Where Disease Is Bred.

When a sewer is clogged or choked up the accumulations of poison in the atmosphere in its vicinity and bring about the conditions that breed disease. We all know that in time of pestilence every precaution is taken, not only to keep the sewers free and open, but even to remove all decaying matter from the community. The danger of infection is thus minimized. How few of us who pay taxes for the maintenance of sanitary bureaus for the public health think of an equal requirement for our individual welfare. The alimentary canal is the great sewer of the human system. When that is dammed up conditions are generated which invite fevers and such diseases as our nature inclines to. Constipation is a clogging of the natural drains, and nearly everything we suffer from follows this condition. It will not do merely to clear the drains from time to time. We must repair and improve the working power of the machinery whose function it is to perform this work. Smith's Bile Beans differ from pills in that they are more than a mere cathartic. They not only stimulate sluggish bowels and clear the system of all disease-breeding matter, but they remedy the evil complained of by those who restore power and freedom of operation to the secreting organs, and they tone up and strengthen the entire system. They are easy and soothing in action. Try them. 25 cts. a bottle, 5 bottles, $1.00. For sale by druggists and medicine dealers throughout the country, or by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Ask for the "Small Size" (green wrapper or cartoon).

TIRE LIFE

Ambrose Johnson is Himself in His Tires.

Ambrose Johnson was a farmer about 50 years of age in the circumstances residing four miles west of Ladoga. The community was greatly shocked on last Saturday to learn that he had committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn. The awful discovery was made by his daughter, but not until the spirit of her unhappy father had winged its flight. No cause is assigned for the rash deed, further than that he had been in poor health for some time and that financial reverses had worried him greatly of late. He leaves a wife and one daughter. The remains were interred at the Ladoga cemetery on Sunday.

Mrs. Ella Willis Duped By a Smooth Chicago Duck.

Along in the balmy autumn of 1891 Mrs. Ella Willis, of this city formed the acquaintance of a smooth Chicago swindler in the person of "Judge" Orville George Wales. Wales advertised for a lady correspondent with a view to matrimony, and Mrs. Willis answered the advertisement. Hence the acquaintance. It was long until the facile George made a visit to this city to inspect his new victim. Although Mrs. Willis was old enough to be his mother Wales was all smiles and worked his well-studied blandishments in such a smooth way that when he proposed marriage the woman had every reason to believe that he was dead in love sure enough, and she consented. Many were the misses he sent to her reiterating his warmth of affection.

In May 1893 Mrs. Willis attended the World's Fair and Wales not only provided a room for her, but gallantly escorted her to the Fair and did all in his power to make her sojourn there one of pleasure throughout.

It was not long till the bold George pressed his love for money and promised her that if she would let him have it he would give her a paid-up insurance policy on his life for security "so that if anything happened to me, you will not lose it." Accordingly Mrs. Willis mortgaged her two cottages on west Wabash avenue for $1,000 and on Sept. 11, 1893 sent the gay swindler the money.

Time passed on, likewise the wedding day. George had grown cold and did not write. At last being filled with grave misgivings as to her affianced husband Mrs. Willis went to Chicago a few days ago. She went to a matrimonial agency, to find that Wales had again advertised for a wife, stating that he was worth $26,000. The fact that she had been slyly duped then dawned upon her. She secured the services of a constable and in company with her lawyer swooped down on Wales in his richly furnished office. He disgorged to the extent of a $500 diamond stud, a $250 diamond ring and $20 in money. He promised to pay the remainder. If he makes full restitution, Mrs. Willis will be more fortunate than other less fortunate women whom he has defrauded.

A New and Promising Industry.

One of the late and what gives promise of being one of the most important industries of the city, is the Crawfordsville Ceramic Works. This plant is located along the Big Four side tracks adjoining the Hoosier street planing mill. The company is just getting the works fairly started. On Monday night work was started in the large kiln just completed. Its capacity is seven thousand gallons and sixty hours burning are required to harden the ware placed therein. When the work is thoroughly inaugurated the company expects to burn two kilns each week.

For the present only domestic ware in the way of jugs and crocks are being made. The glazes used are black and Bristol. The famous Bristol ware is only made by one other firm in the United States, Mr. C. Spencer, the founder of the company, having learned the process in the noted pottery works of England. The most valuable as well as intricate process worked by Mr. Spencer is the white enameled ware. A standing reward of $1,000 is offered for any factory that will produce its like in the United States.

