TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1894.

The prosperity of the workingman is not so much determined by the cost of the necessities of life as by the wages he receives for his labor.

SINCE the passage of the Senate bill wool has constantly advanced.—Argus News.
If wool has advanced under the Senate bill how can the Argus-News figure it out that clothing will be cheaper?

GEN. GROSVENOR. In his speech here Saturday night, intimated that if our people were not satisfied with Brookshire's position on the sugar question they would be hard to satisfy, for he had voted for free sugar and a tariff of 40 per cent. on sugar, all in one day.

SENATOR BRICE. It is said, threatens to resign if the Ohio State Democracy fails to endorse his course. Let him resign if he likes. We would prefer seeing a straight Republican in his seat to the protectionist that now occupies it.—Argus News.

What great political sin has Senator Brice committed that the Argus-News should feel so offended and that it should attempt to read him out of the Democratic party? Did he not advocate a bill which became a law, not only by his own vote but the vote of every Democratic Senator but one? Did not the House with nearly one hundred Democratic majority approve and endorse the bill? Did not the Democratic President acquiesce and permit the bill to become a law? And has not the Argus-News upheld and defended the law to the best of its ability? How much worse off is Brice than is Cleveland, or every Democratic Senator who voted for the bill in the first instance, or of every Democratic member of the House who voted for the conference report in the last instance, or of the newspaper which day in and day out sings its praises and points out its beauties? How much better the Senate, the House, the President, the newspaper, than is Brice? They are all bespattered with the mud of party perdition and party dishonor.

THE LOUISIANA REVOLT.

The Louisiana sugar growers held a convention yesterday at New Orleans which was largely attended by the representative men of the State. The convention was the outcome of a movement inaugurated about ten days ago to protest against the action of the Democratic party on the sugar question, the leading industry of that State. The result yesterday was that the convention went over in a body to the National Republican party. The resolutions express belief in the doctrine of protection to all American industries. This rupture in the Louisiana Democracy is the most serious rift that has been made in the Southern contingent of the party for some time. It seems to be the opinion among those best posted in Louisiana affairs that this action of the sugar planters and their friends will work a political revolution in that State. It is estimated that there are about 55,000 voters interested more or less directly in sugar in Louisiana, and at least 50 per cent of this vote has heretofore been Democratic. Their action warrants the belief that the Democrats will lose three and possibly four Congressional districts. The Louisiana planters are not the only Democrats disgraced with the Democratic record. The wool growers of Texas may be expected next.

THE CHANGES OF A YEAR.

The New York Sun is a Democratic paper of the straightest sect, but it has never shown any great love for Grover Cleveland. For this reason the Argus-News has more than once had occasion to speak of the Sun in most uncompromising terms, but what follows from that paper concerning the changes since the elections in 1892 are interesting and instructive:

The present seems a favorable time for mentioning the fact, no longer to be denied even by Grover Cleveland's most ardent enemies, that he has the gift of changing votes, of affecting the verdict of the people at the polls, in a degree not possessed by any other politician in the country. Figures are the best champions of his right to this distinction. In 1892 the Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts was elected by a plurality of 2,534. In 1893, after eight months of Mr. Cleveland's administration, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts was beaten 35,997 votes, a plurality nearly 10,000 larger than Gen. Harrison got in that State in 1892. In New York the Democratic plurality of 45,518 in 1892 was changed into a Republican plurality of 24,481 in 1893. In Pennsylvania a Republican plurality of 93,947 in 1892 was more than doubled in 1893, and became a Republican plurality of 135,146. In Iowa a Republican plurality of 22,695 in 1892 developed under this genial and inspiring Administration into a Republican plurality of 22,350 in 1893. In Ohio a Republican plurality of 1,072 in 1892 was nursed until it became a Republican plurality of 80,995 in 1893. In Rhode Island in 1892 the Democratic candidate for Governor had a plurality of 185. In 1893 the Republican candidate for Governor had a plurality of more than 4,500. In Vermont in 1892 the Republican candidate for Governor had a plurality of 19,702. In Vermont in 1894 the Republican candidate for Governor had a plurality of 27,000 odd.

In 1892 the Republican candidate for Governor of Maine had a plurality of 12,331. In 1894 he had a plurality of 37,000 or thereabouts. The future remains unknown.

The Calf on the Lawn.

I'm going to hitch this 'ere young calf out here today from the lawn. He'll stay right here an' chew the grass till the bull thing is chawed. He'll stay right here an' chew the grass till the bull thing is chawed. He'll stay right here an' chew the grass till the bull thing is chawed.

