FIFTY YEARS OLD!

The Crawfordsville Review Completes the 50th Year of Its Publication With This Issue.

In a small frame building on the south side of Main street on the ground now occupied by Tannenbaum's clothing store, Philip E. Engle, in August, 1841, began the publication of a five column folio democratic newspaper, termed The CRAWFORDSVILLE REVIEW, which has continued in weekly publication ever since, and with this issue is completed the 50th year of its existence. It is the oldest business institution of any kind in Montgomery county with the exception of Wabash College. Crawfordsville at that time was a small struggling village of from 800 to 1000 inhabitants, while the entire population of the county was not much more than 7,000. Mr. Engle was connected at that time with the government service for a number of years in the land department. After a few years he disposed of it to George Snyder, a veteran editor yet living and at this time publishing a paper at Jamestown, Boone county. For the next few years it was owned, it would appear, alternately by either Snyder or Engle. Finally, about the year 1850, it was purchased by one J. D. Masterson. He was a fiery untamed democrat, it seems, who was ready at any time to defend his belief with his pen or his fist, or any weapon that occasion required. On one occasion he and Dr. Fry, then editor of the "Montgomery Journal," engaged in personal journalism to such an extent that they became involved in a bloody contest in which Masterson cut Fry a dangerous gash in the breast with a dirk, and from which wound Fry nearly bled to death. Both have long since joined the silent majority on the other shore. There have been none just such editors since in Crawfordsville. They prefer milder means in fighting their antagonists. In 1854 Charles H. Bowen purchased The Review and ran it successfully for eighteen years. The familiar figure of "Count" Bowen can be seen every day on our streets. In his time the printing business in Crawfordsville was in the hey-day of success. Prices for advertising, job printing and even subscriptions were about twice what they are to-day. Bowen in 1872 sold The Review to T. B. Collins and Ezra Voris for $8,000 and retired permanently from the newspaper business. In 1875 one John L. Miller, a farmer, thought he knew just how to run a paper and purchased the interest of the above named individuals and took sole charge. In three years he was very willing to let go, and retired thoroughly disgusted, having lost almost every cent of several thousand dollars he had invested in the plant. So piqued and broken up was he both in mind and purse that he never visited The Review office since, although not living over ten miles from town at any time since then. He resides, we believe, now in Wayne township. T. B. Collins again came into control, and subsequently at different periods J. M. Sells, E. M. Honkel, John Hanna and Bayless Hanna, had pecuniary interests in the paper. The present management purchased The Review of Collins & Hanna on Oct. 10th, 1885, having as partners the major portion of the time, C. S. Galey and C. M. Berry. In the long space of time since its first publication it has had no more changes in management than most weekly publications. A few of the old time publishers of a half century ago are still with us, and although their forms are bent with age and the frosts of many winters have settled upon their heads, their description of the "art preservative" of the long ago is interesting. Among these old newspaper men are Isaac F. Wade, George Snyder and Jerre Keeney, sr. In the early times a press printing from 300 to 400 per hour was looked upon with admiration. To-day in the United States are many presses that print from 25,000 to 30,000 per hour, and larger numbers, judging from improvements going on will soon be recorded. Such are among the advancements of a half century past. The Review was started as an advocate of democratic principles, and in the fifty years that have passed has never deviated from that path. Old files of the paper show its colors inscribed with the motto of the campaign of 1841.

"Polk, the young blckory, Dallas and victory."

And in all subsequent campaigns it urged and advocated the election of those nominated at national, state and county democratic conventions. In this county of heretofore so many democrats of the "milk, water and mugwump" species, of so many who, at every election, consider it as an evidence of independence or great sagacity to secretly vote against the party's nominees, and aid in defeating them, we are proud to know that the proprietors of this paper in the half century of its existence, remained always true to the party and frowned upon such destructive course; they stood by the men selected by the convention. They did not at any time set up their judgement against the party's will. They did not allow personal feeling to override their duty to party. They sought no sneaking means to defeat or injure the party's interests. May the proprietors of The REVIEW, whoever they may be, in fifty years from this time, in re-counting the history of the paper at the end of its century, show as clear a record for it politically at that time as it has shown up to this.

BANK DEPOSITS.

A number of the officers of banks in the state have been notified to appear before the state tax commissioners at Indianapolis with the lists of their deposits and the amount of money credited to each depositor. We cannot see anything wrong in this, although many of the bankers are predicting a dreadful state of affairs if such things are forced upon them. No bank, private citizen, or any establishment has any authority to evade the just and equitable assessment of his or its property. The rich, middle class, high or low, should be assessed all in proportion to the amount of property possessed, no more, no less. The private business affairs of any man should not come in conflict with any just law. If he has to be so secret in his matters that the state or county is to be cheated out of its just rights, the sooner he is brought to time the better. The new tax law does not aim to be oppressive to any man, because he may be blessed with plenty of cash, nor to the poor man with little, but in its operation aims to treat all equitably and have each individual bear an equal share of the burden of taxation. Why any man able to have deposits of money in a bank should be shielded any more than he who does not, when it comes to the matter of assessment, is a matter that needs explanation.

