moth scene representing the exterior of the Hotel Cecil in London; the second act, a realistic scene depicting the departure of an ocean liner from its pier at Southampton, England, and the third act the Chinese quarter of San Francisco at night, gaily but weirdly illuminated. A production with such an unquestionable reputation that has preceded it here is sure to attract a crowded house, which is already indicated by the large demand for seats.

AN EXCELLENT DRAMATIZATION

The dauntless "Capitola," heroine of the "Hidden Hand," bright, spirited, childlike and innocent, will be played by a promising new actress in the Fred G. Conrad production on the play at the Bosse opera house Wednesday, Oct. 6. There is naturally much interest to see how the new impersonation of Mrs. Southworth's most famous character will compare with the many others. Manager Conrad has secured a good company for the tour of the play this season, and given the excellent dramatization by Eugene Moore the attention it should have.
