THE REVIEW.

—BY—
LUSE & BERRY.

WAYNETOWN.

John Fouts was in New Richmond Wednesday.

George Utterback is going to be a candidate for Trustee.

Will Black intends to build a portable photograph gallery.

An Epworth league has been organized by the young people of the M. E. church.

The public school literary society meet every Monday night and has quite interesting sessions.

Willie York has purchased a hand organ to amuse his friends with, but it only plays one tune.

Editor Brant of the Hornet now has two newspapers and is getting them both out quite creditably.

The minister who made Rome howl in giving the famous W. P. C. a roasting is being made the subject of much comment, evidently the gentleman has been there in the past and knows how things are done but with all that we cannot see why he should be so personal in his attacks.

G. E. Radley and Miss Effie Bailey were married last Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock, Rev. Weston performing the ceremony in a pleasant manner. Among the guests present were H. P. Radley, of Bedford, Rev. Weston and wife, Miss Nora Harris, Muncie, Miss Maude Baker, Miss Minnie Landman, G. H. Trenary and wife and Miss Rosa Zerface. The attendants were Miss Stella Hill and Jas. Bunnell. An affair dinner was given them Thursday at the residence of the grooms mother. The contracting parties are among our best young people and have a host of friends to bid them God speed and a happy and successful journey through life.

SOAP FACTORY.

G. W. Paul is at home.

Luther Long's family are sick.

A. J. McClelland is down with the la grippe.

Misses Vance are sick at the Hill-side farm.

Charles Walters and wife Sundayed at H. Long's.

Lant Long's neighbors butchered for him Monday.

Miss Myrtle Long is still visiting her uncle, Hannibal Trout.

J. Lee Long sold his driving mare to Walter Brothers Monday.

Jesse M. Galloway, from Wingate, visited in our vicinity Sunday.

J. M. Lofland's family are all down with la grippe except himself.

Charles Smith and Jake Angle have finished cutting wood for A. J. McClelland.

Dave Warren, the dairyman south of town, bought two cows in the vicinity Tuesday.

S. W. Oliver moved to the city this week to drive the delivery wagon for Ed. Reynolds.

Jake Angle is looking after the place of Theo. Ristine, now occupied by Ike George.

About ten couples anticipate attending the Linden ball from Mt. Olivet and Campbell chapel.

J. Lee Long, Charles Walter and Geo. Rogers butchered for H. Long Tuesday while the latter was on the jury.

Our school closed Monday for one week on account of sickness, 10 scholars being present and 20 being absent.

J. Lee Long's sisters attended the party given at the home of Miss Minnie Myers Friday night. Dancing was the principle entertainment.

Mary, 21-year old daughter of H. Long, is recovering from inflammation of the bowels, while Florence, the youngest, has the la grippe.

Samuel Henry, the school teacher at the Willis school house, closed his school on account of sickness. We miss him very much as he passed through here twice a day going to and from his school.

YOUNTSVILLE.

La grippe is here.

J. S. Galloway and E. H. O'Neal are in Utah Territory.

Ed. Hirst has been quite sick with la grippe, since last Saturday.

There will be seven months school in this township this year.

John Switzer has cut a fine lot of wood on the farm of J. B. Taylor.

Dr. Davidson is kept quite busy attending to the needs of his many patients.

The saw mill started up on Tuesday after being shut down for some time.

A. J. Snyder & Son received a car load of white corn from Illinois this week.

Will Hirst and Clarence Fink are cutting out a fine lot of wood on the farm of T. J. Fink.

Miss Nettie Yount is visiting her uncle, Peter Walter, at Fairmont, Ill., at this time.

Dr. J. N. Tolbert, of Alamo, attended the quarterly meetings here Saturday and Sunday.

It is said that A. J. Snyder & Sons are anticipating remodeling their mills to the roller system.

A series of protracted meetings are being conducted here by Rev. J. W. Loder, at No. 6 school house.

J. M. Work, Jr., has the contract of patching up, the three-fourths of a mile gravel road recently purchased by the county.

A. S. Hornbaker, of Greencastle, was here Monday night. It is said that he contemplates removing to this place in the fall.

The second quarterly meeting of the M. E. church for this conference year, was held at this place Saturday and Sunday last.

The attendance at the literary society on Friday night was good, and the door receipts larger than at any meeting since its organization. Regular meetings will be on Saturday nights.

The spring election is near at hand. We see in last week's Journal, the correspondent from here is trying to get up a bad feeling between this place and Alamo by dabbling in politics. We should advise him to attend to his own business.

LINDEN.

Who said we would have a cold winter? Mrs. Harvey Howard and her mother are both sick yet.

Nearly half of the town is having the la grippe or getting over it.

The late cold snap was very hard on the wheat in some places as it is very tender.

It is thought that the present township trustee will be a candidate for re-election, but who will get there is not known.

Everybody is complaining of hard times in these parts. One reason is that Grover Cleveland is not President now, but Ben Harrison is at the head.