Looks bad, yer say, to see a calf out in a man's front yard. An' him like a barnyard on this stylish boulevard. But that air calf shall eat that grass until I get him fat.

An' if he feels like blattin' w'y, I reckon he will blat. When I first took my farm out here, this wuz a country road. Across the way wuz pasture lan, where he'd be at the grass. My calf wuz then latched in my yard for the bull town's inspection. An' no damn enterprisin' doerl cum round to make objection.

When this road grew a village street, my calf wuz in the yard. An' now the street it swells 'ith style—a city boulevard. But I will hitch this 'ere young calf out here in my front lawn. He'll stay right here an' chew the grass till the bull thing is chawed.

You say the way I carry on makes the bull city. Waal, let 'em laugh; this 'ere's my lawn, an' this 'ere's my calf. An' them best reached the purtiest pass the world has ever seen. Ef an ole doerl can't let his calf chew grass on his own lawn.

Waal, let 'em laugh; this 'ere young calf shall stay here anyhow. An' if I hear 'em laff too hard I'll trot out the ole cow. I'll hitch 'em both to the same stake right here in my front lawn. An' let 'em stay an' chew the grass till the bull thing is chawed! —S. W. Foss.

THE BOER COUNTRY.

Remarkable Growth of the South African Republic.

Settlement of the Transvaal and Its Marvellous Industrial Progress—Composition of the Government.

The territory comprising the Transvaal or South African republic covers an area larger than that of France. It is bounded by the Boers, who fled from the tyrannical form of government which the English sought to impose upon them further south. The Boers are the descendants of the sturdy Dutchmen, who constituted Holland a republic and a formidable power in the sixteenth century, and of the Huguenots, who were driven from France by the revocation of the edict of Nantes in 1685 by Louis XIV. Thus in the Boers of South Africa there is a combination of the characteristics of two people who are conspicuous in European history for the struggles they waged for political and religious liberty. Since the days when the first band of hardy immigrant Boers crossed the Vaal river, where England's tyrant stopped at following them, and planted their cabins on the broad and sunny slopes of the Transvaal, the country has gone through the changes and throes which mark the life of individual and nation alike. Within the past five years a marvelous development of population, resources and industries has followed on the success which gold mining has achieved. Railway communication now connects Johannesburg via the diamond mines of Kimberly with the Cape of Good Hope, a distance of nine hundred and forty-five miles. Other connections are rapidly progressing from Natal and Delagoa bay, centralizing at Pretoria, the capital and seat of government in the Transvaal.

The constitution of the South African republic, says Goldthwaite's Magazine, is based on Roman Dutch. The legislative power is vested in the volksraad, the members of which are elected by their constituents for four years. The executive consists of the president, elected for five years by a general election throughout the state, the state secretary elected by the volksraad for four years, and four unofficial members chosen for three years by the volksraad. The chief officer in each district is the landdrost, who acts as magistrate and civil commissioner, with the assistance of a clerk, who is the same time public prosecutor and distributor of stamps. Each district is further provided with a baljaar or sheriff, gaoler and a staff of constables. With the exception of a corps of mounted artillery and police, commanded by three officers with about sixty men, the republic has no armed force. The president, with the concurrence of the executive, has the right to declare war and call up a commando, in which the burghers are placed under the field cornets and commanders of each district. The whole force is commanded by the commandant general, who is elected by the country for the term of ten years. All inhabitants of the state between sixteen and sixty years of age, not exempt according to law, are liable to service on commando. President Kruger is now occupying his office for the third term. He is a patriot, a man whose heroic life posterity will honor. Among the Boers he is known exclusively as "Oom Paul" or "Uncle Paul." Though a man of rugged exterior, untutored even in the most elementary branches of education, he has shown a practical capacity for government that has been a match for the most finished diplomacy and statecraft. For the conservation of the interests of the mining class, almost entirely English, he influenced the volksraad to establish a second chamber, to which they could send their representatives. This chamber legislates in the interest of the English class and for the local interests of the country, the volksraad holding the right of veto over its proceedings.

PERFUME MEASURED BY CENTS.

She Wanted Visitors to Smell the Dollar-and-a-Half Rose.

"All flesh is not the same flesh," and there are people who cannot understand the esthetic delight in what to a grosser sense is at best a mere material substance simply an affair of dollars and cents.

What flowers are, for instance, to some feminine natures is incomprehensible to less poetic beings, who, however pleased they may be with the costly beauty of exotics are quite incapable of feeling the true spell of their loveliness.

