“DIETZ”

Reflector Lantern

There is an all-aroundness about the goodness of this lantern that is noteworthy. In fact, it has too many virtues to crowd into this space. It gives a surprising volume of light, which is rendered specially intense by the concentrating power of the Reflector and Hood.

It will not blow out, is absolutely safe, and can be used for driving darkness away, driving horses, having a simple arrangement to attach it to any vehicle.

The U. S. Life-Saving Service and the U. S. Life-Saving Patrol Lanterns—these fierce coastwise gales cannot extinguish it.

The U. S. Government buys wisely—take a hint from it and buy one of your dealer giving you the “Dietz” goods. We make an endless variety of lanterns, Lamps, etc.

Little Wheat Sown.

It was the intention of many farmers to put more wheat in the ground for next year's harvest than usual. The extreme drought and hard cloudy condition of the soil has as yet prevented this, and it is doubtful if the wheat area this fall in the county will be as large as that of last season.

The Crops.

The Government crop bulletin for the Indiana district shows that there were numerous local rains on the 16th inst., with hoar frost in the central and northern portions. Corn dried rapidly during the hot days, that planted late failing to mature. Much corn has been shocked but the late standing corn is beyond danger of injury by frost, and will be good, although not so large as expected earlier in the season. Tomatoes ripened rapidly, and are delivered to the factories; the crop is not as good and abundant as last year. A good crop of grapes is on the markets, and peaches, in localities, yield well. In some orchards there is still a good crop of winter apples.

Late potatoes are a poor crop. Clover hilling progresses and is nearly done; the yield is above the average and the quality of seed good. When better rain fell plowing and seeding were resumed, but the ground in general is still hard and dry, and farmers are waiting for more rain. Some early sown rye and wheat have come up, but the latter is not in very good condition. Pasture is all dried up and brown, and most farmers are feeding their cattle; stock water is scarce and cisterns and wells are failing in many localities and live stock is suffering. Hog cholera prevails in Lake County.
