

Scrofula

Is the most ancient and most general of all diseases. Scrofula is a family is entirely free from it, while thousands everywhere are its suffering slaves. Hood's Sarsaparilla has had remarkable success in curing every form of scrofula. The most severe and painful running sores, swellings in the neck or groin, humors in the eyes, causing partial or total blindness, yield to the powerful effects of this medicine. It thoroughly removes every impurity from the blood.

Scrofula

"My little daughter's life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she was six months old she had 7 running scrofula sores. One physician advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. When we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, a marked improvement was noticed and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy." B. C. JONES, Alna, Lincoln County, Me.

But One Sure Aid.

Clogged livers, sluggish liver and inactive bowels speedily manifested in the vitiated and inordinately blood show how far impaired are the vital organs, each of which, while seriously affecting the others, is in itself reacting upon disastrously, either directly or through the blood, by all the rest. Medical science is infinitely richer in the nomenclature of the diseases thus induced than in medicines for their cure. There is indeed but one preparation that can be relied upon to act certainly and speedily for the restoration to health, and that is Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. In a vast number of cases it has effected cures of the most obstinate and dangerous diseases—particularly those of the kidneys and liver—where all other treatment has proved valueless.

An Engineer's Coolness.

Monday afternoon Engineer Ben Ramsey left Crawfordsville on the Monon with switch engine No. 49, running light, for this city. As the engine ran through South Raub both side rods snapped and in a moment were tearing the cab into kindling wood. The engineer shut down the throttle and leaped from the crashing cab. Fireman Paddy Eawright and Flagman James Howerton leaped also. Without waiting and supposing that his two companions were killed Ramsey started on a run around the bend to flag the passenger train that leaves Lafayette at 1 o'clock, and which could be heard coming but a short distance away. His side was bruised, his arms hurt, but the nervous engineer kept on, and as the passenger drew near the scene, his flagging was observed and the train stopped. But for his coolness and nerve the train full of passengers would have rushed into the demolished engine, almost certainly. The fireman and flagman were found to have received but slight bruises and were taken aboard with Ramsey and carried to Crawfordsville, leaving "49" on the switch at Raub. It was a very narrow escape all around and a miraculous thing that the mighty rods did not kill the cab inmates, as they generally do under such circumstances.—Lafayette Journal.

A Lively Scrap.

The New Ross correspondent to the Journal of Monday says: "Ambrose Evans was knocked out by Wade Hedge Thursday evening. Mr. Hedge lives on the farm of Mr. Evans, 2 1/2 miles east of this place. It seems as though Mr. Evans wanted to pasture a stock field. The reenter had not all of his corn out yet. Anyhow Mr. Evans turned in and Mr. Hedge turned out. It was repeated once or twice and Mr. Evans comes over loaded for Mr. Hedge. A few words passed and it came to blows. Hedge struck Evans a hard blow over the head with a club which fractured it. He also struck or otherwise injured him with a club or his fist. Mr. Evans is very low and his recovery is doubtful. Hedge went to Jamestown and pleaded guilty of assault and battery and was fined $1. There is great excitement in the neighborhood over the affair."

Faced the Music.

Ethel Towne, who passed the forged check for $400 on the hotel at Terre Haute, representing herself to be the niece of James H. Walker of Chicago, whose name she forged, was indicted by the grand jury Monday and brought from the jail to the court to plead, but when she saw the crowd in the court room she begged not to be made an exhibition of and was led to a consultation room, where she remained while her attorneys announced that she would enter plea Tuesday. Her bond was fixed at $300, which she failed to give. This Tuesday morning she faced the crowd in the court room and pleaded not guilty. No date was fixed for her trial and she was remanded to jail to await it.

Effects of the Coal Strike.

The strike of the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen on the C. & L. C. has suspended all traffic on the road from Brazil north, not a pound of coal or other freight being moved. An order has been issued from the headquarters of the strikers to suffer nothing to go out of Brazil north but the United States mail matter later than this morning. It is understood that the coach at 9 o'clock Monday morning will be the last between Brazil and Muncie until the strike is settled.

Pierce's Lafayette Warehouse Burned. The Pierce warehouse, used by O. W. Pierce & Co., wholesale grocers and the Durham spice company at Lafayette as a storage room, burned Tuesday night. A stiff wind from the north made it difficult to save the adjoining buildings. The loss is estimated at $9,000; contents were insured for $3,000 with the C. B. Underwood agency, and the building for $5,500 with J. C. Brockebrough's agency, several companies holding risks in each agency.

THE BROKEN TUMBLER.

Jim Jones was "proper shiftless," so all the village folks said. Everything about the farm seemed going to rack and ruin, and despite the fact that his poor wife and Polly, the eldest daughter, worked all the harder, they grew poorer every year.

