IRA J. CHASE.

This gentleman was nominated for Governor last week by the republican State convention at Fort Wayne. The nomination was not unexpected. Chase has labored industriously to that end ever since the death of Hovey. He has traversed the State regularly ever since with that object in view. It has been prayer and politics with him steadily for six months past. After a sermon in each locality he talked of his candidacy to all that would listen. By his close application to the business in hand he over-reached all adversaries, and Shockley, Chambers, Steele and others, who wanted the nomination, were thoroughly defeated at all points and Chase was nominated at the first balloting. His nomination is secured through his supposed church influence, and not through any demonstrated ability for the position. And this so far as merit goes is an unfair point of consideration. He may make a good preacher, but a poor governor, and the sensible, unprejudiced members of his church will so view the matter. Piety is all right in its place but there are other important qualifications necessary. At an important crisis he may be sadly lacking in the requisites for his office. If he is selected solely because of his religious standing he should be defeated, and we do not see wherefore he was chosen differently. Something of the government of the people, some knowledge of human nature, some acquaintance with the demands of the State, executive ability, etc., are necessary for the position of Governor of a great commonwealth, although not absolutely needed in the vocation of a minister. The campaign in Indiana promises to be of the usual spirit this year, aggressive, energetic and exciting. What figure this minister may cut as a candidate and how strong he may be among the masses remains to be told at the end of the contest, but if governed solely by piety, it cannot be formidable, we believe. While the people may esteem piety they will think that mixed with politics it is much out of place.

MUST LOOK AND LISTEN.

The Supreme court of Indiana has decided that it is the duty of a person approaching a railroad crossing to both look and listen for trains, and the failure of the company to give the signals required by law will not excuse the failure of the person who may be injured by passing trains in not taking this precaution of avoiding danger, and all such persons will be regarded as grossly negligent and careless.

MONTGOMERY county republicans don't seem to be in it so far as nominations are concerned. Both Travis and Kennedy, who wanted nominations were defeated in the shuffle, and both can yet remain in the ranks of private citizens, their party undoubtedly concluding that that is the best position for them, and quite probable it is.

GRAY IN LINE.

Numbers of persons unacquainted with ex-Gov. Gray had erroneously supposed that after the treatment awarded him at Chicago and his failure to secure the nomination for Vice President he would be a sulker, and would really be in favor of the defeat of the ticket, but they do not know him. He will work as earnestly and energetically for it as he always has. At a ratification meeting by the democracy at Indianapolis last week at which he was chairman Mr. Gray made a few stirring remarks among which we quote the following:

"We place in this contest the wise, patriotic and economical administration of Grover Cleveland [cheers] side by side with that of Benjamin Harrison and challenge the American people to make a comparison of their merits. Harrison's administration is typical republican. It represents the principles, the policy, the aims, the profligacy, and the plutocratic tendency of the republican party and we can comprehend to some extent the extravagance of Harrison's administration when we consider that it has not only expended the current revenues of the government, but in addition has squandered the great surplus of nearly $100,000,000 that was in the treasury when it came in control of the government, and will leave at the end of four years an empty treasury as a reminder of republican rule.

Under Harrison's administration has been enacted the class legislation embodied in the McKinley tariff; a tariff which levies the highest rate of import duties ever known in the history of the world; a system of taxation that taxes every humble home to enrich special private interests, and its adherents deem themselves so well entrenched in the citadel of protection under Harrison, that they do not hesitate to boldly assert that the primary object of the government in levying taxes should be to protect special industries from competition and not to raise revenue to support the government. And while the capitalists, the beneficiaries of the McKinley tariff, are amassing fortunes, the wages of labor continue to go down.

"It was under Harrison's administration and by his advice that the attempt was made to pass the infamous force bill, which authorized federal interference in state elections, struck down the right of local self-government, and which was intended to be used as election machinery to perpetuate the republican party in power.

"My fellow-citizens there is but one way by which the people can place their seal of condemnation on the class legislation and plutocratic tendency of the republican party and secure an administration of the government in the interest of the people. It is by returning to the control of the government the old democratic party; the party of the constitution; the party of the people, the party of honest, economical government, the party of tax reform and just taxation, the party of equal rights with special privileges to none, the party opposed to subsidies, the party opposed to federal interference in State elections, the only party capable of administering the government in a national spirit, the party whose cause is to-day the people's cause—a cause that will triumph before the people at the coming election if we stand up unflinchingly for our faith.

TO THE POINT.

