NOW AND THEN.

The refusal of Rev. G. P. Fuson to accept a month's vacation voted him by his congregation, in this city, has attracted some attention through the state, it being so unusual from the custom generally pursued by ministers. It is a fashionable humbug to vote ministers or any other class of professional men a vacation and permit them at the same time to draw their regular salary. It would look more like they were genuine workers in the Lord's vineyard if their vacation was employed in preaching somewhere else during their absence from their regular charge. The good old pioneer preachers of a half century ago, the Cartwrights, the Stranges, the Ashbys and others, knew no such things as a vacation. They toiled on and on, year in and out, on meager salaries, and worked as hard as anybody in their chosen calling. They earned and more than earned the salary paid them. They did not go off in warm weather to some mountain retreat or seaside resort, or take long rides in parlor cars. A wonderful difference between that time and to-day. If, however, a congregation chooses to throw away its money by such proceedings it is probably no body's business but its own.

An agent of the school book trust of VanAntwerp, Bragg &amp; Co., was present at the meeting of the township trustees at the court house last week. The gall of this house is remarkable. Notwithstanding the State by its legislature has indicated that it will no longer have the books of that firm, will not pay its prices but expects to buy those published by the Indiana company, they persist in sending their paid tools into every county in the State, to aim to create dissension, doubt and dissatisfaction among the trustees toward the new publications adopted. These agents should receive some moral satisfaction hereafter with the sharp end of a No. 8 boot, if they continue to force themselves into places where they are not wanted. The people understand the aims and objects of this Cincinnati firm as well as they do themselves. Their manner and mode of business, their system of working, their profits, etc., have been exposed time and again. It is enough to know that the people want none of their publications hereafter, and their attempts to force, bribe or cajole trustees into receiving them should be promptly rebuffed and with boot persuasion if nothing else will do.

If Jeff Davis, Beauregard and others of the late Confederacy want offices they should hurry up and join the republican party ere it be too late. The Harrison administration is not forgetting the fellows who sought to "bust our glorious Union," in the way of offices. The latest appointment from Virginia is that of W. C. Elam to the chief of the railway division of the land office. Elam was a rebel private. Other important places have been lately filled by ex-Confederates as follows:

Lewis E. Parsons, U. S. attorney for the middle district of Alabama.

Beverly Tucker, U. S. commissioner to Hayti.

Charles Headley, receiver of public moneys at Huntsville, Ala.

Marsh M. Mott, U. S. attorney of West Virginia.

William C. Wells, register of land office, at Huntsville, Ala.

A. T. Wimberly, collector at New Orleans.

The Confederacy seems to be still in the saddle.

DR. CROBIN'S MURDERERS.

The last person of the entire murderous gang suspected of murdering Dr. Cronin, at Chicago, was brought from Manitoba last week. His name is Burke, and everything strongly implicated him upon investigation, as one of the murderous crowd. Six persons have been arrested and are imprisoned awaiting for a trial of their cause. The attorneys of these men will, of course, make a very stubborn resistance for their clients, and months, probably years will pass before the cases against them are closed. The investigations heretofore made point very strongly to these men as the ones guilty of the cowardly assassination of Dr. Cronin, and justice should be meted out promptly toward them for the dastardly deed. For the welfare of mankind, for the benefit of the cause, the freedom of Ireland, of which Cronin was an earnest, honest and bold advocate, this should be done.

The fact that agents for two book publishing houses, both belonging to the ring, have offered to furnish school books at the same rates as the Indiana company is doing, is the best evidence of the heretofore going nature of the school book combination, of which the VanAntwerp crowd is best known. Why did they not do this five or ten years ago? It indicates the great benefit of competition in now having the present school law. The hogish nature of the ring would not allow it to furnish school books at reasonable prices, but competition has now forced them to. The Indiana school book publishing company should have preference always so long as it remains outside of any combination to force the parents of school children to pay such extortionate prices for books as the VanAntwerp ring did.

They are having the same difficulties in Illinois between coal operators and miners as elsewhere. Attempts to settle the differences between the two sides by arbitration have failed heretofore and there is a vast amount of misery and suffering this winter is prophesied. The constant difficulties arising in the coal business in this country more than ever evince the necessity of an invention which will do away with the use of coal to a great extent and the manufacture of heat by some new process. The sooner the invention is brought out the better for everybody.