Wanted.—A woman to do general housework, one that wants a home is preferred, at the Junction house. Address box 240, Linden, Ind., for particulars.

A preacher wearing petticoats was in our place this week. She is not a bad talker but her congregations were not very large. She went by the name of J. A. Smith.

On last Sunday morning some young men living in your city, having been to New Richmond got a free ride to their homes by jumping on the front of the baggage car.

Our town was a lively place on Saturday night. Some of the young folks got on a bender, but there was no blood shed. Where did they get the stuff they drank is the question?

The hog cholera is still among the hogs and some farmers are losing most of their pork. When they expected to get some money by the sale of them they lay down and die and they have that much to lose.

THE REVIEW has a good list of names at this office at present which was enlarged through the efforts of the agent for the paper here. Every democrat should subscribe and every republican should read it for it is a news paper under its present managers.

J. S. Bennett is still in the insurance business and has as good companies as those agents living in your city and writes as cheap as any good company can take it. So we see no need of people going away to get their insurance. Patronize home agents and save expenses going to the city.

Call for Convention.

HEADQUARTERS
INDIAN TARIFF REFORM LEAGUE,
INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

JAN. 28, 1890.

To the Tariff Reform Clubs of Indiana:

The annual convention of the Indiana Tariff Reform League will be held in this city, beginning at 7:30 p. m., March 4, 1890. Every Club in the State should be represented by delegates at that convention. You are requested to select delegates at once, in accordance with Art. IV of the Constitution of the State League, and forward their names to the Corresponding Secretary. The headquarters of the league will be at the Grand Hotel, where delegates will report upon their arrival in the city. Arrangements have been made with the railroads to carry all persons desiring to attend the convention, for one and one-third fare for the round trip. In purchasing tickets be sure and get the certificate of your local agent which entitles you to the reduced fare. All tariff reformers in Indiana are invited to be present whether delegates or not. The work of organization is now about completed, and the work of agitation and education will soon begin. The masses are beginning to have serious doubts as to whether protection is really a good thing or not, and it is our duty to show them the truth. Relying upon the honesty and good judgment of the American people, when they learn the truth, to correct the injustice and inequalities in our system of taxation, we call upon all who are interested in this work to give us their aid and encouragement. For further information, address the Corresponding Secretary, Thos. J. Hudson, 36½ E. Washington St., Indianapolis, Ind. By order of the Executive Committee,

EDGAR A. BROWN, Pres.

Dalgarn Recognized as a Swindler.

The suit in attachment brought by the First National bank of Brazil against Dalgarn the forger was tried Tuesday. The bank officers all recognized him as the man of whom they purchased and discounted a six-hundred dollar note in 1887, and three experts testified that the signatures to be his writing, though he persists in denying any knowledge of the transaction. No decision has been given. The court will most likely hold the deed to the farm made by Dalgarn to the Worthington bank good and the bill of sale on chattels executed by his attorneys good to the extent of a reasonable fee, the attachment to hold as a reminder of the personal property.

Gone to Kansas.

Marsh Doherty, worn out with fighting and trying to compromise with his creditors, has finally determined to emigrate to field more green and pastures new, and a few days since removed to Southern Kansas, where he will engage in farming. He failed to effect any compromise with his creditors. Fisher Doherty will probably remove to that State within the next three months.

THE GYPSIES.

Further Revelations About Them by the "Gypsy King," the Archduke Joseph.

The Archduke Joseph, commander of the Hungarian Honved army, has made the language, traditions and habits of the gypsies his special study. Extensive as the literature about this strange and interesting people already is, the researches of the archduke have brought several unknown features to light. His opportunities for entering into their mysteries have been exceptional.

There are in Hungary no fewer than 80,000 gypsies, and some 200,000 in the neighboring Roumania. The archduke is visiting their settlements one after another, and to his thorough knowledge of their language, as well as his exalted rank, it may be attributed that the gypsies who wantonly deceive other savants reveal their secrets without hesitation to the "royal gypsy," as the archduke allows himself jokingly to be called. He published some time ago, as the first result of his studies, a grammar and dictionary of the gypsy language, the most complete book on the subject in existence, and he read a paper recently before the Ethnographical society of Budapest, on the origin and habits of his proteges, which will shortly appear in print.

The Archduke Joseph supports Grellman's theory of the Hindostani origin of all gypsies by comparing the two languages. He says, for instance, that the word for snow, which in Hindostani is "hima," is in the gypsy language "him," and the word for carrier, in the one language "laya," is in the other "lei" and "leva," so that in both languages, Himalaya means the bearer of snow.

Many other instances of the same sort are given, which it is unnecessary to quote, as it is no longer doubted that the slopes of the Himalaya mountains were the homes of all the gypsies at present in Europe, where their first appearance is traced to the year 1417. It is of far greater interest to learn something of their views and habits.

