THEY ARE GOOD FELLOWS

When we read newspapers of neighboring cities and see the bickering and backbiting, and crimination and recrimination going on there, it is easy to understand why Rochester is so much admired by all who visit us. There are a few trouble makers in Rochester, but they are so few in comparison with the progressive, peace loving, populace that ours is a city remarkably far from ill-feeling. Of course we have here and there a tight wad who opposes every public step that costs a cent; we have here and there an envious soul that wants to fight every man who tries to get on in the world and succeeds. We have a few who would strike down every enterprise that helps the town if it makes any money for its owner; we have about one in every hundred who would have streets and houses ramshackle, we have an occasional saloon keeper who would rather violate the law than not, and we have some gossips who delight in scandal talk, but notwithstanding these few unpleasant Rochester is the most hospitable and circumspect town to be found hereabout. The great majority gets along happily and at peace with all the world and that is why Rochester is as pleasantly remembered by those who have been within its genial precincts. Let us all keep on being good fellows.—Rochester Sentinel.

COURT HOUSE NEWS

A new case filed today was entitled Ella D. Bell vs. Harry E. Bell, divorce. The parties were married May 12, 1896, and lived together until January 2, 1899. Alimony in the sum of $2,000, the custody of Margaret, the only child and $200 per year for her support are asked. C. J. Lutz appears for the plaintiff.

The county commissioners were in special session for a short time Wednesday, signing up the bonds issued for the dredging of the Salamonie river. The total issue, amounting to $22,000, were sold a few days ago, by county treasurer Lawrence Hayes, to contractor Ed Roedde.—Portland Commercial-Review.

The Pictorium presents a new show this evening entitled "A Race for a Son-in-Law." These pictures are of a comic nature and show the many peculiar incidents in relation to a mother trying to secure a husband for her daughter. If you want to laugh and grow fat now is the opportunity. These pictures will be shown but one night, and entire change will be had tomorrow evening.

The county commissioners, Martin Laughlin, William Miller and David Werling, County Attorney, Clark J. Lutz, County Auditor C. D. Lewton, County Treasurer John F. Lachot and County Surveyor Levi Baumgartner made an expedition to Linn Grove on Wednesday to inspect the new river bridge and see what progress the builders are making. They also stopped in Berne and shook hands with friends.—Berne Witness.

The local management has secured the strong Rockford, Ohio, team for Sunday's attraction and a contest of no mean ability will be pulled off. The Rockford team comes strengthened by the presence of Foley, shortstop of the late Van Wert team and other stars and they will endeavor to take the locals into camp. Several new faces will be seen on the local team and a hot contest is promised the fans. Come out and enjoy yourself.

SPECIAL MEETING

Traction Line Stockholders in Session

IN SESSION THIS AFTERNOON

The Extension of Their Lines is the Object of the Special Meeting.

The stockholders of the Fort Wayne and Springfield interurban railway this afternoon were busily interested in a special meeting called by President W. H. Flederjohann for the purpose of talking over the extension of the line south to Celina. A large crowd of local and foreign stockholders were present, who were first entertained by an address from J. H. Koenig, chief counsel of the line who stated to them the object of the meeting and also explained the workings of the line up to the present time. The stockholders if possible are to determine upon two routes that now seem the most practical to the management the one route being through Willshire to Celina, and the other through Berne, Geneva, Portland, thence across the country to Celina, and before the meeting adjourns it is expected that the new proposed route will be determined. This is a matter of vital importance to the company and they desire to make no mistake in choosing the route as both of them lay through thickly populated country and mean much to the company. The business of the meeting will not close until late this evening and what the stockholders do in this will be told in tomorrow's issue.

THE POSTAL CARD CRAZE.

Some Estimate of How the Souvenir Business Grows.

Three years ago souvenir or picture postal cards were on sale in about one hundred stores and shops in the United States. Today they may be had in eighty thousand different places. What was originally a fad has become a great business. The picture postal card flourished for years on the continent. Every small town or inn had a pretty souvenir of this kind, while, in the big cities, every place of interest was reproduced on a postal. Then the idea struck the United States. The eastern cities took it up. Now it has spread to almost every village. Some idea of the extent of the business may be gained when it is stated that a man who has a booth at a seaside resort near New York sells forty-five dollars' worth of postal cards a day. It is estimated that as much as two hundred thousand dollars a day is spent for picture postal cards in the United States.

So large is the number of picture postal cards passing through the mails every day that special regulations have been adopted for them. It was only recently that permission was given to write a message on the address side. It is interesting to add in this connection that the official estimate of the number of souvenir postal cards passing through the British postoffices last year was five hundred million. The value placed on these cards was estimated at five million dollars. The revenue to the various governments from postage on souvenir cards approximates millions.

So widespread is the interest in these cards that what is called a postal-card congress is held every year at Leipzig, Germany. Like the stamp collectors, the card faddists have a paper. The sale of specially-made albums for souvenir postal cards has become something of an industry, too. People trade postal as they trade stamps and rare coins.
