NOTWITHSTANDING the apparent agreement between Germany, England and America for the settlement of the Samoan difficulty by arbitration, the real condition of affairs in Samoa is not improved. The fighting is still continued, and the state of feeling between the representatives of the three governments is not friendly to say the least. Admiral Kautz steadfastly maintains the position first taken, that he, as the representative of the United States, was grossly insulted. He warned the commander of the German war ship, Falke, to keep out of range of the firing. Should this not be done a serious conflict, involving the gravest consequences may follow. Herr Rose, the German consul, persists in his course and is held responsible by Kautz for the entire trouble. The whole affair is particularly unfortunate, and does not tend to harmonize relations between the two countries. The small value of the islands and their immense distance from us seemingly places us in a position of one fighting for small reason. It is to be hoped that good sense will prevail and that an amicable adjustment of claims may be made speedily. Already the matter has progressed too far.

JONES is the name of the man from Toledo that like a sudden apparition has brought terror to the Hanna faction in Ohio. Mr. Jones has broken loose from party dictation and defying the leaders has succeeded in carrying his point by storm. Never before in their experience has such a thing happened, and now he is the most formidable gubernatorial candidate in sight. He has given utterance to such a heretical statement as the following: "I am for principle above party." And this man could talk in that way and yet be elected! No wonder the good wielders of the party lash are startled, pained and grieved. Is this plain Jones some "man of destiny" that will sow dissension in the party and who cannot be controlled? So the Ohio republicans have another problem and his name is Jones. Men of destiny seem to be unusually numerous in the good old buckeye state.

At Junction City, Ohio, a young woman has just died from leprosy, with which other members of the family are also afflicted. This incurable disease has been introduced by Chinese, and a few cases have been reported before. Since the annexation of Hawaii even the greatest precautions will probably not prevail to keep it from spreading. One of the strongest objections to the annexation of the islands was the existence of this disease. It is one of the most hideous scourges known to the race, and no means have been found to even control it.

The Commissioners of Cass county have ordered the Sheriff to give the prisoners compulsory shower baths. They believe that as cleanliness is next to godliness, the way to reform criminals is through the medium of soap and water. If the shower baths are long enough continued, there is no question but some change must come over the unruly prisoner. This plan might well be imitated in every county and applied effectively to the case of the ubiquitous and unwashed tramp. The efficacy of soap and water as a civilizer is unquestioned.

We are told that the price of wool will be lower this spring than for several years, why is this? Have we not the Dingley tariff law, which is the highest we have ever had, and which has been in full blast for many months? Is not this time a time of great and increasing prosperity, which we were promised, and have been many times told is upon us? who of us has not many times been fascinated by the persuasive eloquence of the campaign orator who told us of the beauties of a high tariff on wool? Now it is darkly hinted that there are too many sheep and yet a few months since we were confronted by startling statistics to show that the sheep was swiftly disappearing under the operation of the Wilson tariff law. We were told further that it was all a question of tariff and that supply and demand had nothing to do with it. These various and varying statements may not seem very consistent to the average individual, but no doubt, all in good time the politician will explain the mysteries and kindly untangle the knotted threads, and the man who sells wool may find ample cause to rejoice in the great blessings showered upon the sheep raiser.

The already long list of available candidates for the gubernatorial nomination in Indiana grows, and grows rapidly. The impression seems to be abroad that after all we do not need a man of great ability for chief executive of the state. And if we are to judge by the past, several instances might be cited in proof of the fact that we have at times managed to get along with a very small sample of a statesman in that chair. It might be well, however, to not repeat the experiment too often, and just seize this opportunity to relegate some of these statesmen to their native wilds, and choose a man of sterling worth and recognized ability. A good and able man is not too good for the state of Indiana.

JONES of Toledo has suddenly awakened to find himself a figure of national curiosity and interest if not importance. His success in breaking loose from party lines, has made him the center of observation and his enemies are wondering what he'll do next. The awful example of Pingree is still before them. He is neither a theory nor a memory. And now comes Jones, and where Jones will land they want to know, in time to get out of the way, if anything serious should happen.

The defeat of Mayor McKisson at Cleveland has left many rankling wounds that will not be easily healed. The Mayor has expressed his opinion of the treachery of friends of Hanna in venomous words that are not at all likely to tend to close the breach. When the clash comes next year somebody's presidential aspirations may suffer a severe compression between the two warring factions.

The political sea in Ohio is still mightily troubled and sufficient oil is not available to produce a calm. The various factions still make charges and counter charges, and explanations come thick and fast. They are the sort of explanations that only irritate and are as pleasant as blood-letting. When they all get together and harmonize their differences the harmony among the survivors will be beautiful to see.

It seems that General Gomez has plans of his own for Cuba. His ambition now is to be the father of his country and solidify the faction into a compact state. A very worthy ambition truly, but it sadly interferes with the plans of the United States. Apparently it was a far easier matter to get the Cuban problem on our hands than to dispose of it. Gomez may be an "incident" at least.

The relations of Norway and Sweden with a common crown, are reported as very strained. This is Greek against Greek, but there will probably come no "tug of war." The descendants of the Vikings have not altogether lost the wild traits of their ancestors, but they are too wise to divide the house against itself knowing it could not stand.