A BANK at Williamsport, in Warren county, "busted" the other day after running about a year. Its show, age was $2,700 and it must have been a very heavy financial institution to go under with no greater deficit than that. It is probable that the great Harrison boom which is now prevailing all over the country had something to do with the collapse of this mammoth Williamsport concern.

RELATIVE to the new school books, the attorney general has decided: 1st that the law is imperative; 2nd, that the trustees must make requisitions for new books; 3rd, old books must be supplemented by the new ones; 4th, school officials may suspend, expel or otherwise punish pupils who refuse to purchase new books; 5th, no contract now existing will stand against the law; 6th, a writ of mandate will prevent trustees from persisting in using the present books; 7th, only such books as are not contracted for under the new law may be purchased without reference to its provisions; 8th, trustees must order a sufficient number of books to supply the whole township. These questions were answered in the order they were asked, and are of interest to every parent or teacher in the state.

THERE are four churches in this city with bells, and people in the neighborhood are much annoyed by so much changing.—Lebanon Patriot.

The same thing might well be said in this city, and the further use of bells should be dispensed with. It is a nuisance and first-class at that. The Christian church people in the erection of their new building have sensibly determined to have no bells. They don't need one, and neither do the others. They don't have to have bells to call them in this country and let them know what hour to attend the theater, circus or party of any kind, and neither should they for church services.

A REDUCTION in the tariff (on coal) would double the importation, and its removal wholly would mean nearly, if not quite, all our coal would be mined by pauper labor in the old world—or by paupers here.—Brazil Register.

It would seem that you have the "paupers here" at this time in your own county, judging from the appeals made for two months past for aid for coal miners in your county, and these "paupers" are created through the present republican system of protection for the benefit of those who contributed to the republican campaign corruption fund last year.

SAID an old settler the other day "if men 40 years ago had bartered their votes at elections as they have in this country within a few years they would have been shot down." We don't know but what a few rounds fired that way would have a salutary effect nowadays. The shooting should begin with members of congress guilty of selling their votes to corporations or trusts of any kind and continue down to the fellow disposing of his suffrage at the county and corporation elections. A few shots fired here and there would make the business distasteful and unpopular.

It has for years been supposed that the old law in Indiana which a man owing a debt and not paying it could be thrown into jail was obsolete and inoperative, but such is not the case. A man named Purley in Indianapolis against whom a judgment for money owed had been obtained and who refused to pay it, is now boarding at the jail, the man to whom the debt is coming paying twenty cents per day for his keeping. The knowledge that this law is yet in force may induce many people to get after those owing them through the State.

WHEN John L. Sullivan, the bruiser, made his tour through Tennessee and Mississippi last week in charge of the sheriff, he was received at almost all the stations along the railroad with almost as much ovation as some great General returning from a national battle. About the only person raising to the occasion and appreciating the man and his deeds in a proper light was Gov. Lowry, of Mississippi, who had Sullivan placed in jail. There seems little sentimentality in Lowry's composition. He is practical.

THE future biographer of Ben Harrison, who may write in order to perpetuate the name of his subject for the admiration of future generations, will leave out the most important matter if he fails to state that his election was won by the purchase of votes, and that the prices ranged from $10 to $20, and were purchased "in blocks of five."

Impartial history alone contains truth, and an honest statement of this portion of Ben's life and times will make the book that much more entertaining.

WHENEVER one of VanAntwerp, Bragg &amp; Co.'s circulars, containing a letter from some principal of a school or official of some kind, is received, filled with finely drawn sentences and well rounded periods, condemning the new school book law of this State and laudatory of the former plan, then to one he is in the employ of that firm—is a paid tool. It is a neat piece of strategy, but for two reasons is useless, viz: the public understand the motive, and the good "advice" of the school official is too late in its arrival.

"We are trying to find a laborer," says the New York Herald, "who has had his wages raised in consequence of the republican protection policy. When the campaign orators were on the stump they poured whole volleys of promises into the expectant multitude, and predicted that every workman would have something better than 'five acres and a mule' if their candidate was elected. Our office telescope is at the service of anyone who thinks he sees that mule anywhere on the horizon line."

MEDICAL circles throughout the country are discussing a new preparation or medicine, the invention of a Washington City physician, by which wonderful cures of persons afflicted with some diseases are cured. It is termed the Elixer of Life. It is taken and prepared from the glands of young sheep, and is used by injection into the skin of the patient. Those afflicted with rheumatism and diseases somewhat akin to it speak in wonderful terms of the benefits they have derived from it.

