

THE ANGELS IN THE HOUSE.

Three pairs of diaphanous arms as white as snow.
Held me in soft embrace;
Three little cheeks, like velvet peaches soft.
Were placed against my face.
Three tiny pairs of eyes, so clear, so deep.
Looked up in mine this even.
Three pairs of lips kissed me a sweet "good night."
Three little forms from heaven.
Ah! it is well that "little ones" should have us.
It lights our faith when dim.
To know that once our blessed Saviour bade them
Bring "little ones" to Him.
And said He not "et such is heaven" and blessed them?
And held them to His breast?
Is it not sweet to know when they leave us,
Thence where they go to rest?

Post-office Found in a Hollow Log in Lake County—Discovery of illicit intercourse between a Union School Superintendent and a Pupil of Sweet Serenade—A Decided Sensation.

Col. Barret, Superintendent of the Union School at Madison, Lake County, Ohio, has laid the foundation for a newspaper sensation of the first water. That the public may know something of his antecedents, it will be proper to preface the story with some points connected with his history. He came to Madison about one year ago, from Newton Falls, Trumbull County, Ohio, with his wife and three children, to take charge of the Union School. Prior to that he had been a successful teacher in different localities, and served with some distinction in the army. His proclivities in the political arena were intensely Radical, and in the religious world, he was a member of the Baptist church, in good standing.

Possessing a fine education and rather commanding presence, the Colonel invariably made himself useful, whenever opportunity offered, in doing what he could toward advancing the interests of his party and church. During the late Presidential campaign he was President of the Grant Club. This position, with his situation at the head of the Union School, and at the helm of a Bible class, in the church, placed him in the front ranks of the prominent citizens of the place, where he managed to eclipse the brighter worth of better citizens by adroitly manipulating every thing to his own advantage. He was welcomed and feasted on every hand. Following the example of his Grant Club enterprise leader, the Colonel accepted numerous presents from his admirers, the articles including a handsome rifle, a complete fishing tackle, and an elegant gold watch. Committees were appointed to visit Cleveland, when presents were to be obtained, that the best articles might be culled from the most choice selections of goods. One of the presents, the gun, played a prominent part in the history of the case, as the sequel will show.

South of Madison, six miles, there lives a quiet German farmer, who, for seventeen years, has taken commendable pride in giving a lovely daughter all the educational advantages that his limited means would afford. When Colonel Barret came to Madison, the farmer sent his daughter to board with the new Superintendent, last autumn, that she might attend the Union School. She remained in Madison until the following spring. Meanwhile the quiet, unassuming preceptor had won her confidence, and the two started on a career of intimacy not sanctioned by the conventional rules of society. Though thirty-five years of age, his tall, commanding figure, black eyes and engaging manners had perfectly captivated his victim. When the springtime came, she went to teach school about two miles south of Madison. At convenient intervals, the Colonel was in the habit of going in the direction of her school, always taking his gun, ostensibly on a gunning expedition, in reality to see the handsome school "marm." Brooks and rivelets, babbling through shady nooks, were not sought out as trying places, but the deeper shades of dense forest concealed from human vision the object of their meeting. A hollow log lay near the retired spot. This log they improvised into a sort of post-office.

Letters were exchanged through this medium, to the certain knowledge of some parties in that neighborhood, for six weeks or more. Other people were in the habit of hunting in the same forest. One day a luckless hunter happened to rest for a few moments upon the hollow log. He discovered the post-office, and examined its contents. He found that an appointment had been made for that very day; yea that very hour. Concealing himself in a cluster of bushes, he awaited the issue. Both came according to appointment.

When they went away, he came forth, determined to keep track of their future movements. From time to time he visited the hollow log, examined the contents of the forest post-office, and observed the result of these secret meetings. The matter came to the ears of the school board, through captured letters from the hollow log. The Board and church charged the Colonel with the crime. He denied it. They produced the letters. He confessed!—Four or five days later he left the place, and has not been heard from since. His gun, fishing tackle, and other presents, with his household goods, have been seized to satisfy claims of creditors. The affair has created an immense amount of gossip, which is spiced by a few points that may be printed by stars; they can not be printed.—Cleveland Plain Dealer Aug 25.

Hoosier Drills!

Farmers now is the time to look after Drills for fall seeding. Don't buy till you have called on

CAMPBELL & HARTER

To see the great improvements made on these Machines by the Hoosier Drill Co.

These Drills will be found unsurpassed in all the following points, to-wit:

FIRST—It will sow regularly in any and all kinds of grain, sowing equally well in wheat, oats or barley.

SECOND—When set to sow any given quantity, it will sow that quantity, whether your grain be large or small, or your team walks fast or slow.

THIRD—It is so arranged that the driver can see the Drill feeding from all the openings when riding on the Drill as well as when walking. In no other Drill can the driver see it feeding when riding on it.

FOURTH—It never chokes or clogs. It is a forced feed, distributing the grain surely and evenly, as well when the last grain is going out as when the hopper is full.

FIFTH—It measures the ground over which it passes.

SIXTH—It sows grass seed broadcast, either before or behind the hoes, at the pleasure of the operator, and can be changed from one to the other in an instant.

SEVENTH—By a very simple arrangement the operator can effect fifty-four changes of feed from the smallest to the largest quantity of any kind of grain or seed. There is no Drill made except the "HOOSIER" that has this advantage.

We are also agents for the various kinds of one-horse Drill, for seeding in corn; among others the celebrated LUTZ PATENT which gave such universal satisfaction heretofore.