One afternoon in early fall, Mrs. Jones was busy making some jelly of wild grapes that Jim had condescended to pick. Coming winter and the state of their finances clouded her brow as she worked.

She was feeling decidedly blue, when, answering a knock, she found at the door Mrs. Snow, the rich mill owner's wife, and the one aristocrat of the village.

"The carriage has broken down," she said, "and Mr. Jones is kindly helping the coachman repair it. May I step in and wait here?"

Unaccustomed to such visitors, the hostess confusedly placed a chair. At first Mrs. Jones and Polly felt ill at ease; but Mrs. Snow had rare tact and soon drew them into conversation. In the course of the talk, Mrs. Snow tasted of the jelly, and was very enthusiastic over it.

"If you would only make me some I will pay you well," she said. "My servants never make good jelly, and I am afraid of the 'boughten' adulterated stuff."

Mrs. Jones' tired face flushed, but pretty Polly came to the rescue saying, "Yes, indeed we will, I can do all the hardest part of the work, and we have quantities of fruit going to waste."

So it was settled. Mrs. Snow thought to herself as she rode away: "Would not that farmer's daughter be a beauty, could she but have the proper setting of clothes and jewels; for 'tis the real article when a girl is lovely in an old faded gingham dress."

For days the old kitchen was filled with delicious odors from the great preserving kettle. The peaches, plums, pears, quinces, grapes and crabapples were changed under Mrs. Jones' skillful hands into tumbler of crystal jelly, or put up in glass jars in most tempting array.

Shiftless Jim had watched the proceedings with great interest, often saying, "What prime good luck you're having" to the two weary women.

At last the contract was all filled. It was dusk of a raw afternoon. Jim had harnessed the ancient white nag into the old rickety farm wagon, and had helped put in the load of precious sweets.

Mrs. Jones and Polly valiantly mounted the seat and tucked the shabby old buffalo skin about them, for they were far too shrewd to allow Jim to handle so much money. Although Mrs. Snow's offer was very generous, the frugal mother and daughter had twenty ways for every dollar.

They drove up to the side door of the mansion, and Harry Snow the mill owner's only son, for reasons best known to himself, sent back his servant and assisted Polly in removing the load, meanwhile dispatching Mrs. Jones into the house to warm herself.

Polly was a deft-handed maiden, but her hands were chilled with driving in her worn, thin gloves, and as she handed Harry one tumbler of jelly, her fingers being numb, it slipped from her grasp. Each one vainly strove to secure it, but it fell to the ground, breaking into several pieces.

Polly stooped to see if it was past reclaim, and as she did so a tiny piece of glass worked into her hand.

I suppose there must be a time—that is, a starting point—when two young people first come to realize that they love each other, and the revelation came to this pair as their hands met when the tumbler slipped.

Harry made the shy girl go into the house and stand under the light of the great chandelier while he removed the offending glass with all the tenderness he would have shown his mother, while Polly felt greatly mortified to hold up a hand so hopelessly stained with fruit.

Before long the village gossips had a sweet morsel. Polly Jones was engaged to marry rich Harry Snow. Harry's mother, though rather taken back by Polly's family connections, was a wise woman and loved her son too well to raise many objections, as she saw the possibilities of such a girl, after a little society mounding.

Polly's mother could barely comprehend such great good fortune to her dear, good daughter.

But Jim smoked his clay pipe contentedly, and remarked to his wife—first discreetly waiting until Polly was out of ear-shot—"Well, wife, I've worked pretty hard all my life, and now I shan't probably have to lift my hand after that 'ere marriage. All owing to Polly's being proper handsome, and breaking that 'ere jolly tumbler jest right. That's brime good luck, I say."

Infection in a Coin.

Dr. Thompson, of St. Louis, says he traced a fatal case of small-pox to a silver dollar. The patient was in good health and died within a week, and the facts were so peculiar that the doctor set about to ascertain how the disease was contracted. He found that the patient had sold an article of merchandise to a friend who had paid him a silver dollar, which had been carried in the pocket of a brother who a day or two later was taken down with small-pox. Dr. Thompson believes a coin is as likely to carry infection as a bank-note.

EDUCATION FOR WOMEN.

The Ideal of Devotion Consistent With Conditions of Culture.

Said a brilliant woman of our day: "To be a wife and mother is not the end of my existence; the end is to be a woman. I am only wife and mother in passing." But even if wifehood and motherhood were the end and aim, the higher the development of the woman the better the wife and mother. Conjugal affection, maternal instinct, are none the less powerful when under the control of enlightened intelligence. Indeed, the highest ideal of devotion is consistent with the highest conditions of culture, and she who knows most of what man knows is certainly better fitted to be his companion than is she who meets his nature only on the side of his physical comfort.

