THE INAUGURAL

ADDRESS AND MESSAGE

The inaugural address to his constituency—the people of Indiana—and his message to the members of the general assembly, is but truly characteristic of Governor Marshall. Both are scholarly arguments of the well trained mind; the mind of the able and conscientious lawyer, and the mind of the patriotic and loyal citizen. He speaks much of good government and the responsibilities and duties devolving alike upon the people and those clothed with civil, military executive authority. He does not sermonize but he does give expression to many plain truths; truths all should hear and heed.

To the legislators themselves he admonishes a strict adherence to the doctrines of the fathers. Asks them to represent their electorate and to spurn personal gain and reward, many times the inducements offered by those seeking favors of law for special interests. The governor says that a faithful discharge of duty is the greatest compensation any legislator can receive. And how true.

Economy is written all through the message, and even can be seen to stand out in bold relief between the lines. He wants every superfluous office, and every superfluous commission which fails to produce a fair recompense to the state, abolished. And he likewise wants every superfluous clerkship dropped from the payroll of the state. In short, he wants every one in official place to earn the salary he gets; he wants economy to prevail in official life in Indiana. To bring about such a happy condition an expert examination is suggested, in which the needs and requirements of every office in the state house can be reported upon. Then he wants every officer to be placed upon a salary and the old school of fees and graft forever relegated to the antiquated past. He wants no officer to serve the people and a political party, using the time and money of the first to help any favored political few. Instead of a contingent fund of $59,000 he asks for one of $5,000 and then he asks that the secretary of the state board of health and the adjutant general be authorized to act with him, if the necessity occurred for the spending of any of it. He wants the people's rights protected in elections and in the returns of elections. He wants a primary election law where everyone can register their preferences for every office including United States senator. He wants the metropolitan police law repealed, the graft taken out of the office of oil inspector, the cities and towns law amended, the arbitrary authority now given city councils in the matter of street improvements annulled so that a majority of the property owners along any proposed street improvement shall have rights and those rights respected. He believes the consolidation of many board and commissions would prove beneficial, and he does not believe that the state should protect and pay for the treatment of insane, tubercular and epileptic patients, when the one treated can well afford to pay it himself.

Such briefly is the message. It shows thought and a wide knowledge of all the affairs of state. It shows more than that. It shows an honest conception of the high duties of the chief executive of the great state of Indiana. It shows, too, that during the next four years a statesman of high and noble character, will preside over the destinies of the people in this, the greatest state in the union. Here's to Governor Marshall.

HAS A

NEW VISION

Perhaps it was a mistake that county option was made a party issue. A good many people, Republican and Democratic, option and anti-option, believe so; and they may be right. There is this to be said, however, that making it a party issue at least resulted in bringing county option to pass. It is on the statute books, and there it will remain. There is more chance in Indiana today for further advance in liquor legislation than for a retreat. That is the fact, and it may as well be faced.

The exhaustive analysis of the liquor law situation in the legislature which appeared in the news columns of The Star yesterday suggests the trip very much and says he likes the country fine. He states that there are excellent opportunities there for young men, giving as an example a gentleman who, a few years ago purchased twelve hundred acres of land for four dollars per acre and is now offered nineteen dollars for it. The crops are invariably good in Montana. A week ago yesterday Mr. Schirmeyer drove to Great Falls, Montana, where he paid a visit to Warren Moses who moved there from Adams county. Mr. Moses is getting along nicely and enjoying the best of health.

The portentous "issues" of politics are often magnified by politicians to a view not shared by the common run of us. The plain people of Indiana will not take an absorbing or excited interest in the expert view that the "verdict" on county option in November instructs the legislature for its repeal.—Indianapolis Star.

SCHIRMAYER HOME

F. M. Schirmeyer Returned Saturday Afternoon from Belt, Montana

HE VISITED MOTHER

Who Was Seriously Ill—She is Very Much Improved at Present

Frank M. Schirmeyer returned Saturday afternoon from Belt, Montana, where for two weeks he was the guest of his aged mother, who was seriously ill. After the arrival of Mr. Schirmeyer at the home of his mother a noted improvement in her condition was noted, and she gradually improved until, at the time he left for Decatur, she was practically out of danger. Mr. Schirmeyer enjoyed the trip very much and says he likes the country fine. He states that there are excellent opportunities there for young men, giving as an example a gentleman who, a few years ago purchased twelve hundred acres of land for four dollars per acre and is now offered nineteen dollars for it. The crops are invariably good in Montana. A week ago yesterday Mr. Schirmeyer drove to Great Falls, Montana, where he paid a visit to Warren Moses who moved there from Adams county. Mr. Moses is getting along nicely and enjoying the best of health.

