Do We Need Big Muscles?
By no means. Persons of herculean build frequently possess a minimum of genuine vigor, and exhibit less endurance than very small people. Real vigor means the ability to digest and sleep well, and to perform a reasonable amount of daily physical and mental labor without unnatural fatigue. It is because a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters enables the enfeebled dyspeptic to resume the allotted activity of every day life, as well as to participate without discomfort in its enjoyments, that it is such a pre-eminent useful medicine.

THE STATE FAIR.
The management of the Indiana State Fair are working hard and earnestly for the success of what now promises to be the greatest fair ever held. The enormous attendance at County Fairs throughout the State has served as a stimulant, and expectation is high.

During the vacation every building on the ground has been painted white, and the "White City" once more claims the attention of the public. Four weeks in advance of the date of closing, entries began to arrive at the office of the Secretary, and this is so unusual that it is taken as an omen of a very large exhibit. "Special days" will be the order; Tuesday being Old Soldiers' and Children's Day; Wednesday, Indianapolis Day; Thursday, Governor's Day, and Friday, Military Day. On Tuesday free admission to Old Soldiers and Children. On Wednesday, a special program of equestrianism and artistically decorated equipages is provided for Indianapolis citizens. Thursday, Governor Mount and Staff will be present and witness a reproduction of the World's Championship Artillery Drill by the Indianapolis Light Artillery. Friday, members of the Indiana National Guard will compete for valuable prizes. The greatest event of all will be the race between the Pacing Kings of the world—Joe Patchen, 2:01½ and Star Pointer, 2:01½, to beat two minutes for a purse of $3,000. This race will take place Wednesday, Sept. 15th, and will make the greatest race that can be provided. Good weather is all that the management need and they as thoroughly deserve it as the public desire it.

AGRICULTURAL.

TOPICS OF INTEREST RELATIVE TO FARM AND GARDEN.

COOKING FOOD FOR PIGS.
Pigs are the most nearly like a man as to feeding and digestion of food of all other animals. That is, they will do better on cooked food, for this reason, than other animals. There is less waste, the food is cleaner, and it is better digested. A convenient way is to set a large rustless iron kettle in a stone fireplace and boil the potatoes or roots given to them with corn ears until the whole becomes a stiff mass when it is cold. This is fed in this condition, and is all eaten clean, most of the cobs of the soft corn being eaten and digested. Soft corn really fattens better than hard or ripe grain. Any kind of grain may be fed in this way without grinding, and the cooking costs less than the grinding will. In feeding all kinds of animals it is to be taken into account that when the food is such or in such a condition that the flow of saliva is the most abundant, the digestion of it is the most nearly perfect. In fact, the mouth is the first of the digestive organs, and the saliva secreted in it is the first solvent of the food. So that the more the food may be masticated before it is swallowed, the more economical will be the feeding. Fed in this way, one pound of dry matter will make a pound of dressed pork. —New York Times.

A CLEAN AND SECURE WELL HOUSE.
The advantages of a tight, well-made well house are so many that it is a wonder that so few are seen upon the farms of the land. They shelter the pump and make its period of usefulness much longer than where it is exposed to the weather, and they especially aid in keeping the pump from freezing in winter. Moreover, where cattle or horses are watered at such a pump, they oftentimes set their noses into such contact with the spout that one's pleasure in drawing drinking water from the same channel is lessened, to say the least. Such a house as is shown in the illustration is inexpensive, but capable of serving its purpose admirably. It is just large enough to enclose the platform of the pump, and is constructed of matched boarding, nailed upon a light frame, two-by-two stuff being sufficiently stout for this purpose. A trough is located outside, which keeps the pump, and the platform of the pump, entirely out of reach of cattle or horses. —American Agriculturist.

A WELL-PROTECTED PUMP.

WINTER CARE OF COWS.
It is quite possible that close confinement of the dairy animals during winter will enable the dairyman to force a greater production of milk and butter, and will result in some saving of food and so in greater economy of production. But it is a question whether this saving is not more than offset by the impairment of vitality that must naturally result from such treatment. A human being who was cooped up in that manner would have little ability to resist the attacks of disease, or to stand any accidental exposure, or severe climatic change. It is not wise to expose cattle unduly to the elements, and comfortable winter housing is a very direct road toward increased profits from all kinds of stock. But a judicious owner will see to it that his care of them is such as tends to promote health and to prolong life, as well as to make the immediate yield from them greater. This may be accomplished by giving good housing and protection, and at the same time giving them a chance to get out into the fresh air and sunlight for at least an hour each day. Possibly this might be omitted when the weather is exceedingly cold or stormy, for such exposure is never profitable. But in ordinary weather this hour out of doors should not be neglected. Inside the stables there should be good ventilation at all times, and this in connection with the outdoor exercise will be pretty certain to keep the stock in good condition and sufficiently hardy. —New York Observer.