For a woman to know how to look prettily, to dress tastefully, to preside gracefully, to make her house charming and her home delightful to all who feel its social atmosphere, for her to be interested in her church and her charities, to like good books, to appreciate good music—all this is involved in the highest, if not in the so-called "higher" education. We mean that all this keeps in exercise and consequent development the highest part of her nature. But to know how to look pretty does not demand that a woman should know nothing else, and many a woman graduate has discovered and is ready to testify that in all that enter into the glory of the true home life she is able to do better and to be more because of that widening of judgment and development of mental powers that came as the result of college work.

Excessively Quiet.

A young woman married and went to live at the country residence of her husband. Her health was not good, and it was decided that she should spend a year in strict retirement. At the end of six months, however, she returned to town, declaring that so quiet a life was more than she could endure.

It appeared that during that time she had had thirty-seven different servants, one of whom was discharged for an attempt to set the house on fire while intoxicated, and one for an attempt to rob the plate-closet, while half a dozen more were sent away for violent quarrels in their part of the establishment.

Her mother-in-law had been thrown from a carriage at the foot of the lawn and injured fatally; her sister-in-law had come to make a visit and had improved the opportunity to run away with a man whom she had been forbidden to marry.

The time had further been broken in upon by visits from the six bridesmaids of the hostess, who invited them in pairs for two weeks each, and then asked a few men to meet them, then asked a few men to meet them, then asked a few men to meet them.

"And such a quiet life," the young lady said, concluding her account, "was too much for me."

Two Doctors.

Almost every one has made his best about the proneness of doctors to disagree, the one prescribing exactly an opposite course from that ordered by another, but not every one has had an opportunity to conduct such an experiment as was made by the late Baron Lutz, formerly Prime Minister of Bavaria.

The baron was once severely wounded in battle in both legs. The wound in one leg was much like that in the other. It struck him that here was a chance to study the ways of the surgical profession and beguile the long hours of his convalescence. He accordingly called in one doctor, and gave him charge of his right leg, but told him nothing about the wound in the other, and then called in another surgeon for his left leg, keeping him similarly in ignorance about the wounded right leg.

The doctors adopted a very different method of treatment, but both wounds healed about the same time. When the baron's legs were quite well, he derived a great deal of amusement from getting the doctors together and mystifying them with questions about the way each had treated "his leg."

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS FOR 1891.

THE CRAWFORDSVILLE REVIEW soon rounds up the half century of its existence. From the beginning it has ever been a faithful ally of the democratic party in Montgomery county, and a champion of its principles, and now in the year of grace, 1890, rejoices with the democracy at the great victories they have lately won, far and near, from the Atlantic to the Pacific. THE REVIEW will continue in the well beaten path, as an exponent and advocate of sound democratic principles. It asks from the party a liberal patronage in subscriptions, and for the purpose of extending its list for 1891, offers the following premiums:

1st.--A Splendid Gold Watch

For the largest list of subscribers. This watch is a stem winder and set, full jeweled, a superb timepiece, and can be seen at Otto's jewelry store. The person securing this prize will also be entitled to a rebate of 10 cents on each yearly subscription.

2d.--A White Sewing Machine.

This machine is worth $40, and can be seen at Billy Nicholson's business room on west Main street. The person securing this will also be entitled to a rebate of 10 cents on each yearly subscription.

3rd.--A Suit of Clothes

Is given for the 3rd largest list of subscribers secured, but no rebate is given on this or any other premiums mentioned below.

4th.--A Fine Gold-Filled Case Watch.

Several watches just like this are now carried by agents who have secured them for three or four years past by getting subscribers for us, and they will tell you that they are first class timepieces.

5th.--A Fine Parlor Hanging Lamp.

This is a useful as well as ornamental premium. It is a first class lamp of 60 candle power, with beautiful ornamented shade, prisms, etc.

6th.--A Picture--"The Holidays."

This is a fine steel engraving, valued at twelve dollars, is finely framed ready to hang up in your parlor or sitting room, and in size is 20 by 30 inches.

7th.--Order on Carlson's Store.

This order embraces in it, bucket, broom, writing paper, jewelry, Pencils, Tin ware, mirror, glass ware and other articles of household use.

8th.--School Teacher's Premium.

To the person handing us the eighth largest list we will give twelve copies of Dickens' Works, The Mammoth Encyclopedia of 2,100 pages, and THE REVIEW for one year. Any school teacher of literary inclination can, by spending four or five days during the holiday season in soliciting subscriptions for us, easily secure this prize.

No name will be received not accompanied with the money, and no list of less than 10 subscribers will be awarded a premium.

Agents can canvass in any township or neighborhood they may wish.

The list of subscriptions must be handed in by Thursday, January 1st, at 2 o'clock p. m.