PRESIDENT HARRISON contributed $50 last week in aid of the Clay county miners' fund. The $50 he donated is for the fellows who at University square, Indianapolis, last fall, cheered him so loudly while he addressed them on the benefits of Protection, and the terrible results to follow should they vote for the democrats. This sum is equal to one mill of every dollar of his salary per year, and is real generous for a man with so small an income.

PRESIDENT HARRISON has lately been making a tour of New England and at every point crowds rushed to the train in seeking to shake hands with him. It seems they have just as big fools in the east as in the west in the habit of worshipping our "great" men. The trip of Cleveland two years ago indicated what great numbers of abominable cranks in this regard there were in the west, and now we have its counterpart in the east.

It would indicate from the continued differences and disputes between coal mine operators and their employees that the price of coal the coming winter would attain a high altitude. The mines are generally owned and operated by trusts or syndicates and any excuse to raise the price to the consumer will quickly be adopted. This fall their pretence for raising will probably be the scarcity of hands to work in the mines.

OVER 11,000,000 acres of fine lands, lying west of the Missouri river, in Dakota Territory, have been sold by the Sioux to the government. One good feature about these lands is that speculators can't buy them. They must be owned and occupied by actual settlers only. This is certainly a valuable consideration, being so different from lands opened in most of the western territories.

The largest sugar plant in the west, located at Topeka, Kansas, burned the other day resulting in the loss of $250,000. This may give the sugar trust an excuse for continuing the high price of that commodity which consumers have for months realized. At any rate the public will be eventually compelled to pay for this destructive fire, as the trust will protect those who belong to it.

A colored woman died at Lafayette on Friday last who weighed 901 pounds and was without any doubt the largest person in the world. A correspondent of the Equifer from Lafayette concerning her and her funeral, says: "All day crowds of people pressed into the sisters' hospital to obtain a glimpse of big Laura Wolford, the fat Negress who died here Friday evening. There was a hitch about the funeral. The manager of the museum in which she was exhibited was willing to bury her. The township trustees declined to bury her, as he understood she had money. The woman was a devout Catholic and prior to her death it is said she wished her wardrobe to the sisters, and the latter preferred to be 'the burial expenses and keep the garments to turning them over to the manager. No coffin could be procured large enough for the dead woman, and a plain box was made especially for her. It was made of poplar and was six feet three inches long, inside measurements 'three feet wide and two feet two inches high. It looked more like a double box to a farm wagon than anything else. It required a long time to place the body in the box, the interior of which had been very nicely finished up. So the service was held in the morning by the German priest' and about 5 o'clock the body was removed from the hospital."

Ten men were required to carry the massive box. It was placed in a large spring wagon, no horse being large enough. The interment was made in the German catholic cemetery, short services being held at the grave. Hundreds of persons, mostly women, were present. Big Hattie Bowen, the white 'eak, who is said to weigh 700 pounds, and Mackelfie, the human os, who were among the mourners. The cemetery was thronged with an eager crowd of curiosity seekers to witness the last rites to departed Laura S.

Indian Articles.

Dr. Morgan, of the Smith &amp; Morgan drug store, has a fine display of Indian articles in the way of buckskin leggings, baskets, blankets, war-clubs and other goods, in a show case in the store. The doctor was physician to a branch or portion of the tribe of Apache Indians in New Mexico, and secured these articles while residing among them.

The Light of Home.

A chee, al, healthy woman is the light of home, but through over-exertion in her effort to minister to the happiness of the household her health is often impaired, or weakness, or displacement brought on, making life miserable, and clouding an otherwise happy home with gloom. The thoughtful and tender husband, in such cases, should be intelligent enough to perceive the cause of such gloom and suffering, relieve the faithful wife from drudgery, and furnish her with that best of friends to women, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, now recognized and used in thousands of homes as a certain cure for all those delicate afflictions peculiar to the female sex. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

There are about 29,000 locomotives in the United States.

Your House On Fire.

Not the house of wood, of brick, or stone, in which you live, but your bodily tenement may be in terrible dangers from smouldering fires which you make no effort to quench. The great danger from impure blood is that it debilitates the system, and the digestive organs grow weak and inactive. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the best kidney and liver invigorators with the best alteratives and tonics, all from the vegetable kingdom, carefully and understandingly prepared in a concentrated form. It purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, and effectually guarding it against the attacks of disease.

The most exciting art topic in New York at present is whether kettles and big onions are art subjects.
