J. H. HELLER, Manager.

The record of the republican party this year in the matter of platform utterances is a confusing one. If the coming county convention is to adopt resolutions, and it is a time-honored custom, we trust they will be of a nature that will command themselves to all republicans, and not simply gratify factional feeling.

At the state convention the tariff law and the county local option law were both ignored. At the congressional convention, the tariff law was endorsed, but local option not mentioned for the very good reason that it was not a national issue. Both President Taft and Senator Beveridge were endorsed at both conventions. At the joint senatorial convention, Taft, Beveridge and the local option law were commended and approved. At the joint representative convention the president and senator received endorsement, but reference to the tariff law and local option law was omitted, although the legislative record of Mr. Hammer, (re-nominated,) who voted for the local option law, was commended.

Taken as a whole, the resolutions are open to criticism, not for what they did declare as the principles of the party, but for sins of omission, and lack of uniformity. The tariff law and the county local option law are republican laws, and the republican party must stand or fall by them. The Times doesn't believe that shirking responsibility is good politics, and there should have been something like harmony in all the resolutions adopted, instead of halting phrases when principles and policies are to be advocated and defended in the campaign.—The Huntington Morning Times, Rep.

CARRIED FIRE ARMS

Roy Heller Answers to the Charge of Carrying Concealed Weapons.

HAD SHOT A DOG

Belonging to Samuel Henschen That Ran Out as He Passed on Cycle.

A little dog that ran at him as he rode past the Henschen farm in Kirkland township on his motorcycle Wednesday was the cause of Roy Heller's appearance in the court of Squire Smith Friday evening about 5 o'clock to answer to the charge of carrying concealed weapons. Heller acknowledged the charge without demur, pleading guilty. He was given a fine of $1 and costs. It is said that when the dog ran out as he passed, Heller shot and killed it, whereupon Samuel Henschen, who resented the uncivilized killing of his canine, filed the affidavit against Heller for carrying concealed weapons. The arrest was made by Constable Frank Smith.

Hiding a mother's care.

Fit for a lady to wear;
This is her graduate dress
Fashioned with comfort and care.

Stitches that burrow and hide,
This is the dress that will grace

The reception tendered by the graduates of the Decatur high school to their many friends at the library hall Friday evening at the close of the commencement exercises was a most lovely one. The two assembly rooms on the lower floor were thrown into one broad hall and the rooms were thronged with those who mingled after extending their congratulations and best wishes to those who stand on the threshold of life. Streamers of purple and gold were twined about the pillars of the halls, and were used in many other ways in beautifying the reception room. A little alcove where punch was served during the evening was turned into a bower of foliage and flowers. Music was provided by the Misses Martha Kettler and Naomi Niblick. The company was served with refreshments of ice cream and cake, those serving being six young freshmen girls—Mary Pittton, Eda Butler, Lillian Rice, Ruth Parrish and Winifred Sowers.

O. P. Edwards, accompanied by John Warner and Leon Edwards, came from Leipsic, Ohio, last evening by automobile and were guests over night at the John Niblick home. They returned this morning. Mrs. Edwards, who had been visiting here several days, returned with them.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Hensley and daughter, Veda, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dunn, and Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Vance were among those from this city who attended the Shriners' musical at Ft. Wayne Friday evening.

The members of the friendly Few club were entertained in a royal way by Mrs. Leo Wilhelm. This is a sewing club, but instead of each bringing their fancy work this time, they sewed for Mrs. Wilhelm, and her work was lightened by the making of several garments, after which she served a tempting lunch.

Ernest Bebout, the son of Abe Bebout, and Leota Butcher, daughter of Elbridge Butcher, were united in marriage Saturday morning at Decatur by the Rev. D. A. J. Brown of Bobo. Both of these young people are from well known farmers' homes in this county and start in their married life with the well wishes of many friends.

O. P. Edwards, accompanied by John Warner and Leon Edwards, came from Leipsic, Ohio, last evening by automobile and were guests over night at the John Niblick home. They returned this morning. Mrs. Edwards, who had been visiting here several days, returned with them.
