

Suffering Women

To the many suffering women who are weak and dejected we would send a comforting hand. Here is something you may need. Please read the inclosed circular and perhaps you will find something to aid you if you are in poor health, as so many women are. Look among your female friends and you will find scarcely one whom is not ailing in some way. Look again and you will find a large per cent of them nervous and tired. They have lost elasticity and feel as though they weighed a ton, or perhaps the brain feels light and dizzy; the memory weak and vacuous.

How many women have grown disengaged after years of doctoring without relief.

Time and money are thrown away in dosing with medicine from which they gain only temporary aid. They do not sleep well, have headaches, nervous prostration, backaches, neuralgia, rheumatism, melancholia, anorexia, dysmenorrhea, ulcerations, displacement and other irregularities.

Nervous diseases include all afflictions of the brain, spinal cord and nerves. Pains or congestions in the spinal cord, which constitute most backaches and tenderness, are painful nervous diseases, which nine times out of ten, are reflected from the female organs, and are sympathetic only. These may be removed by a proper use of Elzena which is applied direct to the weak parts and gives an advantage of their full power. Price per box $1.00 and 2.00.

Directions for the application of the Capsules, accompany each box of the Elzena Compound. Woman can treat herself without the aid of a physician.

Atrial box will convince any woman whether married or single, of the great utility of this remedy for ladies. Sold by

The Magic Nine.

Figures are funny things. They may be and often are manipulated in a most marvelous manner, so as entirely to deceive the uninitiated. Of course these remarks do not refer to ladies' figures, but to the common numeral of arithmetic. Strange tricks may be played with them; tricks as amusing and perplexing as with those time-honored confederates of conjurers—a pack of playing cards. In most of these the figure 9 is the important factor. There are some peculiarities about that little bullet-headed gentleman which are really startling. He has a phoenix-like power of raising himself from his ashes. Smother him up as you will, multiply him by any group of his fellow figures until his identity is completely lost, and he will bob up again, if not in shape, at least in spirit and substance, as the sum of the result obtained by the process of multiplication.

Thus—Twice 9 is 18. Add one and eight together and you get 9. So, for example, 17 nines are 153, which, added together make nine, or 138 nines makes 1,242, and thus the same self-assertive little chap pops up again in different form. A seeming exception is when applied to 11, or to a multiple of eleven; then the little joker comes in pairs, as 22 nines give 198, or seventy-seven nines make 603. But even then the exception is only apparent, for adding 1 and 9 and 8 gives 18, and 1 and 8 gives 9; 6 and 3 and 0 make 9.

Perhaps a more puzzling trick provided by the eccentricities of the figure 9 is the following: Let your subject put down any odd number of figures, three, five, seven, or even more; then add them together and subtract the result. Now he may cross out any one figure and tell the trickster the others. It is easy, by mentally adding them, to discover the value of the figure crossed out, as this is the one needed to make up the result to the nearest multiple of 9. Thus:

136-10 33,404-14 7,623,458-35

10 or 14 or 35

1x6-9 3x,390-18 7,623,423-27

2 8 2

Another use of the magic 9 is made in the following effective trick: Let A put down any number of figures and show them to you. Then, on another piece of paper, you privately write the answer, fold it, and give it to some one to hold. Then B adds another row of figures, under which you write a row, taking care to place under each of his the particular figure which will complete the sum of nine. Then C may write another batch, beneath which you again place numerals, making up a string of nines. The result upon addition of the whole will be found exactly to correspond with your written answer, which you had made a repetition of the first group of figures, less two; and with the figure 2 added in front, thus:

A 96,548

(Answer.) B 42,317 (296,546)

You 57,682

C 47,831

You 52,168

296,546

A 7,632,146

(Answer.) B 8,231,578 (27,632,144)

You 1,768,421

C 5,407,936

You 4,532,063

27,632,144

A trick much more difficult to explain is the $10.89 mystery, but it should only be done once during an evening or among the same set of friends, for, unfortunately, the answer never varies. It is a curious fact that any sum of money, dollars and cents, manipulated in a certain manner will produce the inevitable total of $10.89, provided the original capital is not more than $10. This looks like a profitable business—on paper. The process is this: The tortured trick bearer is told to put down a sum of money (again on paper, he probably will not do it otherwise), then to reverse the figures and subtract the lesser from the greater. Again the figures must be reversed and the two lines added together. The unfailing answer is $10.89. Here are examples:

$2.75 $991 $3.21

5.72 199 1.23

2.75 792 1.98

2.97 297 8.91

7.92 $10.89 $10.89

$10.89.

