed him closely and suspiciously the whole time, noting with restless eagerness the movement and expression of his face at the moments when he was too much engaged to notice her. And her new thoughts in regard to him made her find a more evil and villainous look in his rather handsome face than ever before.

His gluttony, too, disgusted her. The way he bolted the food, the quantity he ate, the noise he made in swallowing it and in gulping down cup after cup of tea, added to the repulsion with which he filled her.

At last he pushed the plate away from him and gave a loud sigh of relief.

"That's good. Can I have a whiff of 'bacca?" he asked.

"No," she answered, sharply; "you can't."

"You'd let me sharp enough if you knew what I've got to tell you."

"But I don't know it, and I don't want the smoke here." She was angered at the cool disregard he showed to her intense and painful anxiety.

"You don't ask me what my news is," he said, after a pause.

"No, I'm waiting for you to tell me. Have you found out what you want to find out?" She spoke rather ungraciously, but her suspicions of the man would assert themselves.

"You don't seem over gracious in your manner," he said, looking at her and speaking discontentedly.

"This is not a time when I can keep a smile on my face all day. What have you learnt?"

He was lying back in his chair, but he now sat up and, leaning forward, put his arms on the table and looked earnestly and seriously at her as he answered slowly and emphatically.

"I don't know that I have learnt anything definitely, but I'm on the track of something that will startle Walkden Bridge."

"Is that all?" replied Mary, in a disappointed tone. "Have you been able to find any of Savannah's movements on Friday night?"

"Not on Friday night. But it won't matter so much now."

"Have you found no one who was near the mill on that night?" she asked.

"No; why?" he asked, glancing suspiciously at her. "Why should I?"

"To prove that Tom wasn't about there," she answered. Then she tried to keep her voice steady and her tone indifferent for the next crucial question.

"Where were you yourself that night?"

There was no mistaking the quick movement of uneasiness with which he seemed to spring up into an attitude of

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health.

The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the diagram, it descends from the base of the brain and terminates in the chest, where it is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by fatigue or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this organ, and instead of the cause of the trouble, noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., L. L. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries he has made are due to his efforts. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nerve, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nerve cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiate or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind. In large bottles of $1.00 each, six bottles for $5.00, express prepaid. Sold by all druggists.

eager, listening suspense, while the look he directed at her was full of angry and nervous questioning.

"Where was I? Why, what has that to do with it?"

"Because as you were about the village you must have seen them together. Where were you?" repeated Mary, in a clear, firm voice, regarding the man with a fixed, steady gaze as she spoke.

Gibson laughed uneasily, shifted on his seat, and glowered back threateningly.

"I suppose it don't much matter to you, Mary, where I was? You wouldn't take much interest in me and my doings when I wanted you to."

"But I take an interest now," answered the girl, pointedly, "and especially in your doings last Friday. I expect them to show me why you take such an interest in this business."

Economy and Strength.
Valuable vegetable remedies are used in the preparation of Hood's Sarsaparilla in such a peculiar manner as to retain the full medicinal value of every ingredient. Thus Hood's Sarsaparilla combines economy and strength and is the only remedy of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true. Be sure to get Hood's.

Hood's PILLS do not purge, pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently.

Bilious Colic Prevented.
Persons who are subject to attacks of bilious colic can almost invariably tell, by their feelings, when to expect an attack. If Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is taken as soon as these symptoms appear, they can ward off the disease. Such persons should always keep the Remedy at hand, ready for immediate use when needed. Two or three doses at the right time will save them much suffering. For sale Nye & Booe, 111 Washington street, opposite court house.

It is Good.
The more Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used the better it is liked. We know of no other remedy that always gives satisfaction. It is good when your cough is seated and your lungs are sore. It is good in any kind of a cough. We have sold twenty-five dozen of it and every bottle has given satisfaction. Stedman & Friedman, druggists, Minnesota Lake, Minn. 50 cent bottles for sale by Nye & Booe, 111 Washington street, opposite court house.

Dangerous Preparations.
Alcock's Porous Plaster is composed of purely vegetable ingredients and is absolutely harmless. It assists nature in her own efforts to heal and invigorate, and imparts strength to the whole system.

Many preparations contain strong chemical and mineral substances which produce an injurious effect, not only upon the skin, but upon the whole system, although at first they seem very beneficial, on account of their powerful action and temporary effect upon the surface.

When purchasing a plaster do not only ask for Alcock's, but make sure that you get it.

Brander's Pills are purely vegetable.

Who Says Rheumatism Can Not be Cured.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J.
