Judging from the tone of the Darlington Echo last week, N. B. Couberly, the republican candidate for representative, has been around "seeing" brother Pittman. Although a republican of the uncompromising sort, Mr. Pittman up to the present time, has conducted his paper perfectly free from political bias, and we are sorry to see him fall from grace, at the last hour.

The Reason Why.
Morris' English Stable Powders have met with such remarkable success, giving universal satisfaction, is from the fact that only the highest grade of drugs are used in its preparation. THE PROFANE PARSON.

Republican Explanations that Confirm the Charges Against Governor Chase.

It will be remembered that the state committee and all the Republican managers of the state opposed Governor Chase's nomination at Port Wayne. They advised against his nomination because they believed he would be a load on the ticket to carry; that his labor record would lose the ticket's vote; that he had no soldier record, having never smelt powder; that he was in the habit of using intemperate language and was too much of a demagogue for the dignified office of governor.

At the congressional convention last April, in Union City, Governor Chase's speech was so profane that the Union City Eagle, the Republican organ of Randolph county, denounced it.

The Indianapolis Sentinel, having lately resurrected the profane section of the speech with The Eagle's comments thereon, the Indianapolis Journal and News, both Republican organs, undertook to disprove the charge, but they only succeeded in making the matter more serious. Here is what The Sentinel carries at the head of its editorial columns:

"Democrats are men of hell. If I had a mind to swear I'd say God damn them to hell. They ought to be dead and mouldering in the dust of the earth, and the dust be scattered to the four winds of heaven that they might be completely obliterated from the memory of man.—Governor Chase at Union City, April 21, 1882.

"We submit the question whether Governor Chase's speech was a serious, discreditable and mainly a resolution claims it to be. Was it discreditable or serious for a minister of the church of God, a follower of the lowly Nazarine and a teacher of His word, with its lessons of mercy towards even the least of these, to speak of human beings, even the vilest, as 'imps of hell,' and express the wish that 'God would damn them to hell,' thereby violating his command, 'Thou shalt not take the name of thy Lord thy God in vain'? Was it discreet, courteous, patriotic or manly? We leave the question with our readers.—Union City Eagle, Republican Organ of Randolph county, April 23, 1882.

First, The Journal published a letter from U. B. Hunt, editor of the Winchester Herald, another Republican organ. Mr. Hunt's statement, which was published on the editorial page of The Journal on Saturday, Sept. 24, is as follows:

"What Governor Chase did say in substance was:

"That copperheads, rebels and rebel sympathizers who opposed the pensioning of crippled, maimed and dependent Union soldiers should receive the execrations of every loyal American citizen; that no price that could be paid the brave and heroic soldiers of 1861-5 could compensate them for their sacrifices in the long and dismal marches on the fields of blood and carnage, and in the prison hells of Confederate hate; that were he permitted to swear he would say that GOD MIGHT DAMN THEM for such business, as He had promised He would do in cases of like character."

Mr. Hunt does not deny that Governor Chase used profane language, but that it had reference to "copperheads," and not Democrats. As the Indianapolis Journal daily refers to Mr. Stevenson as a copperhead, as it always referred to Mr. Hendricks, perhaps they were the ones Governor Chase wanted to damn.

The most cruel stab to Brother Chase, however, was reserved for The News of Sept. 26, which gave two letters received in answer to inquiries from it, as follows:

"UNION CITY, Ind., Sept. 24, 1882.

"I heard Governor Chase at the time to which you refer. I do not desire to misrepresent any man. I did not try to remember his utterance. Have never spoken of it to any one until since receiving your letter of inquiry. I think he was speaking of 'rebels' and their sympathizers. When he used the strong language which, I am informed, was criticised by one of the Republican papers of this city.
