Passenger Train No. 20 on the G. R. & I., known as the Northern Limited, due here at 1:30 a. m., met with a wreck this morning at Portland, and for several hours traffic was delayed because of the mix-up. The train was bound southward, and owing to some misunderstanding a freight was standing on the main track and the passenger train, which, luckily, was running at a very slow speed, crashed into the rear end and several of the freight cars were badly damaged. No one was injured on either train. The track was torn up for several feet and all trains during the remainder of the day were forced to pass on the side track, until the same was again repaired. The cause is unknown, and it is hard to tell just who is to blame.