The earth (pinho) has existed, in their opinion, from eternity, and is the origin of everything that is good. God they call "devel," and the devil they call "beag." They fear both, and curse both when they are bad, but, in case of the death of one of their number, or they believe also in evil spirits, which can be chased away by throwing brandy, or, in default of that liquor, water, upon the body or upon the grave whenever they pass it. They swear by their dead, and that is their most solemn oath, which is rigorously kept in honor; they do not, however, believe in a life after death. Their language has no word for paradise, and none for heaven, but the home of the devil (beag-pel) they know.

The religion they profess, either for convenience sake, or under compulsion, has no real hold upon them. They embrace the religion of the people who allow them to settle in their midst, and call themselves "Christians," but remain in reality heathens, cherishing the traditions of the fire worshipers, which they seem once to have been. The baptism of a child, for instance, as performed by the priest, has no real value for them till the eldest of the clan has held the babe over a large open fire. This is the real reception into the community, whatever outward religion they may profess.

Of the gypsies in Hungary there are 34,000 orthodox, 23,000 Greek Catholics, 20,000 Roman Catholics and 9,000 Protestants of the Helvetic confession, which answers pretty well the proportion of creeds in the districts which tolerate them, the Protestants being least inclined to permit them to remain in their vicinity. The gypsies are generally held up as bad examples of superstition, witchcraft and similar failings. In this respect, the archduke says, they are wronged, and what is worse, their accusations against themselves are the superstitious ones, and the gypsies laugh at them, after having fled from them. The archduke asked, for instance, several gypsy women to tell him their fortune, which they readily did. As soon, however, as he addressed them in their own language, they declared they would not cheat "one of their own," and being explicitly asked whether they believed in cards as a means of telling fortunes, they said laughingly, "No, that is good enough for the poor gypsies."

Each of their colonies is ruled by an elder, who in Hungary, Roumania and Bohemia is called vejvada. The elder has the power of punishing, and he usually uses the stick for more serious crimes; resorting for lesser ones, to boxing the ears of the culprit. His authority is supreme, and it need not be the eldest man who is raised to the dignity of a vejvada, but, in Hungary, at least, it must be one who can read and write, in order to have his people before the authorities. The vejvada baptizes after the gypsy fashion, as already mentioned, and, of course, he performs the marriage ceremony and the burial rites.

The bridal pair are married in church, but what we should call civil marriage, namely, the ceremony before the vejvada, must precede it for the marriage to have validity in the eyes of the community. The parents of both the bride and the bridegroom bring the young people before the chief, who addresses them in bombastic phrases of traditional wording, reminding them of the duties of married life; whereupon an earthen vessel is smashed to pieces, and a great libation, in which brandy is the principal beverage, follows the festival. After this ceremony, the young people, of whom the bridegroom is seldom older than 15 and the bride 12, are considered duly married. As a rule, the religious ceremony follows only years after, not as a necessity for themselves, but chiefly to indicate the severest punishment, namely, the greatest number of strokes with a heavy stick, upon adulterers, and he arrogates also the right of dissolving marriages, whatever the civil or church authorities may have against it.

Family life is very simple, and, as a rule, very happy. The father is the absolute master of his house, and where several families live together, the patriarchate they elect has the same absolute authority over the members of the community. He is called the "vejvada" sometimes, also the "uncle," or the "first friend," and his insignia are a dolman with big silver buttons and a staff with a silver knob. He, too, must be able to read and to write, and he must strictly keep to the traditions and ceremonies of old—Vienna Cor. London Standard.

Indians Who Buy Costly Coffins.

C. W. Young, one of the principal merchants in Juneau, Alaska, is in the city. Among other goods, he has ordered a score or so of coffins, assorted sizes and of the most expensive description. He says the Indians that section can have nothing too rich and elegant in the coffin line. The finest plush for covering and silver handles and studs thick bespangled over the coffin is what they want, and will have, if they put up their last dollar. Mr. Findley of the casket company says the Oregon Indians have the same ideas in regard to coffins and some of the most costly he has to Klamath and up to the Umatilla reservation.—Portland Oregonian.

A Salem (Ore.) man sold a three-quarter shorthorn cow to a Portland butcher last Wednesday. It weighed 1,630 pounds. The same farm owns a sheep that weighs 263 pounds.

A movement is on foot in Cass county to establish a county fair.

Does Experience Count.

It does, in every line of business, and especially in compounding and preparing medicines. This is illustrated in the great superiority of Hood's Sarsaparilla over other preparations, as shown by the remarkable cures it has accomplished.

The head of the firm C. I. Hood & Co., is a thoroughly competent and experienced pharmacist, having devoted his whole life to the study and actual preparation of medicines. He is also a member of the Massachusetts and American Pharmaceutical Associations, and continues actively devoted to supervising the preparation of and managing the business connected with Hood's sarsaparilla.

Hence the superiority and peculiar merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is built upon the most substantial foundation. In its preparation all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has developed, combined with long experience, combined, brainwork, and experiment. It is only necessary to give this medicine a fair trial to realize its great curative value.

A new steam fire engine has been ordered for the city of Marshall.
