WATSON IS FOR ANY OLD THING

Immediately after the passage of the county local option law by the special session of the legislature, James P. a man whose chief recommendation is Godrich, chairman of the Republican that he is a practical politician. Indiana committee announced rather pendence in thought and action is what glibly that local option as an issue was needed, and such a man is Thomas now out of the campaign. When R. Marshall. He is brilliant, of high Thomas R. Marshall, commenting on mind and pure thought. He has no the Godrich declaration, intimated that alliance with any one, and as governor in that event it might be possible to of Indiana, he would be governor in discuss a few of the issues on their fact as well as in name. Such a government, then Mr. Goodrich got scared error can be trusted and no interest and placed county local option again no matter what that interest may be.

in the race. James E. Watson so discusses it—where it is popular—and where it is not, he sort 'er winks at the other eye. Like all other Republican leaders except Governor Hanly, he has no sympathy with the law. He believes it is good campaign thunder, and for this purpose he is working it to the limit. At times he really grows eloquent in its defense, but any one that knows Jim Watson, knows that he can grow passionately eloquent on a very small provocation. He is at his best, however, when "out with the boys" and when the cares of defending Prohibition is the farthest from his thoughts. Some great campaign stories are told on Jim, the assumed Prohibition, but in reality the Republican candidate for governor of Indiana. We assume that most of these stories should be taken with a dose of salt, but the public record of Mr. Watson is so well known that the voters of the state will really ascribe much truth to them. He has wobbled on so many public questions, been so weak and vacillating on others, in fact had so many entangling alliances in which the people expected much and received but little, that it is hard to restore confidence in Jim. The American people are much the same. They expect their public men to be strong, sturdy and reliant. They do not expect them to always agree with their own ideas, but they do expect them to stand firm to their own convictions and to defend them, sincerely and honestly. Jim Watson is a sort of a hocus pocus politician—we will not say statesman. He carries all sorts of patent applied for and made to order opinions. He is what the carbuncle politician calls foxy. In his smooth and oily way he finds out the sentiments of a community or what is uppermost in the mind of a particular individual and he is Johnny on the spot with this particular pleasing doctrine. When time for action comes, he has expressed forty different views, and force compels him to act contrary to thirty-nine of those expressed views. That is Jim Watson. The story is not new. It is as he is generally known throughout the length and breadth of Indiana. That being true, his devotion to prohibition and temperance is not taken as a serious asset in his campaign for governor. What he says and what he does is so separate and distinct that no connection is possible. Such a man at the head of our state government is not a pleasing thought. Indiana is a great state. Her resources are large, and her industries and state institutions are important. Too important to place at the head of the state government a man whose chief recommendation is Godrich, chairman of the Republican that he is a practical politician. Indiana committee announced rather pendence in thought and action is what glibly that local option as an issue was needed, and such a man is Thomas now out of the campaign. When R. Marshall. He is brilliant, of high Thomas R. Marshall, commenting on mind and pure thought. He has no the Godrich declaration, intimated that alliance with any one, and as governor in that event it might be possible to of Indiana, he would be governor in discuss a few of the issues on their fact as well as in name. Such a government, then Mr. Goodrich got scared error can be trusted and no interest and placed county local option again no matter what that interest may be.

Thomas R. Marshall! How that name should inspire every Democrat. It should inspire him not alone as to his own duty, but it should inspire him to action and to work. Your neighbor and your neighbor's neighbor should be importuned to help in the great work of placing at the head of our state government a man of high ideals and a clean and wholesome purpose. There are no strings tied to Thomas R. Marshall. His appeal is the appeal of independence itself, and should be heeded by every Democrat—and Republican as well.

The campaign speeches of Judges O'Rourke and Erwin last evening were listened to by a large and attentive audience. The issues as discussed were plainly presented, and now it is hard to understand how any one can refuse to support that Christian gentleman and champion of the common people. It is hard to understand how any one can refuse to support that independent but brilliant Democratic candidate for governor. We do not believe there will be many. The people seem to be of one mind this year, and the duty of the hour is for every Democrat to work for the success of his party tickets.

It is true that the money of the country is controlled by the banks of New York and Wall street. That being true, it is little wonder that they oppose the guaranty of bank deposits. They oppose it and proclaim that such a governmental policy will prove ruinous to the business interests of the country. But it won't. It will cut off a few of the holes where New York's "undesirable citizens" have been enjoying special privileges, that's all. It will make the country bank as stable and reliable as the New York bank. That is what hurts them. They want these special privileges. They want the government to pay them for having the people to pay them again. Bank guarantee insures the depositors, the little ones as well as the big ones, the poor ones as well as the rich ones. Who objects to safety? Is that anarchy and against the ideals of good citizenship?