BOYCOTTING THE FAIR.

A number of unreasonable fanatics, members of the Farmers' Alliance in the north part of this township, it is stated, propose boycotting the coming fair exhibition, because the water at their late picnic at the grounds was turned off at 3 o'clock p. m. instead of being allowed to flow until evening. In the first place, we understand the Fair company had nothing to do with the turning off of the water, but the movement was solely that of the water works company, and the supply was cut off to make some repairs. Damphools like these are just about such men as would ask the government to loan them money at 2 per cent, or come to town and beg merchants to help pay for the expense of a picnic in which they had no interest whatever, because they were too little souled to foot their own bills. The fair exhibition will go right along in spite of these narrow contracted individuals, and whether they attend or not is a matter of small moment to the managers, as in the bulk of the population there are very few of the people of the disposition of these people who propose boycotting; in fact they do not number more than 1 in 50 of the farming community.

AN OPINION OF HARRISON.

Harrison has some strong enemies in his own party. They exist elsewhere than in Indiana. They are not near as disappointed office-seekers. Ex-Senator Farwell of Illinois, speaking of Harrison and his proposed re-nomination says of him:

"It is my candid opinion that if the nomination of Harrison is forced on the Republican party he will lose every State in the Union, with the exception of Vermont. He is not a gentleman; he is a little petulant man. Men prominent in the Republican party have called on him and come away swearing and on account of the discourteous treatment received at his hand. Delegations of citizens waiting upon him in connection with public affairs have been snubbed. People don't like that sort of thing, and mind you, what I am telling you is what any man who has been brought in personal contact with Harrison would say if he did not think it policy to keep still. You talk confidentially with almost any Republican Senator and he would tell you just what I am telling you."

After a long and bitter fight, which enabled the Republicans to elect a mayor, the two factions of the Democratic party in Chicago have united. The constitution adopted at a union meeting of all factions is a decided novelty in the line of political agreements. It provides that all primaries be held under the Australian ballot system and forbids central committee men from becoming office holders. Should the treaty prove binding the Democrats expect to make a clean, everlasting sweep of all the offices in sight, the party, when united, having according to their estimates a majority of 15,000 votes.

FRED DOUGLASS, the colored pet of the republican party, has resigned the position of minister to Hayti. He has in all of the campaigns been used by his party to stir up and excite the colored voters. This was about all he was fit for. He is an individual of very ordinary ability and in any official position has exhibited very little talent for anything except to save his salary.

The general solicitor of one of the railroads crossing Indiana has decided that, hereafter, when stock is killed on the line to ascertain what value is placed on the horse, cow or other animal in the owner's assessment list and pay for the animal killed accordingly.

How matters may shape up by the time the next national republican convention rolls around is, of course, unknown, but at this time it would seem that Blaine would have the nomination forced upon him whether or not he desired it. Regarding Harrison, Dudley, one of the leaders of the party says that the administration of Harrison has been clean and vigorous, but at the same time he and many other republican leaders are doing their utmost to prevent his re-nomination.

The great fault with present modes and management of schools is that too many instructors and over seers of schools consider all laws relating to school interests are made especially for their own benefit and not for pupils. Right there is when they err. School laws are for scholars, not instructors. They should be reminded of this occasionally.

The Alliance desires the government to loan it money at 2 per cent, on land that its members may own. It makes no provision for the poor devil, that don't own any land, but is a renter. The Alliance considers probably that he is not worthy of consideration. On this idea the Alliance will undoubtedly be defeated every where.

The value of farm products in the United States this year, it is stated, will be $1,000,000,000 more than any other for the past five. To offset this decided evidence of prosperity is the Billion Dollar republican Congress that adjourned on the 14th of March.

Those farmers who are aiming to boycott the Fair should be written to and requested not to attend, otherwise they will be on hand of course, and want to secure the best seats to see the "hoss" races.

SENATOR VOORHEES left Terre Haute last Tuesday for Virginia Beach, Old Point Comfort and other resorts on the Atlantic. He will return to Indiana before congress convenes.

It should be in Every House.

J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with Pneumonia after an attack of "La Grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Borber, of Cooksfort, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free trial bottles at Nye & Co. ## Grape Juice for Sickness.

The art of cultivating the Oporto vines and fermenting the Oporto Grape into wine in this country, and of preserving the Grape Juice fresh without fermentation has been brought to a greater degree of perfection by Mr. Alfred Speer, of Passaic, N. J., than by any other person; in fact, he was the pioneer in introducing and advertising Native Wines. He has purchased hundreds of tons of grapes, besides his own vintage. Mr. Speer's success has arisen from the strict purity and valuable properties of his wines for invalids and feeble persons, and his reputation extends around the world.

A watchful Chicago dog "treed" a burglar on a pile of trunks in the store-room and kept him there until the man of the house arrived on the scene.