CHARACTERISTICS OF DORKINGS.
This breed of fowl is older even than the English Nation, by which it is considered the ideal table fowl. In fact the breed is so popular in that country that it is generally regarded as an English breed of fowl. There are four varieties of the Dorkings, viz.: Gray, silver gray, white and cuckoo. The cocks of the gray variety have either a pure black or slightly mottled breast, the neck and back being white, striped with black, and the wings nearly white crossed by a well-defined black bar. The silver grays are always alike in color, the male having a black breast, white wings crossed by a black bar and a black tail. The head, neck and back are pure silver white, without sign of yellow or straw color. The white Dorking is not quite so large as the other varieties which it considered to surpass in symmetry. Its plumage is pure white and it possesses what is known as "rose comb," the others having a somewhat larger single comb. The cuckoo Dorkings have a peculiar plumage, consisting of a marking of bars or pencillings of dark blue gray on a ground of lighter gray. In size it is slightly larger than the white, but smaller than the other varieties.

Dorkings have full, broad breasts, broad backs, short legs and are rather short in the neck. They have five toes on each foot. The male bird in good condition will weigh twelve pounds, and the hens nine pounds. They are fair layers, good mothers, mature early and grow rapidly. The great objection is the delicacy of the young birds, which renders raising them difficult. The climate, or the soil, or both in many parts of the United States does not seem to agree with them. This may, however, be due to too much inbreeding, as fresh blood is difficult to procure.

DORKINGS.

Dorkings can only be successfully raised on a dry soil, dampness being peculiarly fatal to them. They also require a wide range. The Dorking is not exactly suited to the requirements of the American market, its shanks being white, while we generally prefer yellow ones. Its skin is also white or pale yellow, instead of the gold color usually demanded; but for the production of cross-breed fowls for the table it should prove of great value. —New York World.

FARM AND GARDEN NOTES.
It pays to consider mutton first and wool afterward.

Potash may be had in wood ashes and muriate of potash.

Tillage should be begun just as soon as the ground is dry enough in spring.

A stable should be so built that a horse would not need to stand blanketed.

Good drainage, natural or artificial, is essential to success. Trees are impatient of wet feet.

It is not wise to make a horse so tender that he will be liable to colds and discomfort when taken out.

Well-drained lands are dryer in wet spells and moister in dry spells than other lands. They can be worked earlier in spring.

If a man is a good grass and grain grower, he would better manufacture these products into meat upon his farm, that he may have the ultimate profit from both branches of his business.

When all orchardists recognize the necessity of spraying the fruit trees, the large crops of fruit will be had again which we were accustomed to before fungi, codlin moths, etc., were as destructive as they are at the present day.

Geraniums not required in pots through the winter may be turned out of them, packed closely in a box of earth and kept in a cool cellar all winter. Give them scarcely any water, or it will start them growing, which is not desirable.

Do not trim the shrubs after mid-summer or there will be no flowers next year. It is the wood of this season which flowers next year, and this must not be lost. Pruning should be done immediately after it has commenced flowering.

If one plant among many more of the same kind shows a disposition to bloom earlier than the others, see it should be saved from it, as it is often possible to fix a character such plants seem inclined to assume. Many a valuable race has been started in this manner.

In the attempt to renovate an old farm which one has recently bought, on which there may be many wastes and impoverished spots, do not put the available manure on these, but go to work systematically and improve one field at a time, so that it will yield a paying crop. Fertilize one field well and then extend to other fields.

Much garden work done in the fall is so much saved from spring. One of the important operations is the application of manure to fruit and ornamental trees, small fruit, asparagus, rhubarb, etc. Manure is cheaper and in less demand than it will be in the spring. Furthermore, the fall is really the most fitting season to put it on.

A colt four months old should be taught to eat oats and bran with the dam, then weaned. His ration after weaning may be three pounds oat clover hay, one pound good oats, three pounds wheat bran, one-fourth pound linseed meal. Moisture the cut clover, then mix all together, and feed half morning, the other half at night.

Many garages with heavy soil will be improved by fall plowing. It is dry now and the work can be well done. The ground will be left loose, so that it can be worked earlier in the spring than otherwise. Of course a thorough cleaning should be given the garden. All the weeds, trimmings of trees, etc., should be collected in a heap and burned, for it is well known that the eggs and larva of insects harbor in such truck.

MRS. ELLA M'GARVY,

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham.

She says:—I have been using your Vegetable Compound and find that it does all that it is recommended to do. I have been a sufferer for the last four years with womb trouble, weak back and excretions. I was hardly able to do my household duties, and while about my work was so nervous that I was miserable. I had also given up in despair, when I was persuaded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day, I am feeling like a new woman. —MRS. ELLA M'GARVY, Neebe Road Station, Cincinnati, O.

Butler College.
The State of Indiana can be justly proud of Butler College (Department of Liberal Arts, University of Indianapolis) and her history for nearly a half century. It is located at Irvington, Ind., only a few minutes' ride from the busy center of the Capital, but sufficiently removed to secure to the student the quiet privacy necessary for progressive study and perfect success. It has stood from its inception for the broadest culture. There has been no discrimination against anyone on account of sex or color. It believes that the atmosphere in which the broadest culture is to be realized is one which is distinctly Christian.

The most liberal and thorough course of study, commensurate with substantial growth and success, has been employed, and in point of equipment it has few rivals, and is without a superior in the State. Reverting to the advertisement that appears in another column of this week's issue, the address of the managing officer is given together with full instructions to those who desire information in detail as to course of studies, tuition and expense of attendance. There will doubtless be a large number of students that will take advantage of the very liberal terms offered the coming college term and every indication points to an unusually prosperous year.
