NYE IN A NEW ROLE.

THE HUMORIST TRIES HIS HAND AS A CUPID.

A Dame of Uncertain Age Writes Him a Pathetic Letter Which Leads to Amazing Results—An Invitation to the Lovely Ones.

SAYS BILL NYE in the New York World: Some weeks ago I cautiously printed a low, plaintive wail from a prune-grower in Oregon who wanted a wife. He had a prune vineyard of three and a half acres, and was, oh! so lonely that I took pity on him and printed the wail without money and without price, so that some loving heart, lonely and pining, soaring only to a moderate height and flying one-sided for lack of some one to love, might plume its pinions for Oregon, where it and the great big, warm bulbous heart of the prune-grower could nestle together under the giant coniferous trees and trailing arbutus and prune vines of that glorious Aidenn.

Many replies came, and many throbs of real affection, showing that through the influence of the press fond hearts severed by the sad alchemy of circumstances may be soldered together. Some contained photographs—not beautiful, but earnest; not recently taken, perhaps, but showing the coiffure of the time when our country was being jerked hither west and crooked by a fratricidal strife, and woman's hair seemed to have entered largely into that conflict—the days when "rats" were worn inside to give the hair a massive and rank appearance.

Some have the marks of tears on them, as they might if they had been wept over either before or after being returned by some one.

None of them "does justice to the writer." I quote from eleven of the letters to show how we are being imposed upon by the photographer. All say "the artist has been very grossly unjust to me in the picture he has made." Why do women so often say that? Also why do they pile up maledictions on the brow of the photographer because the baby looked like a typhoid idiot at the moment the picture was taken? I do not know. With all the great big crop of things I know, and the overproduction of last year still on hand, I do not know that. Possibly it is for the same reason that a man tries to peer into the dark and ill-smelling barrel of a gun, and no man has ever returned to tell us why he did that. He just sits up there on the lambrquin of a violet-tinted cloud faced with shrimp pink—the cloud, I mean; not the man—and with a knowing look as he puts a new string in his harp he says, "Find out yourself like I done." But, seriously, why should we look into the barrel of a gun when we know we cannot see anything?

I give one reply from Baltimore, with photograph, partly because I have mislaid the address of the prune-grower, and hope he may see this and take courage. Notice that her countenance changes with every emotion which is a good thing, especially in her case:

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.

COUNTING THE STARS.
For the prune-grower, think perhaps I may be eligible. Inclosed you will find my photograph.

ANNE ROBERTA DE LESTRIE.
The question now arises in my mind, ought I to unite two people like these or be even in any way instrumental, perhaps, in the union of two lives that may be the origin of a race which in future years will have to be protected by the game laws of Oregon? Far be it from me to criticize or even opine slightly of one who has been

KILLED AT HIS POST

FIREMAN SHOT DEAD BY TEXAS TRAIN ROBBERS.

They Stop the Express On the Arkansas Pass Railroad but Are Driven Off Before They Secure Any Booty—One of the Outlaws Captured.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 29.—The boldest attempt at train robbery ever known in Texas or in the whole country was made yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock near the little village of Breckenridge, in Wilson County, thirty miles south of this city. The train held up was the San Antonio & Arkansas Pass passenger No. 3 leaving here at 11:30.

The affair resulted in the killing of F. M. Martin, the fireman, and the capture of one of the robbers who gives his name as J. D. May, a cowboy. The train was in charge of Conductor Ed Steele, Engineer Mike Tierney and Fireman Martin, all of San Antonio. It consisted of three day coaches, express car and combination baggage and mail car. At Breckenridge the train stopped to take water, and as she pulled out three men boarded the blind baggage, but were not seen by the passengers that they were not seen by the train crew. The engineer pulled out at a speed of about fifteen miles an hour, and had just entered a sharp curve a few hundred yards from the tank when one of the robbers climbed upon the tender, and with a 45-caliber pistol in each hand threw the guns down upon the engineer and fireman.

"Throw up your hands," he demanded. This was the first intimation that the engineer and fireman had that they were to be held up. Tierney threw up his hands but Martin made a movement as though he was about to secure a pistol from a box under his seat. The robber then began pouring lead into Martin and emptied one six shooter into his body, keeping Tierney covered all the time with the other pistol. Martin fell dead and his body rolled out of the gangway of the engine on to the track, where it was run over by the wheels and mutilated.

The other two train robbers, when they saw the dead body fall out of the cab, jumped from their position on the baggage car to the platform and made for the brush. There were but two passengers on the train and each was armed with a six-shooter. When they heard the firing they rushed upon the platform and as the two robbers rushed to the brush a volley was fired after them.

The robber, May, who killed the fireman, seeing that he had been deserted, made a last desperate effort at capturing the train single handed. He jumped into the cab and ordered Engineer Tierney to take the train across the Indian River bridge. Instead of complying he put on air-brakes and the train came to a standstill. The robber then grasped the throttle and threw it wide open, but the train would not make any headway, and with a parting shot at the engineer the robber jumped from the engine and started up the track on a hard run.

