YOU ARE A DEMOCRAT
and, of course, want a democratic newspaper. The Chicago Dispatch is the great democratic weekly newspaper of the country. It advocates the re-election of the platform and the renomination of William Jennings Bryan.

There has never been a political campaign that will equal in importance that of the one to be fought next year. The republican party, backed by the money power of this country and Europe, is alert and aggressive. Flushed with the victory of three years ago it will seek by every means in its power to maintain its supremacy.

Democrats must be up and doing. They must wage an unceasing war upon their enemies. In no better and more effective way can this be done than by the circulation of good, sound democratic newspapers. The publisher of the Chicago Dispatch, will send to every new subscriber for three months a copy of the Chicago Dispatch for ten cents. If you are not already taking this great political weekly, send in ten cents at once. You should not only do this yourself but you should induce all your friends to join with you. By a little effort you can easily raise a club of ten or twenty subscribers.

The Chicago Dispatch is endorsed by William Jennings Bryan and other democratic leaders.

SELECTIONS

A RUSH TO VICTORY.

Colonel Roosevelt Tells of His Order to Charge Up Kettle Hill.

I spoke to the captain in command of the rear platoons, saying that I had been ordered to support the regulars in the attack upon the hills and that in my judgment we could not take these hills by firing at them and that we must rush them. He answered that his orders were to keep his men lying where they were and that he could not charge without orders. I asked where the colonel was, and as he was not in sight said, "Then I am the ranking officer here, and I give the order to charge"—for I did not want to keep the men longer in the open, suffering under a fire which they could not effectively return.

Naturally the captain hesitated to obey this order when no word had been received from his own colonel. So I said, "Then let my men through, sir," and rode on through the lines, followed by the grinning rough riders, whose attention had been wholly taken off the Spanish bullets, partly by my dialogue with the regulars and partly by the language I had been using to themselves as I got the lines forward, for I had been joking with them and swearing at others, as the exigencies of the case seemed to demand.

When we started to go through, however, it proved too much for the regulars, and they jumped up and came along, their officers and troops mingling with mine, all being delighted at the chance. When I got to where the head of the left wing of the Ninth was lying, through the courtesy of Lieutenant Hartwick, two of whose colored troopers threw down the fence, I was enabled to get back into the lane, at the same time waving my hat and giving the order to charge the hill on our right front.

Out of my sight, over on the right, Captains McBlain and Taylor of the Ninth made up their minds independently to charge at just about this time, and at almost the same moment Colonels Carroll and Hamilton, who were off, I believe, to my left, where we could see neither them nor their men, gave the order to advance. But of all this I knew nothing at the time. The whole line, tired of waiting and eager to close with the enemy, was straining to go forward, and it seems that different parts slipped the leash at almost the same moment.—"The Rough Riders," by Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, in Scribner's.

Sixteen Scorpion Bites.

Winfield S. Keyes, a son of the late General Keyes, and a mining engineer of San Francisco, has just recovered from a peculiar case of poisoning. Several weeks ago he was in Mexico examining some mining properties. The day before he was ready to return to San Francisco he was bitten 16 times on the right leg between the knee and the ankle. He was not long in ascertaining that he had been bitten by an unusually large scorpion. The bites were little red spots at first, but they grew in size and increased in pain while he was hurriedly en route to San Francisco for treatment. When he arrived, his leg was fearfully swollen. The bites had become large red and yellow boils, and the pain was almost unbearable. The physicians said that if proper treatment had been delayed a day longer he would never have recovered. As it was, they had a very hard time bringing him through.

Our State Volunteers.

The London correspondent of the New York Mail and Express writes that English people are intensely interested in the "state" titles given to the American regiments composing our army in the Philippines. The dispatches talk about Nebraska vanguards, and the flank movements of the Idaho's, and the charges of the Minnegotas and Dakotas, and the gallantry displayed by the Montanas and the Colorados, and at the same time are not forgetful of the praise due to the regiments entitled Kansas, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

Three Rows of Human Eyes.

Mrs. William E. Curtis of Chicago is the possessor of a unique necklace which she values for old times' sake. It is composed of three rows of human eyes in a perfect state of preservation, polished and mounted in gold. The eyes were procured from Peru, where the dead are buried in a sitting posture, and the hot, dry air preserves them more effectively than any embalming fluid. A whole mummy can be obtained there for about $5, and the eyes alone are much cheaper. Polished and mounted they make an odd ornament indeed.

Over the Jordan.

A lattice-work bridge now spans the river Jordan, near the point where the children of Israel are said to have crossed into the promised land. Hither to it has been difficult to cross the river at this place, owing to the bad condition of the east bank. The bridge has doors at each end which can be locked, thus barring ingress.