The Washington Commandery of the Loyal Legion will court martial General Eagan, and it is highly probable that he will be expelled. He ought to have his salary increased as an additional punishment. Nothing is too good for him, not even the canned beef.

See Voris & Stilwell for all kinds of insurance.

The President has appointed Andrew White, Minister Newell, Seth Low, Captain Crosier and Captain Mahan as representatives of the United States at the peace Congress of the Czar to be held at the Hague in May. These distinguished gentlemen are fit representatives of this government at so important a conference. Distinguished severally in the fields of education, diplomacy, military and naval affairs, they will be able to consider the question broadly and in the highest possible light, giving just weight to each phase of that very difficult subject. If this peace congress should result in what its friends hope for, i. e. a reduction of the vast burden of maintaining a war footing, and a general agreement for the settlement of disputes by arbitration it will mark a new era in the world's history. If it should not do so nevertheless, it is a step toward that end which shall mean almost always a maintenance of peace. The proceedings of the congress will be watched with profound interest for their bearing upon every nation on earth.

DEWEY will not be a candidate for the Presidency under any circumstances, he says. He is a sailor and has no politics. If Dewey is that kind of a man he would probably make a good President. But his decision is doubtless as final as his character is firm, and the politician may go back and "search for a man" in their own ranks.

DER. KAISER has the lumbago. It is small wonder his back is weakening under the tremendous burden of state and of puffed up pomp and circumstance, he chooses to maintain before the world. Many a stronger royal spinal column has been broken by a smaller burden.

SINCE the coming of the great Jones, and the beef scandal has assumed such colossal proportions the heroic Hobson has dropped strangely out of sight. The heroic cannot compete with the scandalous in the fickle favor of a discriminating reading public.

MATAFA is finding that a crown is a burden which properly belongs to the white man. No south sea islander has any business with the trappings of royalty. The simple savage would do well to see that he has nothing which the white man may covet.

THERE is no record that the men who speak so glibly of Roosevelt for vice-president have consulted that gentleman as to his opinion in the matter. When he is heard from there may be a very different aspect to that candidacy.

Booker T. Washington.

Booker T. Washington, the colored orator, leader and advocate of the cause of his race in a recent letter to a prominent colored man in South Carolina, points out the folly of the colored man following a simple policy of opposition to the white man. He advises the colored man to think for himself and perform the duties of an American citizen as an American and not as a negro. He must ally himself with the forces which can give him the greatest uplift, and that is the white man. The white man is in general the friend of the colored man, and nothing is to be gained by opposing him. Let their plans coincide as citizens working for a common cause, and thereby the negro will be helped. There is never anything to be gained by a simple iconoclastic policy. This is the tenor of Washington's advice, and it is the kind that is needed by the colored man. He has reached the point where he must rely upon his own strength as a man, and work out his own salvation with fear and trembling. It is likely that all legitimate help will be gladly given him. The vast majority of white men are his earnest well wishes. In Booker T. Washington he has an earnest and able leader, whom he will do well to follow.

KILLED BY A FALLEN TREE.

Maurice O'Connor, an old resident of Brown township, met with a terrible death at 9:30 yesterday morning. He was at work in a clearing in which a lot of deadened trees were burning. One of these trees was broken off and fell striking Mr. O'Connor and pinning him to the ground. When rescued it was found that he was fatally injured. He was carried to the house where he lingered in agony until near noon when death ended his sufferings.

Mr. O'Connor was one of the best known Irish-American citizens, having lived in the county for a number of years. He was 62 years of age, and leaves a wife and fourteen children, most of them grown. He was a quiet and inoffensive citizen, hard working and reliable. The funeral will take place from St. Benards church in this city Sunday at 2 o'clock. Interment at Calvary Cemetery.

Crook Caught.

The notorious Frank Hamilton drifted into town yesterday, and did not waste time in getting into trouble. He was down in the valley about midnight seeing the sights, and telephoned for a cab to bring him back to the city. When the cab-man asked for his fare he at once began his old tricks and flourished a knife in a threatening manner. The police were summoned and policemen McDaniel and merchant policeman O'Neill went after him in a business like manner, and soon landed him in jail. He is a "bad" man, an all-around crook, and has been sent to the penitentiary from here a couple of times several years ago. He will not be trifled with by the authorities as he is known so well of old.

In the meantime policeman Dickerson took in a man who was drunk in an alley, and who was known as Caspar Werkes.

Funeral of Maurice O'Connor.

The funeral of Maurice O'Connor occurred from his late residence in Brown township yesterday afternoon. The service was not held at St. Benard's church as was intended, on account of the unavoidable absence of Father Dempsey. The interment was at Calvary cemetery.

Reported Elopement.

It was reported on the street last night that a young couple from this city had eloped to Indianapolis. But as there was no reason why they should do so, and as there was no stir among the "folks" nor in police circles we are inclined to regard the rumor as a fabrication.

To Delay is Death.

Would Covington hold hard and fast the position, so long maintained, there are improvements and reforms like her sister towns, she must make. Shall we not make them now?—Covington Republican.