It cannot be said of the average prohibitionist that he deals in metaphors, similes, or has two meanings to each sentence expressed, for he don't. He does not generally get on two sides to one question. He generally speaks out plain and is undisguised in his language. Here is what ex-Gov. St. John said at the prohibition National convention at Cincinnati: "Members of the convention—return my sincere thanks and shall ever be grateful for the distinguished honor of being chosen to preside, as temporary chairman, of this magnificent political convention, the greatest and grandest in sobriety, moral force and brain power that ever convened on American soil. It represents a party that dares to do right, because it is right, and condemns the wrong, because it is wrong. It stands for peace, prosperity and equality. What figure this minister may cut as a candidate and how strong he may be among the masses remains to be told at the end of the contest, but if governed solely by piety, it cannot be formidable, we believe. While the people may esteem piety they will think that mixed with politics it is much out of place.

A MINISTER of New York, Rev. Thomas Dixon, in a sermon the other day, warned the National democracy that Tammany was a load that they cannot carry. That seems very sensible and is doubtless true. An organization that is such simply for spoils, and has not principle, is a load that any political party will find hard to carry. The attempt to carry Tammany has frequently failed in defeat to the democracy and will continue to. It should no longer be allowed to have a voice in the councils of the party until it proves its worth. It should be received as republican, determined upon the defeat of the democracy, and treated as any republican organization. When it is rightly placed and understood the democracy can be thus better prepared to counteract its influence.

THE republican state convention judiciously left out any thing relating to the subject of temperance. Remembering the importance of the West House bar at Minneapolis in securing "state pride" Benny the renomination for President, it wisely concluded it was injudicious to reflect on the liquor interests of the state.

WE are glad to know that that plank relating to tariff in the democratic platform of the National Convention has but one meaning, contains no "straddle" and that every one can understand it to mean just what it says. There has been enough of "protection" for thirty years past, now let us have a little free trade, even if it does come through "reciprocity."

THE THIRD PARTY.

What is known as the Third Party through its delegates assembled at Omaha, Neb., this week and nominated a national ticket. What strength this party may develop is yet to be seen. It embraces among its members a considerable following in the west of the agricultural element, many old political hacks, offshoots from the two old parties, and also many engaged in mining. They will make in proportion to their numbers an aggressive contest, yet we do not believe that with all their strength and stir they will accomplish very much. They may succeed in carrying two or three of the newly admitted western strength, but east of the Missouri their vote will amount to but little. The states they may carry are those whose people are principally engaged in mining such as Colorado, Nevada and Idaho, whose total electoral vote is not as large as Indiana. They are now all considered republican states, and so far as the democracy is concerned will effect it but a trifle if any. These states want free silver coinage. Neither of the other two parties favor absolute free coinage, hence these states naturally will favor the third party. For every new idea or issue that is originated a new political party must be created, it seems to promulgate its doctrines, yet they are generally short lived, its numbers drift back into the other old parties, and so after season will these third party people.

PEACE and HAPPINESS to every home and death to every saloon in the land. It demands for women equal pay in the shops and equal say at the polls, a free ballot for the white men of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Iowa, as well as for the black men of Mississippi, Louisiana and South Carolina, that north and south, east and west, black and white, rich or poor, every human being should have protection to life and property.

The expenses of government should be levied upon the wealth instead of the necessities of the people. We claim that any system which imposes a high tariff upon the food, fuel and clothing of the poor, and lets the diamonds of the rich come in free, is legalized robbery under the guise of "protection" and ought to be forever abolished; that all money should be issued by the general government, and every dollar, whether gold, silver or paper, should stand upon an equality before the law for all purposes."

THE PROHIBITION NOMINATIONS.

At the National prohibition convention held at Cincinnati last week, Bidwell, of California, for President, and Cranfill, of Texas, for Vice President, were selected as the nominees of the party. Regarding the tariff the platform contains the following plank: "Tariff should be levied only as a defense against foreign governments which place tariffs upon, or bar out our products from their markets, revenue being incidental. The residue of means necessary to an economical administration of the government should be raised by levying on the government in a national spirit, the party whose cause is to-day the people's cause—a cause that will triumph before the people at the coming election if we stand up unflinchingly for our faith.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

President Harrison has appointed John W. Foster, of Indiana, to be Secretary of State to succeed Blaine. Foster seems to have devoted most of his active business life to holding down some office under the various administrations for thirty years past, and has been U. S. Minister to Russia, Mexico and Spain. He seems well fitted for holding on office, but whether he will fill the position to which he has just been appointed as well as Blaine remains to be seen, but it is doubtful.