The Tower of Famine. The Torre della Fame, or Tower of Famine, was noted for its grewsome history. It once stood in Pisa, Italy, but there are now no traces of it. Count Ugolino della Gherardesca, whom Dante immortalized, was the head of the Guelphs, and because of his tyranny and accredited attempts to place his country in bondage he was antagonized and finally conquered by the chief of the Ghibellines, who imprisoned him, with his two sons and two grandsons, in this tower, the slow method of starvation being employed as the manner of their death. The door of the tower was locked and the keys thrown into the Arno.

GEORGE HAHN DEAD

Monroe Township Retired Farmer Has Answered the Call

HE DIED SATURDAY

Was 84 Years of Age—Serious Complication of Ailments

George Washington Hahn, late of Monroe, Indiana, passed away Saturday evening after an illness dating back several years as a result of which he has suffered much pain. Mr. Hahn who was 84 years, two months and twenty days of age at the time of his demise, became afflicted several years ago with a complication of diseases and since then has gradually declined, the infirmities of old age contributing to the case. The deceased who is the father of Mrs. Joseph Ely of this city, was at one time a prosperous farmer in Monroe township and when forced to retire from activity he moved his family to Monroe where the closing chapter of his long life was spent. Surviving are several children who mourn the loss of a loving father. The funeral services will be held from the home tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock and the body will be interred in the Smith cemetery. The decedent was well known by many Decatur people who will regret to hear of his death.

IN CIRCUIT COURT

The Johnloz State Case Was Continued to February 15

OTHER COURT NEWS

Not a Busy Day in the Adams Circuit Court

State vs. Johnloz set for trial today was continued until February 15. The continuance was on account of the absence of Jacob Miller, an important witness, who is reported as being in Michigan. An attachment was issued and it is likely that Mr. Miller will be on deck when case is called next time.

In the case of Achme Tool company vs. Noah A. Loch, a demurrer was filed to the fourth paragraph of answer.

Continental Insurance Company vs. Isaac J. Summers, et al, cause set for the making of issues on January 14.

John S. Bowers vs. Fred Hoffman, defendant defaulted and judgment was taken for $273.31, together with the costs.

The real estate transfers include twenty acres from George Wolfe to Noah Stalter for $1,200; Emaline Stalter to George Wolfe, twenty acres for the same consideration.

A Poet's Breakfast. George Meredith and Rossetti were to take up house together, but it occurred to the former to go and see what the house was like first. He arrived at noon. Rossetti was not up. But on the table was his breakfast—six eggs on as many slices of bacon. The repast had been waiting some time. The eggs were draining out their lifeblood on the coagulating bacon. Rossetti came in in a dressing gown otherwise just as he had got out of bed. He sat down and "devoured the plat like an ogre." Meredith sent him a check for the quarter's rent next day, but he and the poet never kept house together.

WILL WAGER $100.

Local Bowling Club Will Play Fort Wayne Elks

WEDNESDAY NIGHT

They Will Play for a Side Bet of 100

Official announcement comes from Tom Peterson, manager of the Palace bowling alleys to the effect that the Elk's bowling club of Fort Wayne, will come to Decatur Wednesday night and play the local club for a purse of $100. The local team will be selected from the following list: Guy Dorwin, Tom Peterson, C. O. Francis, D. E. Studabaker, Fred Vaughn, Mar-nard Frisinger and William Berling. It will be remembered that the locals were defeated by the Summit city team a few weeks ago by the small margin of twenty-nine pins, and they now are after revenge. The very best players of the above mentioned list will be selected to do battle with the Fort Wayne lads and if they are beaten the opponents will know they have been in a game. Without doubt the bowling alley will be taxed to its capacity on Wednesday evening, as the wager of one hundred bucks will cause some little attention.