One of these true lovers of flowers, calling on Mrs. Midas the other day, says the New York Tribune, was shown into her sumptuous drawing-room, which, in accordance with the delightful fashion of the day, was filled with costly roses in the greatest profusion, and was redolent of their perfume.

Quite entranced, the "lover of flowers" wandered from one fragrant specimen to another, and finally was hanging with delight over a large bunch of "Mme. Cousines," whose exquisite pink looked most enchantingly fresh in a large bowl of clear cut crystal, when her hostess entered.

"Admiring the roses, are you?" said the latter, after the first greetings had been said. "Yes, they are pretty nice this morning; I gave carte blanche to Blank to fill my vases every other day, so I have no trouble about them at all. But don't waste your praises over those twenty-five-cent things; only small things," pointing to the superb cluster of American Beauties. "They cost one dollar and a half apiece."

Discard Their Tails.

When suddenly frightened lizards will often drop their tails and scurry away. The discarded member, bouncing up and down, attracts the attention of the enemy and enables an escape to be effected.

CHAPERONE FOR A CORPSE.

How a Stranded Actor Worked His Passage Across the Continent.

The other day an actor who a fortnight ago was known to be stranded on the Pacific slope, made his appearance on Broadway dressed in the height of fashion and the dearest morning suit. My friend and I, who were sitting at the New York Evening Sun, as his old acquaintances met him they exclaimed, simultaneously: "How did you get here? Where did you get the clothes? Who's dead?"

The actor waved them away imperiously. "Don't ask questions, now," he cried. "I earned the clothes and I traveled first-class all the way from 'Frisco. There's no one dead. I'm just wearing the clothes from a sense of the fitness of things. Keep it dark, boys, and I'll tell you. I've been chaperoning a stiff. You see, it was like this," continued the actor, "there was I, out in 'Frisco without a red cent, and my trunk gone and my credit at the hotel. I hadn't so much as an alternate pocket handkerchief. I was beginning to think seriously of suicide, when I heard that a wealthy easterner had just died in the hotel, and his friends were looking for some reliable person to take the body on east. It is a rule with the railroad companies that when a body is shipped the friends must buy two tickets—one for the corpse and one for the person in charge of it. Well, I applied for the job and got it. The friends of the corpse gave me the mourning suit and kept me supplied with all the creature comforts from cocktails to sleepers. There are worse jobs than a stiff's chaperone."

Afterward, when the actor had passed a manager exclaimed: "How's that for a ghastly yarn? And yet I know that fellow is telling the truth. Did you notice none of the other actors seemed surprised at his story? You'll find that lot of actors who have played and been stranded in the far west have chaperoned a stiff at some time in their career. You see, in Denver and those other health resorts easterners are constantly dying. Often the persons have no friends out there, and the relatives are only too glad to pay some respectable person for bringing the body home."

Survivors of Napoleon's Army.

One of the French papers which have been devoting a great deal of attention to Napoleon Bonaparte of late has been entertaining its readers by having a census made of the survivors of Napoleon's grand army. Four of these men only are now left. The eldest is Jean Jacques Sabatier, who was born on the 15th of April, 1792, at Vernoux L'Archeve, where he has lived in retirement for many years. Then come Victor Bonitet, Jean Bonitet and Joseph Rose, aged respectively one hundred and one month, one hundred years and one month and one hundred years and a few days. It is said that all are as hearty and vigorous as can be expected, in spite of their experiences as long as eighty-two years ago in that terrible retreat when the beggarly remnant of the greatest army the world has ever seen were out with cold and hunger, angrily called to the victor of Marengo and Austerlitz to get off his horse and share in the miseries of his men.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception. Heart Cure the system, and I was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could do my housework and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost paralyzed. Before I had taken one bottle of the Heart Cure, I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy.—Mrs. Morgan, 664 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Sold by all druggists.

SUCCESSFUL

No word better describes the result of our great

Discount Sale

Which has now been in progress for seven weeks. We have succeeded in reducing our stock to a great degree, and increasing our sales 35 per cent over the same period of any previous year, and its all because people are beginning to realize we always tell the truth in our advertisements.

"If you see it in Bischof's 'Ad' its so."

However we are not fully satisfied yet because we have many lines remaining that we greatly desire to get out of the house. Not because they are not desirable, but because we need the room for our Winter Stock which is now arriving. Many of the lots are too small for mention in our ad, but we will say that most of the items mentioned in our last week's ad, are to be had.