To Relieve Tired Eyes.

A Glasgow journalist claims to have discovered a novel method to relieve the strain on tired eyes. This was secured by placing several strips of different colored paper near his inkstand so that every time he reached for ink his eye fell on them. Just why looking at different colors at once rested his eyes is not explained.

Keeping Up Appearances.

A "licensed pawnbroker" who does a great deal of work in the west end of London lately gave to the writer particulars of a strange sort of plying that has become common of late and that often defeats men of his kind.

Backing up his statement with actual names and dates, he said:

"A bailiff and I enter a showy flat, say, and my accustomed eye at once falls on a handsome or at least a pretentious piano. I say to myself that this piano will sell for what I require. I go to it, but find that it is locked. I ask for the key, and when this is reluctantly produced I find that there is in reality nothing but a case. All the inside of the instrument is gone. The fact is that people in difficulties who still want to keep up appearances can borrow money, while still apparently retaining their piano, by allowing the lenders to take away the main part, or inside, of the instrument. One man in the west end in particular does a considerable business by lending money on pianos in this way.

"I suppose that when visitors want to play on an instrument of this kind the host pleads that the key is lost. Anyhow I have in my own business had quite 50 examples of gutted pianos during the last two years, and I never mark a piano down in an inventory now till I have closely examined it."—London Answers.

A Neighing Cock.

Camden says the Thames was once called the Cockney, and therefore a cockney means simply one who lives on the banks of the Thames. Wedgewood says a cockney, or cockerney, is one pampered by city indulgence, in contradistinction to rustics hardened by outdoor work. There is, however, a legend, almost too good to be true—namely, that a Londoner who had never before slept out of sound of Bow Bells had occasion to go into the country and was detained all night.

He was much disturbed by the lowing of the cattle, the grunting of the pigs and other sounds of country life, which he could not understand, and in particular he was frightened by the crowing of the cock. In the morning, in response to the farmer's inquiries, he said the sound of the wild beasts had kept him awake. Just at that moment the cock crowed again, and the Londoner said: "That's the one! He's been neighing like that for hours!" Since then Londoners have been called cock-neighs, or cockneys.

Learning the Truth.

A school inspector was examining a class in grammar and trying to explain the relations of adjectives and nouns by a telling example.

"Now, for instance," said he, "what am I?"

That was an easy question, and all the children shouted, "A man!" and then looked around triumphantly, as much as to say, "Ask another."

"Yes. But what else?" said the inspector.

This was not so easy, but after a pause a boy ventured to suggest, "A little man."

"Yes, but there is something more than that."

This was a poser for the youngsters, but after a moment's puzzled silence an infant phenomenon almost leaped from his seat in his eagerness and cried to the inspector:

"Please, sir, I know—an ugly little man!"

Drummond Was on Top.

Professor Henry Drummond had a boyish spirit when a man, and at the age of 26 invented a game for some friends at a country house one rainy evening. He said "They play it in America with bowie knives. Four men are locked in a dark room, each in a corner, and the survivor wins. We'll do without the knives; the door and the shutters shall be shut, each of us will stand in a corner, and the first who gets on another man's back will be the winner."

Dr. Smith was in the game, and he says it was the most exciting one he ever played. "Nobody stirred from his corner for 20 minutes. Then I heard a scuffle between two of the others, felt my way to find myself on both of them, when Drummond pounced on me, and we all rolled in a heap, he, of course, on top, as he always was."

The English For Canaille.

During the Tichborne trial, where Mr. Justice Hawkins was opposed by Dr. Kenealy, in the course of a discussion whether equivalent terms could be found in English for French words, and vice versa, Mr. Hawkins was asked whether he thought the word canaille could be adequately rendered in our language. He answered without a moment's hesitation, "Yes, Kenealy"—Green Bag.

Inferiority of Nature.

Visitor (at art store)—Here is a family group, now, that illustrates what I was talking about a moment ago. The figures are correctly enough drawn, but so utterly stiff and unnatural that I can't imagine where the artist got his idea.

Dealer—My dear young lady, that is not a painting. It is a colored photograph from life.—Chicago Tribune.

What He Opened On.

"Brothers and sisters," began the old parson, "I shall not choose any particular text this morning, but shall preach from where I open the book, and, no matter where, I shall find the wrath that is to come upon the wicked, who will be cut off when they have shuffled off this mortal coil. It is now open, and—"

Here the parson was interrupted by a deacon who had been asleep, and hearing the words open, cut and shuffle, forgot himself and cried out, "It's yours; what did you open on?"

