The latest rumors about Mexican affairs are that Santa Anna and Juarez have settled their personal difficulties, and that an expedition, with Santa Anna at its head, will land upon the Mexican coast in time to seize the French and Austrian military supplies, thus paying the expenses of the expedition. A Strange Wedding Tour from the Altar to the State Prison.

A wedding party of a very unusual nature was assembled yesterday morning in the office of the clerk of the municipal court, adjoining the court-room. A marriage under corresponding circumstances has never taken place in this city, or in the State, that we know of.

The facts of the Oak Creek burglary, committed a few days since, have been spoken of on several occasions. It has been made public that two persons dressed in male apparel were arrested a day or subsequent to the commission of the crime. One of these parties afterward proved to be a young girl, whose name is Jennie Hamilton; the other is a young man, whose name is given by himself as John Craig. A short time after their arrest, both of them acknowledged their guilt of the crime with which they were charged, and yesterday they were arraigned upon the indictment, and sentenced to eight months confinement, in the State prison. The sentence was made thus light on account of the belief on the part of the court that this was their first crime, and that it was the result of the peculiarity of the circumstances under which they found themselves placed, rather than a state of lawlessness.

There is a tinge of the romantic running through the history of the two criminals that would be of great value to the writer of yellow-covered literature, were not the circumstances, unhappy for such a purpose, true. The girl, who is scarcely more than nineteen, and who appeared very modest and pretty when arranged before the court yesterday morning, in garments suited to her own sex, is the daughter of very respectable parents, and had a good home; but some time since she became attached to her fellow defendant, and left every thing—parents, home, good name and all, to follow him. Since then they have become very reduced in circumstances, and have been compelled to seek any shelter and wear any sort of clothes. And finally, in the endeavor to obtain relief, they were led to the commission of crime. Through all this the girl has followed the fortunes of her companion rather than return to her home.

After the sentence was pronounced the Chief of Police, to whom all these details were familiar, suggested to them that they had better be married before their departure for Waupun. Apparently this met their views exactly, and, in a few minutes, Justice Rottinger had performed the ceremony, with officers of the court and members of the police as witnesses and spectators. Whether the "Squire" received the legal fees or not we are unable to state, but consider it doubtful.

After the conclusion of the ceremony they were given some very sound advice by the police, who manifested much interest in them; and they will most probably act upon it, and, upon their release, commence life with new views and purposes.

The bridal party leaves to-day for Waupun, and the honeymoon will be passed within the strong walls of the State prison.

All Sorts of Paragraphs.

Chicago seems to be a nice place. On Monday night a respectable married woman, with her babe in her arms, attempted to drown herself in the lake—Jealousy. John McCarthy, sport, encountered the royal Bengal animal at the respectable den of Lloyd Bowers, got chawed up, and then got drunk. On recovering from his stupor he snatched a heavy roll of bills from Bowers and bolted. Mrs. Nellie Lincoln, formerly Fox, of Laporte, in this State, swallowed laudanum and died—Jealousy.

Robert Kenicott, son of Dr. Kenicott, of Chicago, died recently in the Frazier river country. Mr. Kenicott was attached to the Overland Roman Telegraph expedition.

Over 1,500 dogs have been killed in Milwaukee since the dog poisoning began in July last.

A monstrous trout, weighing seventy pounds, was caught in Lake Erie, fifteen miles above Dunkirk, on Wednesday last, by a Buffalo sportsman.

A negro sculptress, Miss Edmonia Lewis, has taken a studio at Rome, and works at her art in one of the rooms formerly occupied by the great master, Canova.

During the Doncaster races a gentleman wagered $500 against a carrot that Rustic would not win. The bet was made in good faith, as both the money and the vegetable were deposited.

In Boston, on Friday afternoon, a man had the ends of two of his fingers taken off by the bursting of a barrel of ale, the head being blown out and striking his fingers which were on the rim of another barrel at the moment.

The Troy Times reports a case in that city of a dying criminal who wished to make a confession of his crimes, but was prevented by his paramour, who guarded his bedside night and day until the death rattle in his throat relieved him.

Confederate Captain G. Elmore Burgess, at Chunnenngoo, Macon county, Alabama, writes that he has General McPherson's sword belt, and is anxious to return it to the proper person. It was picked up on the field the day the General fell.

The proposition made to send from California a section of the "Original Big Tree," to the World's Fair at Paris, is said by Dr. Macgowan to be impracticable, for want of a saw long enough to cut it. The cutting will require a saw forty feet long.

A little girl in Cambridge, Massachusetts, fell down on Saturday in the street on a slate pencil which she carried, which penetrated her side, and it is thought, reached the right lung. The pencil was removed a short time after, but the patient lies in a critical condition.

A counterfeiting establishment was broken up in Chicago on Thursday, and the operator, Rozians Lins, a fruit dealer, on State street, arrested. A $500 plate, press, &c., were found in his store. It is estimated that Lins has put $3,000 of his money upon the Chicago plate.

The tendency of people to carry quotations too far, was illustrated in a New Hampshire prayer meeting the other day by a brother who exclaimed in an agony of piet: "O Lord, have mercy upon us poor miserable sinners, of which I am the greatest ever seen in that city, over 50,000 persons being upon the ground at the time."

A novel feature of the Missouri State Fair just closed at St. Louis, was a pair of yoked buffaloes, which were driven around the course on Thursday, and bore themselves as decorously as well bred oxen. The crowd is said to have been the greatest ever seen in that city, over 50,000 persons being upon the ground at one time.

It is rumored that Miss Skittles, the once famous, or rather infamous, Phryne, born in England, but regnant in Paris, died a few days ago in Germany. They who lead her life commonly spend their old age sweeping the ditch, or die in a hospital bed, and are buried in a medical student's collection of anatomical specimens.

Ben. Butler is stated to be under treatment with an oculist in Boston, to cure his optical squint. At present he can only see crosswise, which embarrasses, if not account for, his obliquity of moral vision. He wants his crooked orbits straightened, so that he can recommend himself to voters in his Congressional canvass, as both a native and natural-eyed citizen. Sharp dodge that.

At a fair in Norwalk, Connecticut, last week, was a coop containing a rooster and some five or six hens, all in the gayest of plumage—red, white and blue, yellow, green, purple, etc. The colors, however, were all artificial, save the white, and were put on at the Norwalk dye works. The rooster was decked off in great "agony," and strutted about as prettily well restored.

Yours, truly,
A. L. NEAL.
