Sound Separator LOGIC

So many claims are made by competing separator manufacturers that it may seem difficult to decide which machine will give you the best service.

Here is just one fact that it will pay you to keep in mind.

DE LAVAL

CREAM SEPARATORS are used exclusively by 98 per cent of the world's creameries.

There can be no better recommendation for the DE LAVAL than the fact that the men who make the separation of milk a business use the DE LAVAL to the practical exclusion of all other separators.

The more you come to know about cream separators the better you will understand the superiority of the DE LAVAL.

Wonderful Invention

ONE PINT OF MILK MERGED INTO ONE POUND OF BUTTER

Never before in the history of the world has a household article been discovered that will be so much benefit to Families that have to work for their living. Just stop and think a little. Machine has just been invented that will merge one pint of milk into one pound of butter in two minutes. This wonderful discovery must surely be a godsend to those who have to pay such high prices for food. A pint of milk weighs a pound and costs on an average 4 cents. This wonderful invention merges it into one pound of butter in two minutes, producing a product you cannot tell from the best creamery butter, gets just as hard, tastes sweeter and is used for the same purposes, and only costs 4 cents a pound. No chemicals or drugs are used, it is absolutely pure food. This almost takes your breath away, but it is the truth, just the same. This machine is being manufactured in Indianapolis, Ind., and you must write to the Company there and get their circulars. They will sell you one on trial. The price is $3 and they want some one to be agent for the sale of it in every town. Now write to the Family Butter Merger Co., Indianapolis, Ind., and they will send you their circulars and pictures of the machine and tell you all about it. Don't fail to do this. Send your name and address to them on a postal card. They will send you the illustrated circulars free.

If you are looking for some kind of business, write to this company at once. They pay Agents $18.00 a week to start with or one hundred per cent commission, and will give any honest person credit. Every family will buy one of these machines, for it is the greatest money saver on Earth. FAMILY BUTTER MERGER CO., Court and Ogden St. Indianapolis, Ind.

WHEN THE TIME CAME

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Mrs. Sarah Drew was a New Hampshire widow. She owned a farm, and Jake White was her hired man. He was a good man and a good worker and had been with the family for three years when Farmer White died. It will never be known to outsiders whether Mr. White, when told that he was to be gathered to his fathers, called Jake to his bedside and said:

"I must go, but I am consoled by the thought that I leave Sarah in good hands. Give her a year or so to mourn my loss and then propose matrimony."

Three years went by and Jake had not spoken. There were times when he thought he was encouraged to speak out and other times when he was prepared to come in from the field after a hard day's work and learn that the widow was engaged to the sewing machine agent who had that route. The widow, too, had thoughts. It was more than once whispered about that Jake was in love with this or that farmer girl, and she had come to feel that his loss would be a double one.

Mrs. Drew had been a widow for four years and Jake White had done bushels and bushels of thinking when winter came on. When the foot or more of snow which heralded the change of season had got packed down on the highway Providence put it into Jake's head to get out the big hand sled and propose a ride down the long and winding hill. Providence didn't go so far as to put the widow next to what would happen, but it meant well by both. It had been a long time, and Providence meant to hurry things up a bit. Half a dozen of the neighbors were to take part in that moonlight sleigh ride, but for one reason or another all backed out, leaving the two alone. Probably this was another trick on the part of Providence.

About the time the sled was drawn out for the glide Elder Henderson, who lived just beyond the foot of the hill, was saying to his wife: "Martha, I bought ten bushels of taters of the Widder White yesterday."

"We'll need 'em all before spring," was the reply.

"I was goin' for 'em tomorrow, but it's such a nice night that I dunno but I'll yoke up the oxen and jog along now."

"Might as well, I guess, but look out that the taters don't get frostbit. You know how nightheaded you are in the moonlight. If you hear sleigh bells you'd better give 'em the road."

"Nightheaded!" he indignantly sniffed. "Don't you go to makin' out that I'm a hundred years old. Why, I could pick up a pin on the darkest night you ever saw. I've got just the same rights as anybody, and I'm dinged if I give more'n half the road."

The oxen were yoked in due time and started out. There were bags to hold the potatoes and blankets to cover the bags, and any old sport would have given odds of two to one that the elder, the oxen and his cargo would arrive at the top of the hill right end up after a climb of twenty minutes. The wagon would have been made without taking Providence into consideration, and the old sport would have lost.

The Widow White was bundled up and seated on the sled. In fact, she was strapped on. Jake sat close behind her, dragging the foot that was to steer the sled a straight course. As they were ready to start it came over him to speak of his love. A feeling came to the widow that he was going to, but the time was not ripe. Providence figures those things down to minutes and seconds. As Jake shut his mouth on his words and started the sled Elder Henderson, near the foot of the hill, started singing a hymn. He not only loved the sound of his singing, but he thought the oxen ought to be encouraged. His voice came floating up the hill, and as Jake caught it he said:

"Mrs. White, that's Elder Henderson."

"Yes."

"He's probably coming after those potatoes with his oxen and sled."

"Well?"

"He'll be in the middle of the road, and as our sled is already getting away from control there's going to be a smashup. I want to say to you that I have loved you for the last three years and to ask you if you will marry me?"

"Oh, Jake?"

"It's the elder and the oxen for sure. Yes or no?"

"It's so sudden!"

"Right in the middle of the road, and we'll be in them in ten seconds."

"Must I?"

"Five seconds more!"

"Then—yes!"

Elder Henderson was marching ahead of the oxen, a hero leading the way. He was struck and sent flying and his tune cut short. Then the sled struck the oxen and flung them into the ditch and made a long jump over the other and a minute later was at the foot of the hill and Jake was saying:

NEW PROCTOR BILL

rapid growth will profit. This will not be in the interest of good legislation, as the average member of the rural county or district is careful when it comes to going on record with his vote, and when he goes wrong he usually hears something drop from home. This is not true of the members coming from the centers where selfish business interests too often takes the place of a devotion to good government. The country may send their farmers, but they are a pretty good kind of farmers and seldom go wrogn even in the Indiana legislature.

USED CARBOLIC ACID.

William Sellemeyer of near Magley was in town today on business. Mr. Sellemeyer has been carrying his right hand in a bandage the past two weeks. Some time ago a pimple appeared on his finger, causing much annoyance. After failing to find relief in the appliance of burnt alum, he tried carbolic acid. The bottle had been unused for some time and crystals had formed in it, the strength probably becoming more concentrated. A few drops were poured on the bandage and the next day a very sore hand, which has failed to heal, was the result.

Mrs. William R. Woods of Wren, Ohio, is the guest of her son, Loyal Woods, and wife, and her new granddaughter, which was born Monday night. The babe has been named Laura Martha, for its two grandmothers.

Horse Colic

For the immediate cure of this sudden and dread foe of horseflesh, nothing has been found to equal Hoover's X-Ray Healing Oil. One dose, if given in time, will effect a cure. Among the grateful owners of horses who have saved them with X-Ray are the following, all residing at Osian, Ind.:
C. D. Carr, Justice of the Peace—"I can heartily recommend X-Ray for colic in horses."
Charles Clark, Farmer—"I cheerfully recommend it."
C. W. Johnson, Farmer—"I used it in a severe case of horse colic and it produced immediate results."

J. L. Valentine, Farmer, L. F. Wilson, Trucking and Coal, Harry Bunn, Auctioneer, and Levi T. Fryback, Livestockman, are equally as strong in their praises. If you are a horse owner protect yourself and your animals by having a bottle always on hand.