The surprise of the good man in the pulpit was great, but the deacon collapsed when the reply came, "It is opened on Kings."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Sun's Motion.

An astronomical fact now as formerly causing no little perplexity to some is that the sun's motion—which unquestionably and indisputably is extremely quick—does not change the relative position of the solar system to the fixed stars and the constellations more than it actually does, and there are some who on this account are inclined to doubt the actual motion of the sun in space.

The investigations of astronomers have nevertheless established one thing as certain—namely, that the sun moves through space at a great speed—estimated by some scientists at 16 miles a second—carrying all the planets, satellites and other cosmical bodies along with it, but this motion of the vast luminary, while affecting, of course the real motion of the planets in space, does not in even the slightest degree affect the relative motion of sun and planets.

Even under the supposition of so great a rate as 16 miles in one second, this relative position of the sun to the fixed stars would, astronomers declare, be hardly perceptible in a century, on account of the almost inconceivable distance of the latter—the conclusion being, therefore, that many thousands of years must pass before the sun's proper motion in space can change the configuration of the star groups.

The Machete.

As a defensive weapon the value of the machete is small. Even its offensive effect depends less on the weapon itself than on the continual and skillful usage made of it by the Cuban peasant from his earlier age, which imparts a peculiar training to the muscles of the wrist and arm of the operator. The consequence of this skill is that when ever a quarrel occurs between two "guajeros" or "moneros" they settle the matter with their machetes as courageously and tenaciously as two game cocks, and generally both parties are seriously injured for life or are killed on the spot.

Owing to this fact and to the natural kindly disposition of the Cuban peasants, they are not a quarrelsome people and respect everybody, to be equally respected. With the machete a few curious accessories are used. The principal are a thin strip of leather closely tied to the right wrist, a small round piece of grinding stone to sharpen the edge of the tool, and whenever the machete is employed to cut down the thorny beath of tropical vegetation a small branch of special shape, called the "garabato," is used to hold the beath and to rapid work without being injured by thorns.—Island of Cuba Magazine.

The Resemblance.

He was the son of a worthy citizen and had just returned from college. His father was a brusque, matter of fact man, who had no liking for anything pronounced, and he noticed with sorrow that his son returned with the latest thing in collars and various other insignia of fashion. The old gentleman surveyed him critically when he appeared in his office and then blurted out:

"Young man, you look like an idiot!" Just at that moment, and before the young man had time to make a fitting reply, a friend walked in.

"Why, hello, Billy! Have you returned?" he asked. "Dear me, how much you resemble your father!"

"So he has been telling me," replied Billy.

And from that day to this the old gentleman has had no fault to find with his son.

Alone I wait in the old beech-wood,
At our trust by the ruined mill,
And the only sound that greets my ear
Is the note of the whippoorwill.

The silent shades of the August eve
O'er the shadowed ruins fall,
But the only sound that comes to me
Is the whippoorwill's sweet call.

I wait in vain for a sound more sweet,
A note that is far more dear,
'Tis a signal which says one I love is high,
A whistle soft and clear.

The fireflies gleam in the old beech-wood,
Where I wait by the ruined mill,
But naught I hear in the silent night
Save the lonely whippoorwill.

—Rose VanB. Speece.

AFGHANISTAN VENDETTAS.

How Deadly Blood Feuds Are Waged in the Khyber Pass.

During the time I have been in India, writes a soldier correspondent, the most interesting period was when I was stationed on duty for three months some years back in Landikotal, on the Afghanistan side of the far famed Khyber pass. Here I was able to forcibly realize the meaning of "vendetta," as the characteristic blood feuds of the Afirid are quaint and interesting.

The pass itself is a neutral zone between India and Afghanistan, but we exercise our dominion over the road that winds its way for 21 miles through the narrow valley. Here, as elsewhere in Afghanistan, blood feuds are a recognized institution among the tribes and last through generations, the dishonor resting with that family who last suffered from some defeat or treacherous murder.

When an encounter occurs between two tribes occupying settlements on opposite sides of the road mentioned, one or other must cross it before commencing firing, as firing across the road is prohibited, but on either side they can exercise their friendly feelings toward each other without hindrance.

But still quaint is it when the feudists are between close neighbors. Each family, with near relations, occupies a number of mud huts, enclosed in a square surrounded by a thick, high wall of mud, stone and wood. At one corner of these squares is built a watch tower 80 feet high, where the family marks man takes his position and playfully picks off any unfortunate who shows himself in the next square. Constitutionals are therefore confined on both sides and limited to nightly prowls.—Scand Magazine.