GOOD SPEECHES

Were Delivered by Hons.
Edward O'Rourke and
R. K. Erwin

TO LARGE CROWD

Who Listened Attentively
for Two Hours to the Eloquent Speakers

A crowd that comfortably filled the court room heard the issues of the day ably and thoroughly discussed last evening by Judge Edward O'Rourke and Judge R. K. Erwin, of Fort Wayne. Chairman Gallogly presided and after a song or two by the glee club, introduced Judge O'Rourke, who spoke for an hour, in his interesting and capable way, touching first on the splendid traits of character of the Democratic candidate, W. J. Bryan, who he proved was honest, sincere, fearless and of ability. He then dwelt upon the revision of the tariff, the publicity of the campaign funds, the bank guarantee and other important features of the Democratic platform. He was listened to attentively throughout. Judge Erwin followed in one of the best campaign speeches ever heard in Decatur, and the audience cheered him almost every sentence and when he tried to close cried "go on," "give us some more." He criticized the Republican administration, state and national for the enormous increase in expenses, which more than doubles that of the last Democratic administration, fourteen years ago. Judge Erwin also explained the bank guarantee plank of the platform and kept the crowd in a good humor while pouring in the hot shots. Don't fail to hear Adair tomorrow evening.

COURTHOUSE NEWS

"THE QUEEN OF THE ROCKIES"
Splendid Performance at Opera House
Friday Night
Unlike many of the melodramatic offerings of the day, "The Queen of the Rockies" has a strong plot, consistently worked out by a cast of twenty clever people and the great jumping horse "Jess." In stage settings that are at once unique, splendidly beautiful and of original treatment. It is a play full of mystery and romance of the golden west. The play carries one through a series of exciting acts and scenes, its weirdness startles, the scene display and pretty costumes pleases the eye, and the comedy is of that effervescent kind, stirring up the bubbles of fun and lending a delightful charm to the performance. This great attraction will appear here for only one night at Bosse's opera house Friday, October 16.

A SHORT SESSION

Defenders Overruled in Two Cases and an Answer Was Filed

This morning's session of court was the quietest, so far this term and was over in half an hour. Court news will likely be scarce from now on until after election.

David E. Scott vs. L. A. Graham, suit for an accounting, demurred to complaint, overruled, to which ruling defendant excepts.

Eurode Dry Goods Co. vs. Frederick Schaefer, suit on account, demurred overruled; answer filed, general denial. The defendant also filed twenty interrogatories which plaintiff is ordered to answer within ten days.

P. B. Dykeman, has been granted a hunter's license, good for one year from date.

Joseph W. Smith, executer of the Polly Steele will, filed final report, notice being for October 31.

Orion S. Fortney et al has transferred to Sarah A. Tindall, a tract of land in St. Marys township, for $800.

ARE YOU A BOOSTER

If So Join the Crowd in Patronizing the Home Cigar Makers

THE REASONS WHY

They Are as Much Deserving of the Patronage as the Merchants

There are few, if any, Decatur people who do not believe in patronizing home industry. It is a characteristic so essential to a progressive people and if the many who believe in this, would themselves adhere strictly to the rule, Decatur would advance as she has never done before. The home dry goods merchants, hardware merchants, shoe sellers, clothing men, harness manufacturers and in fact the representatives of all lines merit the patronage of the people. To a large extent they get it, and we suggest that these merchants, to the man, patronize home cigar makers and thus practice what they preach.

The various manufacturers of home cigars are placing on the market cigars that will compete with any of the foreign, in fact they are better. Why should not they be? The large cigar manufacturing establishments in the cities buy their tobacco of the same firms that the Decatur manufacturers

do, and while it is true that in buying large quantities of tobacco, they get better prices, they are at the big expense of paying the salaries of their traveling salesmen, who represent them on the road. If it is right to buy from home merchants and it is right to buy home cigars and not only this, but the merchants should do as is done in Bluffton and Fort Wayne, and that is,

if a man asks for a cigar, give him a home cigar and only change at his request. The money made by Decatur cigar makers is spent at home.

They patronize the clothier, grocer,

jeweler, shoe seller, dry goods merchants, butcher and in return the merchants should make themselves an example as a true advocate of home

industry by smoking home cigars.

It will mean much for the citizenship of Decatur. The place to smoke home cigars is Decatur; the time, now and always henceforth. Begin today and join the boosters or take off your regalia and quit preaching home trade.