Conductor Steele rushed up to the engine with a six-shooter in his hand. He jumped into the cab and cutting loose from the train started with Messenger Butler and Engineer Tierney in pursuit of the train robber. The throttle was pulled wide open and the light engine leaped along the track, gaining every moment on the robber, who would turn and fire at his pursuers as he ran. Finding that he could not get over the river where his Winchester and three pals awaited him, the robber left the track as the engine was most upon him.

The engine was brought to a standstill and Conductor Steele stood after the robber single-handed. He chased him into the brush, firing at him as he went. The three robbers at the bridge with Winchester commenced firing at the conductor, and their volleys were returned by the engineer and messenger. Conductor Steele overhauled the robber he was after and disarmed him of two pistols. The robbers at the bridge disappeared.

Martin, the fireman who was killed, was buried yesterday. Conductor Steele will receive $1,000 standing reward from the State for the capture of train robbers.

SENATORS FOR SILVER

A MAJORITY OF TWENTY FOR FREE COINAGE.

Reason Why the President Is Not in a Hurry to Call Congress Together—Many People Urgently Demanding an Early Special Session.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Bankers reported an easier condition of the money market this morning. The silver question was the chief topic of discussion on Wall Street. Later in the day, however, the clearing house loan committee issued $1,350,000 of clearing house loan certificates, making the total amount issued $6,300,000.

The Sub-Treasury transferred $115,000 to San Francisco by telegraph in return for gold deposited. It also received $200,000 in gold and greenbacks in exchange for currency of small denominations. No extraordinary shipment of currency was made to the country, either west or south, by the banks or the Sub-Treasury.

There was much talk in Wall Street as to the reasons which prevented the President calling Congress together immediately. One of the reports was to the effect that the President, in conversation with a leading member of the House, had said that while there was no reasonable doubt about there being a majority in the House favorable to the repeal of the Sherman law, it was by no means certain that a like result would follow in the Senate, and that this uncertainty of the Senate was the principal factor against the calling of an extra session earlier than September.

An intimate friend of the Secretary of the Treasury in conversation with a reporter yesterday said that according to Mr. Carlisle a canvass of the members of Congress had been made two months ago in behalf of Mr. Cleveland, with the result that it was learned that there was a majority of the House in favor of the repeal of the Sherman silver purchase law, but that in the Senate there was a majority of twenty the other way. It was believed, however, that enough Senators (eleven at least) would be converted before September to enable a repeal measure to be passed in the upper house.

DEMAND AN EARLIER SESSION.

Cleveland and Carlisle Receive Many Suggestions.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The President's mail and that of Secretary of the Treasury contained many letters reiterating a demand for an earlier session of Congress to procure the enactment of some measure of relief. The position taken yesterday by the administration not to change the program for a September session will be adhered to. The only concession likely to be made will be the naming of Monday, Sept. 4, instead of Sept. 11, as the probable date of an extra session. The most emphatic and defiant of the radical silver men is Gen. Warner of Ohio, president of the Bimetallic league, who declared yesterday that the closing of the mints in India was part of the conspiracy of the creditor class of the world. To-day Gen. Warner was called upon for an explanation of this alleged conspiracy.

"I mean that the creditor class and the creditor nations are conspiring against the debtor classes. It is not, perhaps, what the law would call a conspiracy. When the manager of a great coal combination was accused of stealing $2,000,000, he said: 'Yes, but I did it legally.' It is the same in this international conspiracy. The creditor nations and classes are adopting legal means to double their profits and double the burdens of the debtor classes. The conspirators are made up of no particular country or nationality, but they are drawn mainly from the descendants of the money-changer of old—the Jews."

"What position will the silver men of the United States assume to offset the action of India?"
"They will ask that the United States cut loose from the domination of England, India and the other creditor nations and adopt its own financial system. The United States is strong enough and great enough to fix its own standard of value and adopt the metal which will best serve the processes of internal exchange. The United States of the world, particularly Great Britain, have for years forced the United States to accept the gold standard. Now, if one nation can influence another as to its financial standard, why should not the United States adopt its own system and force the world to recognize it?"
"But the first and great advantage of having an American system of finance would be that we would finally throw off the yoke of the foreign creditor nations which has long dominated the United States."

ELLEN POLLOCK GETS $37,500.
She Sued Her Father-in-Law for Disturbing Her Happiness.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Mrs. Ellen Pollock's good name has been vindicated. Alexander Pollock, as the jury decided at the end of the long trial, owes his son Edward's wife, once his servant, $37,500. Thus ends the most bitter family quarrel told in the courts in years—one in which the intensity of the most sensational of recent breach-of-promise cases was not lacking.

Ellen Pollock became the wife of her rich employer's son. They kept the marriage secret. Two children were born. Then the father found it out and won his son away from the woman with whom he had "made a mesalliance," and caused him to secure a western divorce. For the father's share in the matter the son's wife sued for $50,000 damages.

Enormous Quantities of Wheat.
NEW YORK, June 29.—The enormous export of wheat from this port during the last few weeks has created a demand for canal boats which far more than equals the supply. There are 1,200,000 bushels of wheat stored in New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City and there is in course of transportation 1,500,000 bushels on the lakes and 2,600,000 bushels in the Erie canal and the Hudson River on the way to Europe to be turned into gold.

Street Car Burned.
