WHAT DO REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES STAND FOR

Speaking seriously and getting down to brass tacks and good sound business sense, who is entitled to success in the city election? Is it the candidates who come before the voters with a promise that they will enforce the laws, tolerate no blind tigers, furnish a comprehensive statement of the income and expenditures of the waterworks and electric light plant, reduce the city debt, lower the tax levy, or is it the candidates who make no pledge of any kind. A city election is purely and simply a business proposition. We all like to air our personal grievances, and give our preferences to those we like best, but this is one election when business and business alone should count. The heavy taxpayer knows that he can never get relief until the city debt is at least reduced, and the exorbitant interest charge is wiped off the slate. The heavy taxpayer is no different than the little taxpayer, whose taxes are also burdensome. The business thing to do is to reduce the debt, stop the interest. With the Democratic candidates in this campaign you have this promise. You not only have their promise, but you have the record of the present administration, and this record speaks with even more emphasis than a promise. You all know the condition of the city four years ago, and you also know the condition today. The city debt has been reduced thirty-five thousand dollars during the term of the present council, and thus the interest is stopped for that amount. During the next four years a similar reduction can be made and that means the stopping of the interest on seventy thousand dollars. In the good old days we paid six and eight per cent. interest on all our indebtedness, and six per cent. on seventy thousand is four thousand and two hundred a year. Four years at forty-two hundred dollars a year is in excess of sixteen thousand dollars. Sixteen thousand dollars that does not even represent debt, but simply the privilege of having the debt. Sixteen thousand dollars absolutely burned up, nothing to show for it. Do we want to go back to the good old days, the days when they made debts but did not pay any, or isn't it the business thing to do to continue in office a debt paying council so that relief will some time come, and the burden be lifted. Figure the business side of this election and vote for your own pocketbook.

In its effort to save itself the present city administration has shown a decided willingness to throw mud upon all administrations regardless of their political complexion.—P. L.

P. L. only throws mud one way. No matter how clean a Democrat may be, he gets only mud from P. L., and no matter how dirty a Republican may be, he gets only the white wash can. This is P. L.'s method of reform in this campaign, as it has been his method always. P. L. is a great reformer. He believes in reforming the Democrats out and the Republicans in. Outside of this method he is utterly lost. Let loose of that grouch, P. L.

What improvement was made that was not asked for by the people during this period of lavish improvement? And what improvement was made that did not receive the commendation of the people who are now complaining because it was made.—P. L.

Now, dear reader, if you can figure that out, you are welcome. P. L. admits that there was lavish improvement and he complains because the people are finding fault about the lavishness of the lavish improvement. In this instance we agree with the people, and we believe that they have a right to complain about their money being spent and with never a line of record to show how it was spent, and with no effort to pay the debt they made. It was about the rankest piece of public business ever perpetrated, and we do not blame the people for kicking about it. P. L. simply shows his partisan hand by attempting a defense.

What has become of the money?—P. L.

Well, now, P. L., if you are serious, we suppose that we will have to tell you. Part of it went to pay that order and stop interest for the Fourth street brick crossings, the order being issued by your business council, but which they never paid. Part of it went to pay for the brick crossings on Monroe street, the improvement being made at the same time and in the same way as Fourth street. Three thousand dollars went to pay the Elm street sewer, settlement being made the same way they paid for brick crossing in the good old days. Part of it went to pay court costs in suits brought by employees and supply houses who wanted a settlement of their accounts and which were promised but never made. Thirty-five thousand dollars went to reduce the city debt and stop the outrageous interest charge. The records of the city show this. The city records however, do not show a scratch of the pen for the vast debt placed upon the city for the waterworks plant. And you still prefer the good old days, P. L.

The Democratic candidates pledge themselves to a strict enforcement of all laws, state, corporate and blind tiger. They pledge you an accounting of the receipts and disbursements of the municipal waterworks and electric light plant. They pledge you a reduction in the city debt and a lower tax levy. What do the Republican candidates stand for?

Mr. H. L. Conter, the Democratic candidate for mayor, stands for law enforcement and against the blind tiger. He stands on the Democratic platform with both feet, as do all the candidates on the ticket. They stand also for economy, a reduction in the city debt and a lower tax levy. Where do the Republican candidates stand?

The members of St. Paul's Catholic church in particular and the citizens of Columbia City in general are deeply sensible to the loss they have sustained in the removal of Rev. Anthony M. Ellering from this city. He has been a power for good in this community and is held in the highest esteem for what he is and for what he has accomplished as the spiritual head of the church to which his life is consecrated. Highly educated, thoroughly grounded in the doctrines of his faith, broad minded and liberal in his views, he was well equipped to take up ministerial work from the beginning, but with almost a quarter of a century of active experience in the service and in mingling with people, he has acquired the wisdom and ability which are gained in no other way, and is therefore in position to do more and accomplish more for mankind now than at any time in the past. And this very fact, no doubt, is what led Bishop Alerding to send him into a larger field of activity. Father Ellering has always been deeply interested in the well being of his fellow man, and his kindly and sympathetic nature never fails to respond to those in need or in distress. While he exacts obedience from his parishioners he at the same time exercises compassion for the weak and fallen, and his greatest delight is to make those around him better and happier. It is a trial for him to sever his relations with the people of this city, but he goes believing it is all for the best and with the kindest feeling toward all.—Columbia City Post.

Miss Viola Ullman as Bride this Morning

POPULAR COUPLE

Dinner at Bride's Home,
After Which They Leave for East

St. Marys church furnished a beautiful scene this morning when Miss Viola Ullman became the bride of Mr. Frank Lichtle. Promptly at seven-thirty the wedding march was played and continued until the wedding party reached the altar. They were greeted at the altar steps by Fr. Wilken, who performed the simple, beautiful services. The bride was clothed in white Messaline satin, which was very beautiful. Miss Bertha Ullman, a sister of the bride, was also in white and carried a handsome bouquet of flowers. Mr. Wm. Lichtle a brother of the groom acted as best man and wore the usual black. Immediately after the services the wedding party went to the home of the bride's parents just north of the city, where a sumptuous dinner was served to the near relatives. Miss Ullman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mathias Ullman and has a large number of friends. Mr. Lichtle is also well known, having a wide circle of friends whose best wishes will always be with them. They left this afternoon for several places in the east and will be absent from the city about ten days. Upon their return they will reside at the home of Mr. Lichtle, two miles south of the city.
