POST MORTEM

"I was defeated wholly on the question of local option. The liquor republicans were more in favor of liquor than they were in favor of their party. The temperance democrats, on the other hand were democrats before they were temperance people. The great majority of prohibitionists care nothing about temperance, their only object being to defeat republican party, and they voted their ticket. Some temperance democrats voted for me, and those prohibitionists who really cared anything about temperance voted in the same way. The majority of the people, however, have said at the ballot boxes that they were not in favor of county local option, and on that question I was beaten."—James E. Watson.

Now, that sounds like the same old mush we heard during the campaign. At that time, Mr. Watson shed many briny tears over the ruined waste that was overshadowing this great state, because of our liquor laws. That is, he put this sort of a face on the question in public, and then in private he would tell "the boys" that as governor he would not hurt their feelings. What few people that were not on to his light and fantastic curves before the campaign opened, did get onto him before the campaign closed, and they refused to turn over their confidences without a safe and reliable guarantee. He could not supply the bond. Governor Hanly signed as one of the necessary sureties, but the people refused to accept him unless he also put up a bond. There you were. The result demonstrates that it pays to be on the square, in politics and public life, as well as in everything else. Jim's life and public record in congress does not read like the biography of a hardshell prolibitionist. In fact it gives the snap away. The voters, whether they were as Jim designates them—temperance Democrats or whiskey Republicans—listened to his high class oratory, collected a few of his salt stained tears as souvenirs, and then reserved their ballot for Tom Marshall. They did it more for the reason that Tom Marshall sailed under no false colors, and that is what counts, after all.

Jim, that is Jim Watson, should revise his after the election post-mortem. The burden of it is that the people have spoken against county local option. We do not believe it. They may have spoken against the manner and method in which Governor Hanly served it to them, but we seriously doubt that they voted against county option. People are not in the habit of speaking against something that they know not of. County option is an unknown, an untried commodity in Indiana. We have the law, that's all. The majority of people are willing to try any remedy before relegating it to the scrap heap. Thus it is with county local option. We have the law, and it is worthy of a fair and impartial trial.

The defeated candidate for governor is like the rest of the politicians of his party. They want no issues or elements that do not glitter with the elements of success at the polls. It is policy not principle with them. They want no planks in their platform that fails to allure the church, the business man and the brewery, and if there is any way for a pig to climb a greased pole, they will have them.

GENEVA ITEMS.

Next Monday Mr. Bert Reddout will leave Geneva for Mesa, Arizona, where he will be employed in a supply store furnishing implements and materials for the use of the government in the great irrigating plant that is in progress of construction there. Bert will be "at home" in the business, in which he had large and responsible experience in the store of the National Supply Company in Geneva, until it was sold last fall to another company. But Bert will be far, far from home to his many friends here, who will regret beyond all expression his removal from Geneva. Mr. Reddout is just one of those men who will be missed by the hundreds that have had dealings with him in the past, and the town can ill afford to lose him. And what renders it all the worse for the town is that his family, so prominent and useful in all good things in the community, will follow him to his new home in the early spring.

Mr. Charles P. Borden is fast slipping away from all that is of this life. Having been in failing health for several months past, he has now reached the stage where he can no longer leave the house, and can scarcely walk from room to room. Mr. Borden has been a daily figure on our streets in the years past, and he will be missed when the end, that cannot be far off, takes place. In his sickness he has the sympathy of many, many friends. Dr. Wright, dentist, is in high glee, his wife having presented him with two baby boys this morning. The doctor will be kept busy buying the cigars. Many are the congratulations to him and his wife on advent of the "boys" in the home.

The candidates for treasurer of Ohio are still claiming the election and the official vote has not yet been announced. Now the republican candidate claims that an error of nearly 5,000 was made in Cuyahoga county and that if this is corrected he will be elected by 700. The democratic candidate claims that with that credit he is still the treasurer by 1,500. We thought Indiana was slow with the official count.

CIRCULATE PETITIONS

They Will Present Them at the Next Session of Commissioners' Court

Richmond, Ind., Nov. 21.—At a mass meeting of temperance people, held yesterday afternoon in the Pythian temple, it was decided to begin at once the circulation of petitions asking the board of Wayne county commissioners to call a special election to decide whether the county shall be "wet" or "dry" for two years. A few persons present held the opinion that it might be unwise to bring the question to issue until after the next session of the general assembly, but there was no opposition offered to the plan to begin the crusade immediately. Petitions were sent today into every township in the county, and a number of prominent citizens of Richmond will circulate them among the city wards. It is thought that enough signers will be obtained within the next two weeks, and if this is accomplished, the petitions will be presented at the regular session on December 7. The saloon men have anticipated the action of the temperance people and are prepared to make a hard fight. The statute provides that the voting shall be done at the usual voting places. This is taken to mean that Wayne county must have sixty-four polling places, the number used at the recent general election. The commissioners believe that forty polling places at the outside would be sufficient, and thus the expense could be reduced. The estimate of the cost of the special election is $3,000.

FAILED TO GREET PRINCE.

Belgrade, Servia, Nov. 20.—A chance meeting at the entrance of the palace today between Crown Prince George and the Austro-Hungarian minister, Count Forgach, led to an awkward incident, of which more is expected to be heard. Count Forgach, whether intentionally or not, omitted to greet Prince George. The face of the heir apparent to the Serbian throne flushed and he said with some warmth: "Perhaps you do not recognize me, Count?" Count Forgach turned and tendered his excuses, but the crown prince without a word wheeled on his heel, ignoring the minister's apologies.