The process of reversing and subtracting causes our irrepressible 9 to bob up serenely, and thus arises a simple trick. The wily operator asks his subject to put down secretly three figures, then invert these and subtract the lesser from the greater. If he will then divulge the first figure of the result the correct answer can be stated, for it is known that the insolent little figure 9 always usurps the place in the middle, and moreover insists that his supporters together shall sum up nine. Thus with a knowledge of the first figure, the other two are easily told. Here are examples:

321 722 911 524

123 227 119 425

198 495 792 99

FOX HOUNDS.

A Description of a Hunt That Makes One's Blood Tingle.

We became aware, from the shouts of the darkies as they urged the dogs into the thickets, that these animals had names of famous flavors, though their appellations had not been bestowed by one who possessed a fine sense of the historical or chronological unities, says Lippincott's. "Hi, yo' Clovis!" "Come byah, Uncas!" "Git on, Brutus, git on! What yo' sulkin' bout?" These ejaculations were accompanied by sundry kicks, delivered upon the representatives of these and other renowned characters. To such uses do men's names come after death.

After the disappearance of the hounds in the thicket we rode slowly along the devious ways of the pine lands, listening intently for that peculiar canine cry, which announces the discovery of a trail. It was not long delayed, for gray foxes are almost as numerous in eastern Virginia as rabbits are in the western states. Suddenly, amidst the chorus of sharp, short yells, we heard that long-drawn, wailing cry which at night would be interpreted as a cry of the banshee, but which, ringing out on the air of a bright November morning, loses its ominous significance for every one except the fox whose trail has been "struck." As the cry rose and swelled and was taken up by thirty other mouths, our slow-filing cavalcade became enthused with the life and animation of a cavalry company that has just received orders to charge. Reins were tightened, knees were pressed closer to the saddles, hats were pulled down over eyes and men leaned forward over their horses' necks like jockeys waiting for the fall of the starter's flag.

A New Treatment of Measles.

The secondary symptoms of measles and the dangers attending relapse have turned the medical mind toward research, in the hope that some means would be found by which such after-effects could be avoided. Experiments with jacket-poultices prove their great value in cases of measles. As soon as the disease is clearly indicated, the patient is put into one of these poultices and not allowed to become chilled until the severity of the attack is past. In renewing the poultices the utmost precaution must be taken, and the old one should not be removed until the new one is at hand. Indeed, it is best to take the old one off little by little and at once apply that which is fresh. The operation should be performed in a very warm room. In open houses where there is no possibility of keeping up the proper temperature, a bandage made of cotton-batting should be wrapped around the entire body and limbs. If there is any trouble experienced about keeping the cotton in place, it may be secured by quilting or tacking it into the inside of a knitted shirt and under vest. It must be applied very thickly and the garments must fit snugly and be worn continuously. The great value of this form of treatment seems to be in keeping the patient perfectly warm, and avoiding any exposure of the surface of the body to cold. Out of three hundred children treated with jacket-poultices all but three recovered.

Resolutions of Montgomery Lodge No. 6.

WHEREAS, Death, the arbiter of fate, has set his seal upon the temple that contained the life and soul of our well loved Brother Moose, Fred C. Bandel, and, as with all things beyond the power of man to control, it becomes his to bow in humble resignation to the inevitable long journey of the Moose.

Therefore, Be it resolved that this lodge has sustained a loss which it deeply feels, and that in memory of the fraternal spirit shown our lodge and of his loyalty to the teachings of our order, we cause the Jewels of the Lodge to be draped in mourning for the period of the budding of the velvet horn.

That, The sympathy of the Lodge be extended to the family of our departed brother, in this, their great loss.

Resolved further, That these resolutions be recorded among the archives of our Lodge, a copy be transmitted to the bereaved widow and family, and that the same be published in the papers of the City of which he was Chief Magistrate.