Fancy Bristol and ornamental ware such as is imported from England and sold in our stores at fancy prices will be made by the company. This industry has capital behind it sufficient to make it a success.

Lost Himself.

J. C. Wingate, of Wingate, is in the city. Mr. W. never spoils a story on account of himself. He tells a good one. He arrived here from Lincoln, Ill. Saturday and meeting ex-Representative A. C. McCorkle, arranged to ride out home with him. They were to meet at three o'clock at the Bramble House. About that hour Mr. Wingate went to the hotel, and sat around a couple of hours, waiting for Mr. McCorkle to arrive. In the meantime, however, he had telephoned home that he would be out with Mr. McCorkle. Along about half past five, Mr. Wingate began to feel uneasy, thinking McCorkle had gone home without him. Turning to the landlord he asked if he had a telephone? The answer was that he had not—that there was one at the Bramble House! Bramble House, shouted Wingate, as he sprang to his feet, and then he discovered that he had been sitting at the Big Four Hotel for two hours or more, waiting for McCorkle. He asked permission of Police Commissioner Mitchell to step out on the public square and kick himself thoroughly, particularly as he lived here for years, and knew where the Bramble House is located.—Lafayette Leader.

What Mike White Said.

I remember one day in a campaign along in the early seventies that I boarded a Monon train down at Corwin, and with me was a young man who was the nominee of his party for an important and lucrative office in this county. The y. m. mentioned was not demagoguing for votes, and his self-respect, I am glad to say, forbade him to "make-up" his appearance for the occasion. At the p. r. d. stated the candidate wore polished shoes, a suit of blue chevot, a white pique vest, a dark colored tie, and a Macinaw straw hat. We met on the train Hon. Michael D. White, of Crawfordsville, who was then the Republican nominee for Congress in this district—and Mr. W. seemed to take a great interest in the young Tippecanoe county candidate, although of a different political faith. "Young man," said Mr. White "you will never be elected if you do not take off that white vest—and keep it off." Mr. W., at the time, was encased in a campaign suit, a turned down paper collar, a Shakespeare, and was minus a cravat of any sort. He was elected—the young was defeated. And I can say the y. m. was, in time, glad of the defeat.—Lafayette Times.

He Blesses the Mad Stone.

On last Tuesday week John Fouts was at Frank Ray's, west of Wingate, and in passing round the premises a bulldog owned by Mr. Ray jumped out and bit him in four places on the left arm. Although the bite became irritated and very sore nothing serious was thought of, but the importuning of his daughter, Mrs. Ora Duke, induced him on last Sunday to go to the Hillsboro mad stone, owned by Jim Rice, and an application was made. On the first application the stone stuck to the arm for two hours when it let go and fell off. It was then placed in milk and applied the second time, when it remained for three hours, and although Fouts was not the least scared before the application, he became almost raving when he found he had so narrowly escaped hydrophobia. The dog to all appearances was not rabid, but that the chances were against Mr. Fouts was proven by the work of the stone, which is one of the best in the State, or for that matter in the country. The dog was a red mouthed bull, and any one bitten by this kind of an animal is almost sure to suffer from it at some time in life.—Waynetown Despatch.

Tippecanoe the Sufferer.

They do say that the Crawfordsville fair people are sorry that they tried to appropriate Tippecanoe's date. It may have injured our home fair in some degree, but Montgomery county was the chief sufferer. Somewhere it is written that it always pays to be fair.—Lafayette Leader.

Down here the public would like to know just where the "sorry" comes in. The fair here cashed about $8,000, and that of Tippecanoe about $6,500. This fair paid all claims without scaling, but whether Tippecanoe can do that is questionable. The fair here is prepared to again "suffer" if that is what the Leader terms it.

Peculiar to Itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, in a strictly medicinal sense, in three important particulars, viz: first, in the combination of remedial agents used; second, in the proportion in which they are mixed; third, in the process by which the active curative properties of the preparation are secured. These three important points make Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar in its medicinal merit, as it accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

But it is not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story. What Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others is reason for confidence that it is the medicine.
