THE NEW TARIFF BILL.

The new tariff bill, prepared after months of investigation and consultation, has been introduced into Congress, and a long and spirited discussion over its provisions may be expected. It is pleasing to note that the new bill is not a cowardly makeshift, but an actual intention that the tariff be reduced on hundreds of articles needed by the people. It will clearly show that one plank at least in the Chicago platform meant just what it said—a reform in our tariff laws, and a reduction in numerous articles consumed by the mechanic, the artisan, and the laboring man, but which at this time are protected for the sole purpose of adding to the wealth of the wealthy. It is an honest exhibit to relieve the masses from exactions of monies, and should become a law, although the interested on the side of protection will make a desperate effort to prevent it from being enacted.

Republicans have repeatedly said since the election of 1892, which swept them and their protected pets from power, that democrats were not sincere in this matter and there would be little if any change from the present existing law. They may conclude differently after a time. There is a general reduction all along the line in the proposed law, and the raw material entering into the manufacture of many articles is placed on the free list—no duty. The millions of voters in November, 1892, who, by their ballots, indicated that they favored a reform in the tariff, a reduction in imports, and a rebuke to bloated monopolies of all kinds, will hail this first demonstration as a sincere intention on the part of Congress to put in force a law which is equity to the poor, middle, class, the well-to-do, and will further rejoice when they know that it has become a law of the land.

It would be well for every man expecting to be a candidate in this county next year to look, as it were, into himself. He should by all means consider what political strength he may have, to know if he has good mixing qualities, to ascertain if he has the business capacity to fill the office with credit to himself, the party and the public. All these things he should take into consideration and should weigh carefully. We will have a rattling, strong fight next year in this county, the republicans are going to give us the best they have in the ship, and as usual, will be unscrupulous in their style of warfare. In spite of this, however, with a ticket composed of good strong men we can defeat them. If we are defeated it will be solely through our own mismanagement and not through any particular brilliant work of the opposition. The necessity of first-class men is therefore now apparent and the party should see to it that only that kind are chosen as candidates. With them we can win, otherwise not.

SENATOR VOORHEES said as to pensions at the committee meeting in Indianapolis:

"The pension question is an important one just now. Under the rulings of the republican administration a number of pensioners have been dropped from the rolls during the democratic administration. The fact that they were really dropped by the republicans was not apparently known and much dissatisfaction has resulted. I find now, however, that these persons are again being put on the rolls. I want to say right here that it is not my policy, nor is it democratic policy, to desert the old soldiers."

THE TERRE HAUTE MAIL has a polite way of stating the opinion that Mr. Russell Harrison has the big head. Hear it: "Mr. Harrison is looked upon by business men as a fine young man who is constantly buying a larger hat." The Mail does not seem to think there is any good reason why there should be an increase of the size of the hat.

THE APPORTIONMENT.

The Journal heartily endorses what THE REVIEW has to say. An apportionment act that gives the party making it an advantage is not only infamous but dishonest and should be condemned by every honest man of whatever party—Journal.

Yes, but why in the thunder didn't you see it that way when the republicans ran things in Indiana with such a strong hand twelve or fifteen years ago, when your party had ten of the thirteen Congressmen and every office which a corrupt, unfair "gerrymander" law would admit. It is extremely doubtful if you would be one-tenth as virtuous now in your belief if the republican party were in power in Indiana. This later day confession has not about it an air of sincerity. You should have favored a fair apportionment years ago when your party had the opportunity to enact it. It seems to make a vast difference with you whose ox is being gored.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, as a member of Washington's cabinet, opposed a protective tariff, and this, too, at a time when American industries were really infant. He informed President Washington that he opposed it for two reasons viz: First, because it is a tax, and a tax not authorized by the constitution; and second, because it is a corrupt bargain between the government and a few individuals, by which they are enriched at the expense of all other people.

Jefferson was right on both propositions. Without any tariff other than for revenue, this country would have grown and prospered, and the wealth of the land, instead of being concentrated in a few hands, would have been fairly distributed among the people. All that any American should ask is equal rights, equal privileges and equal opportunities.

POWDERY.

This individual, who for a decade has figured prominently as the head of the Knights of Labor, has been overreached by several of the leaders of the organization and last week was deposed from the position of Chief, and has stepped down and out. Powderly was a great organizer, a man of much mental power and force of character, and considering the heterogeneous and stubborn nature of thousands belonging to the order, has succeeded in holding it together remarkably well. It is doubtful if the Knights will ever again have the united aggressive force as heretofore exhibited. Like many other "good things" it has been spoiled by tampering. Its members will mourn over lost opportunities and sigh for what might have been.

THE ACTION of Mr. Warner, the clothier, in donating 160 turkeys to the poor families of the city last week that they might enjoy some of the luxuries of life in the way of a good square meal or two, is worthy of emulation. It is only a few weeks until Christmas and it will be in order for some charitably disposed person to duplicate the deed of Mr. Warner, and permit many of those whose lot has been misfortune and adversity to enjoy a treat again of Christmas turkey. The poor we have and will continue to have with us, and a charitable spirit toward the worthy of that class is sunshine to them, and is not lost in the bestowal of gifts of the kind spoken of in this article.

BOB INGERSOLL, speaking of the Thanksgiving day last week, said he had nothing to be thankful for and did not know that the people had. One thing, if nothing else, perhaps, that the public might be thankful for is that the Ingersonian belief of the future has fewer followers and the number is growing less. Something more than high-toned oratory, elegance of diction and well rounded periods is necessary to change the belief of the civilized people of the world.

A SUICIDE club of twelve members has lately been discovered in Lake county. A drawing of the names to see which member should kill himself first occurred regularly, the first name drawn out indicating the one to go. One advantage of these kind of clubs is that it ride the world of that many dampholes that much earlier probably than the time when nature would call them.

SOME ONE through the Journal, has suggested the name of Mr. A. F. Ramsey as a candidate for Congress next year on the republican ticket. All right. It goes, but let us get Bob Pierce's opinion first and also Col. Hussey, of Washington.

THE ENGLISH price of steel rails, free-on-board, is $18.00 per ton. The cost of making steel rails in this country, at the large establishments, is $17 per ton. Ocean freight is about $2 per ton.

IT DOES NOT SUIT MR. BROOKSHIRE.

Congressman Brookshire finds everything in the new tariff bill highly commendable from a democratic standpoint, except the compromise on the sugar bounty. The idea of wearing the bounty out by degrees is not to his liking. He thinks the principle of bestowing bounties on private industries is undemocratic, and for that reason the sugar bounty ought to have been extinguished entirely, instead of being removed by degrees.

It is quite probable that a law will be passed at the present session of Congress levying a tax on corporations and legacies, for the purpose of further increasing the revenues of the government. A law taxing individual incomes will not perhaps be introduced as was originally intended.

NOTWITHSTANDING a revised tariff law would, as republicans assert, destroy all our industries, new factories continue to be started in the country, and old ones that were closed during the summer and fall are being re-opened.

AMERICAN carpets in England are selling lower than the English manufacture and are of a better quality. Surely the manufacturers of carpets in this country will not need any protection from the foreign makers.
